NEW YORK
Mastica is elastic and tenacious, admits of expansion and contraction. Putty becomes hard and brittle. Broken glass more easily removed without breaking of other glass as occurs with hard putty. Lasts longer than putty. Easy to apply.

ERECTED AT IRVINGTON-ON-HUDSON, NEW YORK

When it comes down to real facts there is no question about superiority of the LUTTON HOUSE. Here is a case where the Owner was simply tired of the appearance of the greenhouse which we removed and replaced at the left. In its place we erected our modern house; now the Owner can see his favorite roses blooming inside the house from his library window. You can not talk upon any other construction to this owner as he thought he was getting the best when he built the old houses some few years ago. We have many more convincing arguments like this to place before you.

Two Q's, Or The Quality Question. An Oil Sale With A Greenhouse Moral

YESTERDAY, I was waiting for a train down at Glen Cove, and to kill time, strolled into a nearby garage and sat down to smoke with Joe, the boss. As the first ashes were just about to drop off our cigars, in comes a hustling, bustling salesman and strikes Joe for an order of oil.

First thing that salesman did, was to try and find out what Joe usually paid for his oil—then he simply made a price a few cents under it.

Price, price, price was his entire talk. Quality seemed an entirely secondary matter.

Joe didn't buy.

We were just in the midst of a discussion on tires when another oil salesman came in leisurely. First crack out of the box he said, "I understand you have 10 cars. You must use about so many gallons (forgot the amount) of oil a year don't you?" "Yes."

"Well, you use too much."

Then followed a discussion of oil values and the comparative oiling and lasting qualities of various grades.

Numerous tests with prominent cars were mentioned and accurate facts stated as to the actual results. A recent engine endurance run of 300 hours made by one of them without stopping, was referred to in which this salesman's highest grade oil had been used. After this quality talk—then and not till then, was price mentioned.

It had all been a question of what his oils would do; their goodness—their quality.

Joe bought two barrels and willingly paid ten cents more a gallon than he ever had before.

Why did he do it? Simply because that salesman had shown him that cheaper oils cost more, because you have to use more, and results are less satisfactory.

"When quality goes down, to keep things balanced, quantity must go up. Don't forget that.

As I sat there listening to that most convincing sales talk, it occurred to me how many growers are today buying their greenhouses entirely on a price basis. For instance, this Spring we lost an order for two big western houses, just because our price was a few hundred dollars higher.

Price sold that order—not quality.

The other day the sales manager and I dropped around to see the houses. It wasn't a difficult matter to figure the amount of iron in the houses and we soon found out that the actual weight of the iron frames was a third less than we would think of putting in our houses—in spite of the fact that this concern's houses have frequently blown down. Our Iron Frame ones never have.

Knowing the contract price for the houses, we figured it out that Lord & Burnham could have furnished those same materials for several hundred dollars less.

Our price was based on one thing—our competitor's was for entirely different proposition.

That man had actually paid a good round price for those houses, and had allowed himself to be jollied into thinking he had a bargain.

It all boils right down to the fact; that you pretty generally get what you pay for, and no more.

With the two big factories we have, the thousands and thousands of dollars of work we turn out, and our years of experience in building greenhouses and figuring the actual costs; if, with such a tremendous advantage over other concerns, they offer to sell you a cheaper house, it's because of either of two reasons; the materials are decidedly poorer or there is a good deal less iron in the framework.

There is absolutely no other way you can account for it.

For the kind and quality of house Lord & Burnham build—no concern in the country can build it for any less and make a dollar.

Of course, we make money—that's why we can make so good a house. If you can't make money—you can't make good. You know that!

When you compare our figures with the other fellow's—bear in mind the two oil salesmen—how one sold any old quality at any old price—and how the other, sold the one quality at the one price.

LILY BULBS

Horseshoe Brand lily bulbs are produced and distributed on a broad principle that is very easy to understand.

The efficiency of every bulb depends upon its power to produce flowers under varying and often trying conditions.

The moment a lily bulb loses its strength it becomes useless. This means not alone the loss of a bulb but the loss in expense of production, and the cost of replacement.

The risk attached to lily bulbs originates from nature and is beyond the control of man, so the best you can do is to minimize it, by securing bulbs which will give the best average in flowering results.

A lily bulb of doubtful origin, cheap in price and unknown in quality, is not only a bad investment in itself, but it cripples results of far more value than the cost of several bulbs.

Horseshoe Brand Giganteum have proved their average reliability ever since they have been marketed. Nothing is left undone that man can do to improve them.

An excellent way to get an idea of their value as compared with other brands is to witness the deep satisfaction of those who use them here and abroad; and especially of the largest growers who pay strict attention to results.

Eighty-five per cent of the large growers use Horseshoe Brand lily bulbs and most large growers use them entirely. There's a reason.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Cattleyas

All summer flowering cattleyas should have a good period of rest before they are given any new compost. When their new growth just begins pushing through, then is the best time for any repotting. Taken in hand at this stage they soon become re-established. Use either clear osmunda fibre, or live sphagnum moss in equal parts with the osmunda fibre, as both are good. Insure good perfect drainage by giving baskets or pans half their depth of clean crocks and charcoal. After they are potted place in a shady part of house and keep rather close for a short time. Maintain sufficient moisture in the air by damping down the benches and walks two or three times a day. Great care in watering will be necessary until the plants become well established. When they have taken hold gradually reduce the shading until by the end of October they will be under clear glass. Syringe on fine days during the morning and keep a night temperature of about 55 degrees.

Courtesy of W. A. Manda

Care of Eucharis

These plants under favorable conditions produce several crops of bloom in a season. There is no doubt as to the great value of eucharis as a producer of high grade and high priced cut material. All plants that have finished their flowering should be given a liberal amount of water at the roots with plenty of moisture in the atmosphere until every new leaf has reached its full development. When this growth is completed they should have a period of from four to six weeks' rest by gradually withholding water until the leaves begin to flag slightly when they should have just enough water to freshen them up again. This treatment should be followed up for a month or six weeks, but be sure to give them enough water to keep the leaves plump or otherwise they will be injured. Now is a good time to make a new planting of eucharis. Plants that are in 3 or 4-inch pots will make fine stock. For a compost use clean sod soil, not too old, and well decomposed cow manure in equal parts.

Cyclamen

Plants intended for Christmas trade will require plenty of attention from this out. Give them a bench near the glass and keep reducing your shading gradually from now on. Watch the pots so that they will not become too dry or too wet. It is not supposed that the soil in your pots is to be soaking wet continuously or on the other hand to become so dry as to cause the plants to wilt. Where the pots are nicely filled with roots they will take some liquid manure once a week now, and later on twice a week. When the nights make it possible keep the temperature at about 55 degrees and from 10 to 15 degrees higher on all bright days.

Hydrangeas

The pot-grown hydrangeas are those which we must depend upon for Easter, 1914. Their growth will now be practically completed, but in order to assist in ripening the wood the water supply should be gradually reduced. Stock grown in the field should be lifted any time about the end of this month, care being taken to preserve as many of the roots as possible. They can be potted in any good rose soil and given a thorough soaking, after which give just enough water so they will become well established in their pots without starting the buds, and then they can be given the same treatment as for the pot-grown ones. They can be kept outdoors until heavy frost is threatened when they should be placed under protection of some kind such as a deep frame.

Solanums

Plants that have been in the field during the summer and have had proper care should by this time have grown into bushy plants with fine foliage and berries. Now is a good time to lift them. They can be potted into 5 or 6-inch pots which will make very desirable sizes. Give them a compost of fibrous loam three parts, and well-rotten manure one part. In order to do well and color up their berries they will need good drainage, so see that every pot is supplied with plenty of crocks. For a week after they are potted they should be placed on a bench where they can have some shade and by keeping them moist at the roots with two or three syringings a day they will soon become established when they should have the full sun. Every once in a while go over them and give more room between the plants and turn them around. Give plenty of ventilation whenever possible and keep a temperature of about 55 degrees at night.

Winter Acacias and Genistas

Acacias are usually in the best demand around Easter time, so it will be necessary to give them a cool house. Any house that stands anywhere around 40 degrees at night will do very well. Give them careful waterings during the winter and they should come through in good shape. Where genistas are wanted for Easter you can give them a further clipping back. These can be kept just clear of freezing and they will be all right for Easter.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Care of Carnations; Forcing Spanish Iris; Hardy Stock for Spring Sales; Poinsettias in Pans; Timely Propagating; Oxalis.

BUDDLEIA DAVIDII

(Syn. B. variabilis)

During the opening months of the year 1910 I was privileged to contribute to the columns of HORTICULTURE a series of articles entitled "Plant Novelties from China." It is pleasing to note that many of the novelties there discussed are today to be found growing in the majority of the leading gardens, parks and nurseries of eastern North America and of the Pacific slope. In the article mentioned the subject of this note is dealt with on page 146, Vol. XI. (Jan. 29, 1910). At the exhibition which opened in the Massachusetts Horticultural Society Hall on Friday, 12th inst., noteworthy examples of this Buddleia appeared in the stands of several exhibitors. Undoubtedly this shrub is destined to become in the immediate future a popular garden plant and the explanation of this is self-evident. The plant grows freely in any ordinary garden soil, reuires very little attention, is free from pests, and produces a wealth of delightfully fragrant flowers at a season when the blossoms on nearly every other shrub are past. The color of the flower is distinct, being most attractive, shading from soft mauve to rich violet-purple. The plant is hardier than anticipated, safely withstanding the winters as far north as Bar Harbor, Maine. True, with zero weather, it kills to the ground, but this merely obviates the necessity of severe pruning which otherwise is absolutely essential. Cuttings of half (or three parts) ripe wood inserted now in pots in gentle heat, root readily, and furnish flowering plants for the next season if potted off singly and planted out the end of May.

The specific name variabilis by which this shrub is best known, very appropriately discloses the character of the plant. In habit, time of flowering, size and color of the flower, it is exceedingly variable and of the many forms met with the following are the most distinct:

"Veitchiana":—Habit erect, shoots quadrangular, panicle fairly dense, flowers bright mauve with an orange-yellow throat.

"Superba":—Habit and shoots as in foregoing, foliage relatively thick, slightly wrinkled above, panicle densely crowded with pale rose-purple flowers.

"Magnifica":—Habit erect-spreading, shoots quadrangular, panicle up to 30 inches long, somewhat flattened-round, flowers rich violet-purple with margins of petals reflexed.

"Wilsonii":—Habit erect-spreading, shoots cylindrical, laxly arching, panicles pendulous up to 40 inches long, less densely crowded with flowers which are pale rose with an orange colored throat and larger than in other varieties.

The variety Veitchiana is the first to open its flowers, this taking place about the end of July; the others follow in succession and continue the season up to the time frosts appear.

This Buddleia and its varieties are riverside shrubs in central and western China where they are natives, and in consequence require an abundance of water during the growing and flowering season. In our gardens and parks these plants may be employed as ornamental shrubs in the border or as bedding plants for midsummer and autumn work. For the brook and pondside they are delightful subjects. Planted in such position in combination with Sorbaria arborea and its varieties, which blossom at the same season and have arching shoots, pinnate leaves and large paniculate trusses of pure white flowers, the effect is everything the most [illegible] for.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Black Spot

As the season advances, the danger from this disease will be greater; consequently, much greater care will have to be taken towards its prevention, for should spot be allowed to gain a foothold it will require heroic efforts on the part of the grower to rid the plants of it. And the plants will receive a setback, no matter how carefully the cure may be applied. Sometimes, as it often happens, the cause for spot may be traced to the fact that the plants receive much more water than they should, after cutting heavily. It is much better to keep them on the dry side a least bit, thus allowing no surplus moisture to accumulate in the soil. Not that we would recommend drying the plants. This would be ruinous. Then watch carefully for the appearance of spot. Pick off all affected leaves and burn them at once. Leaves that are touching the surface of the soil in the bench will usually be the very first to become diseased, therefore it is well to keep these picked off, as we have time and time again suggested. Proper ventilation will also be a great preventive, for when the plants are chilled mornings with damp cold air that should be passing out through the partly opened ventilator, and a little steam to help it move, they cannot be expected to be in the best of health. Another great trouble is that the plants remain wet over night, because they had not been shook after syringing. This is probably the greatest cause. Always after the plants have been syringed, shake them well so that all the water that may be standing on the foliage will be dislodged. Then the last thing at night it is well to blow a little air-slacked lime underneath the plants. This lime should be perfectly dry, or it will not be as effective as should be. Do not use too much strength in blowing the lime. The ideal way is to blow the lime just under the plants and let it slowly rise among them. If the bellows are worked too hard the lime will be blown all across the benches and out into the walk on the other side, where it will have but little effect on the dampness of the house.

Timing the Crops

It is not a very good policy to force the plants very much at this time of the year. We do, however, try to make the plants give their first crop before the chrysanthemums come flooding the markets. Sometimes the prices received for the roses in the chrysanthemum season will be greater than those received earlier, but often they will be less, and we have found it pays to be a little off crop while the chrysanthemums are in. Then, too, we are more sure of a winter supply, for the roses have more chance to come back than they would if the first crop is cut off late in the fall. With Beauties, it is very difficult to arrange the crops as you would Killarneys or other roses, for they will not behave themselves as they should, and will flower when they feel like it. We never try to dictate to the plants. Just simply give them ideal conditions for growing and then let them do the rest. Above all things we would never advise anyone to try to hold the Beauty back. Once they receive a check of any kind it will take them a long time to pick up again.

Tying

This should not be neglected the least bit as all the shoots that are not tied and are allowed to lie around among the other tied growths, are very likely to go blind and will be of no use to the plant besides being a loss to the grower. Keep right after the tying, especially among the Beauty plants. Killarneys and such require but little attention in this respect and the cost of production is greatly reduced thereby. But with the Beauties it is different and once they are allowed to lie around they will always show the effect of this. Of course we do not mean the time they are set out, for then it does them good, but after they reach the second and the third wire things are different. By keeping right after them all the time it is a very simple matter to keep them straight, but after they have been allowed to go their own way for a while, it will be quite a task to bring them around to something like system again.

Tying and Red Spider

These are so different from one another that it will seem strange at first to see the two subjects linked together. And yet it will be found that tying when properly done will be a great help in keeping the red spider out. Do not bunch the plants up when tying, but separate them as much as possible, thus giving every shoot all the chance in the world to get a cleansing bath every time the hose is brought around. This will also have its effect on growth, as will be noticed, for the light will be well distributed and the plants will all have an equal show. Black spot will also be prevented in a way, for there will be no place for the moisture to condense and start it.

Liquid Manure

Before many days go by the liquid manure outfit will be put into use again, and therefore it would be a very good idea to see that all is in perfect working order and that a good supply of manure and stuff that is to be used in making it is on hand, where it can be gotten on a moment's notice. A very good plan is to have a suitable sized shed built over the tank, and keep all the materials, fertilizers, etc., right there. It is an easy matter then to see what there is on hand and no running all over the place will be necessary to disclose this information. Keep a liberal supply of plant food on hand all the time. It pays in the long run.

A good motto

That little remark in Mr. Ruzicka's rose notes this week, "We never try to dictate to the plants," has a very suggestive ring. "Just simply give them ideal conditions and then let them do the rest" tells the route to success in a very few words. It is probable that more lost crops have been ruined by more hopes blasted by reckless "dictation" than by all other causes combined. Some varieties, like some men, will stand a deal more of it without hitting back, but they all have their limit of endurance and the successful grower is the one who always keeps a long distance this side of the limit.

Missionaries for the trade

It is gratifying to note in the columns of the daily papers the rapidly increasing number of local flower shows being held here, there and everywhere at this season of the year. It all denotes a growing interest in flower gardening which cannot but result in larger demands on the gardener, florist, seedsman and nurseryman. We do not think the trade at large fully realize how much this means to them or to what extent they might severally develop their business by extending every possible encouragement to these affairs even though they may be very insignificant and even primitive from the standpoint of the professional. Such organizations as the Medford Horticultural Society whose recent exhibition is described in this paper, the Houghton Horticultural Society, the Andover (Mass.) Horticultural Society, the Home and School Garden Association of Methuen, Mass., the Flower Civic Association of Ridley Park, Pa., the Greystone (R. I.) Horticultural Society, scores of Village Improvement Societies and similar enterprises to interest school children and encourage rivalry in home gardening—all these are really doing splendid missionary work for the florist and it is the part of wisdom to propagate and nurture them in every way possible.

The convention's aftermath

The Minneapolis Tribune for August 28, contained the following editorial:

"Hundreds of people have visited the exhibition flower garden near the national guard armory, planted by Theodore Wirth, superintendent of parks, with the assistance of the Society of American Florists. The garden represents the cream of the product of florists' gardens all over America, and forms, at the present height of its beauty, a notable demonstration school to amateur gardeners. Among visitors to the garden have been many men and women who in the last few years have become so interested in floriculture as to make many portions of Minneapolis beauty spots of bloom where once there were bare lawns or even desert tracts that offended the eye. These visitors, for the most part experimenters and novices in floriculture, have gained more flower knowledge from their visit to this beautiful garden than ever could have been absorbed from books or seed catalogues. They have gone to the florists' garden not once but half a dozen times.

"So The Tribune offers the suggestion to the Minneapolis park board that it make this remarkable school of floriculture an established feature of its work for beautifying the city. The expense of maintaining such a garden, with attendant instruction in planting, cultivating and care by an experienced florist, would be a small item when the great benefits are considered. The garden spot itself is admirably located for the convenience of the whole city. The start has been made, and The Tribune suggests that at its meeting, Wednesday, Sept. 3, the park board give this school of floriculture a place in its program for next year and the years to come."

This is certainly a high tribute to the S. A. F., an endorsement of its work and influence as appreciative as it is rare. When the Society shall have reached that stage when it will be in order to ask Congress to extend its privileges under the national charter, testimonials such as the foregoing will mean something. It must be a matter of great pride to every loyal earnest member of the S. A. F. to feel that his Society has left in Minneapolis so sweet and lasting a remembrance of its visit and so potent an influence for the advancement of horticulture in the Northwest.

THE RELATION OF LIGHT TO GREENHOUSE CULTURE.

Bulletin 144 of the Massachusetts Agricultural Experiment Station is a very interesting 40-page pamphlet by Dr. George E. Stone on "The Relation of Light to Greenhouse Culture." The "summary" on the concluding pages of the bulletin is as follows:

The experiments described in this bulletin not only have a bearing on the physiology of crops, but also on greenhouse construction and management.

Light has an important influence on the configuration of plants. Since most of the plant energy is derived from the air through sunlight, the optimum light conditions are important, and there is a marked difference in plants as regards their light requirements.

During the short winter days many greenhouse crops do not obtain sufficient light, therefore any factor in greenhouse construction which will increase the amount of light is important.

Lack of light is responsible for many greenhouse diseases; on the other hand, too intense light may prove harmful in some instances.

The old type of greenhouse was crude in construction, especially as regards light. The modern tendency is to build larger houses, to use stronger material casting less shade, and larger and better quality glass.

Large houses can be constructed relatively more cheaply and managed more easily because there is a less rapid change of atmospheric conditions, etc., which helps to eliminate many greenhouse troubles.

Morning light is more intense than afternoon light, our experiments showing a difference of 10%, and ranging as high as 30% for some months. This difference is not constant from day to day, from month to month or from year to year.

The difference between morning and afternoon light has a practical bearing on the location of greenhouses as regards points of compass.

The location of a house as regards points of the compass has a bearing on the practice of spraying plants, the yield of the crop, and to a certain extent on fungous infection.

To obtain the best results in a house running east and west, the house should be from 15 to 30° north of east. This enables the plant to take advantage of the more intense morning light and the crop can be syringed with less danger from infection.

The difference in morning and afternoon light may be shown by various chemical methods, as well as by the growth of trees, and of crops of cucumbers in north and south houses. Other things being equal, a crop will show greater development on an east than a west exposure.

There is considerable difference in the light transmitting properties of glass. Second quality, double thick greenhouse glass transmits 18% less than No. 1, double thick, and the third quality double thick transmits 33% less than first quality and 15% less than second quality.

An irregular surface, bubbles, etc., in glass act as lenses and affect the even diffusion of light.

New glass is slightly superior to used glass. The deterioriation from dirt and other factors is much less than 1% per annum.

The more nearly the angle of the roof coincides with the right angle of the sun's rays the more light is transmitted.

Relatively steep roofs are superior to flat roofs for transmitting light. Records made in February show that a house with a roof angle of 46° gave 18% more light than one with a 32° angle roof.

The reflection of light from surfaces varies greatly. In our experiments we found aluminum bronze to constitute the best reflector of light.

The practice of lapping glass causes some loss of light, an average of 11% in our tests.

There appear to be no important differences in the light in a greenhouse at different distances from the glass, practically the same light being obtained at 5 feet as at 30 feet. The light to be had directly under the glass, however, varies in intensity owing to the irregularity of the surface.

The loss of light from glass may vary from 13 to 36% or more, depending on the quality and condition of the glass, and many other factors.

Double glazed houses are much inferior to those glazed with a single layer of glass.

ODONTIODA CHARLESWORTHII.

This is one of the bi-generic hybrids which created a decided sensation in England when it first appeared about five years ago. Its parents are Cochlioda Noezliana and Odontoglossum Harryanum. The color of the flowers is scarlet red. Hybridists have been busy with this phenomenal flower, crossing it back with one of its parents, Odontoglossum Harryanum, hoping to get more of the character of the latter into the color of the progeny. Odontioda Brewii is one of these crosses which has flowered within a few weeks for the first time, but, although it shows some most extraordinary characteristics the solid unbroken coloring is again perpetuated, contrary to all preconception of what might be expected.

THE GOLDEN ROD.

This flower is fuller of the sun
  Than any our pale north can show;
It has the heart of August won,
  And scatters wide the warmth and glow
Kindled at summer's midnoon blaze,
  Where gentians of September bloom,
Along October's leaf-strewn ways
  And through November's paths of gloom.

Herald of autumn's reign, it sets
  Gay bonfires blazing round the fields;
Rich autumn pays in gold his debts
  For tenancy that summer yields.
Beauty's slow harvest now comes on,
  And promise with fulfillment won;
The heart's vast hope does but begin,
  Filled with ripe seeds of sweetness gone.

Because its myriad glimmering plumes
  Like a great army's stir and wave;
Because its gold in billows blooms
  The poor man's barren walks to lave;
Because its sun-shaped blossoms show
  How souls receive the light of God,
And unto earth give back that glow,—
  I thank Him for the golden-rod.

THE MUSK PLANT ODOR.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

Dear Sir:—I believe Mimulus moschatus, in its natural location, is always found on the borders of sheltered brooks and edges of moist ground. In a damp, close greenhouse the plant has quite a strong odor like musk. I have noticed when the ventilators were raised, on a clear, bright day, the odor, which is very volatile, would disappear. When the plant is near an open door, the odor is scarcely perceptible.

FRANK BUFFINGTON.

Fall River, Mass.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

There can be but little doubt that the musk plant, Mimulus moschatus, has lost its scent in the majority of instances, and it is only by careful selection of the most odoriferous plants that a desirable strain can be had. In America, so far as my knowledge goes, there is not a large sale for this plant in which case there would not be enough plants in one person's hands to select from. Twenty-five years ago I remember that a five or six-inch plant was sufficient to scent a whole room and nearly a decade later when I assisted to grow them by the thousands for the London market, we found that we had to keep only the scented ones for stock plants, and to propagate from cuttings only, and not from seed.

In this country I have observed that during the morning early in the summer the plants give the strongest odor and revel in a moist and shady position, but later when the weather gets too hot one has to smell at least twice to catch any odor at all. Harrison's variety which I have not seen in this country is much to be preferred as a pot plant and is only to be obtained from roots or cuttings.

VERNON T. SHERWOOD.

"CROWN GALL" ON MARGUERITES

Editor HORTICULTURE:

I would be much obliged and interested if one of your readers could tell me what to do in the case of plants affected with crown gall, or what is called, I believe in the absence of accurate scientific information, Bacterium tumifaciens? With me this gall has affected marguerite Mrs. F. Sander and Queen Alexandra at the point where the plants were stopped, and grows as large as a marble. I have tried cutting well back and dusting with sulphur but to no purpose; the gall forms again on top of the cut. Both pot and field-grown plants are affected and the young plants appeared to be perfectly healthy in the first instance.

Yours very truly,
VERNON T. SHERWOOD.

At the Syracuse (N. Y.) Fair, last week, the Julius Roehrs Company, of Rutherford, N. J., showed a carload of tropical plants, together with dwarf evergreens and bay trees, which Superintendent Vick termed the finest display of the kind ever exhibited in this section of the country.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

NEW YORK STATE FEDERATION OF FLORAL CLUBS.

There was an enthusiastic meeting, September 11, 1913, about forty members being present, the principal business being, of course, to resume preparations to wage an active campaign to secure the appropriation for glasshouses for experimental work in floriculture and vegetable culture. It was decided this time, to ask for an appropriation of $75,000 instead of $60,000 the amount asked for last spring.

The present officers were elected unanimously and President Kasting appointed the same committees as were serving in 1913. The important discussions were taken part in by F. R. Pierson, W. F. Kasting, Arthur Cowee, Charles H. Vick, Dr. E. A. Bates, Prof. Patch of Cornell University, and others. I consider this meeting a very satisfactory one and it proves that the florists of the state are awakened to their opportunities, and plans were outlined towards making the State Federation of Floral Clubs, a much stronger organization than it is at present. Treasurer Adams of Buffalo, in his report, showed a very substantial balance in the treasury with all bills paid.

At the conclusion of the meeting, President Kasting entertained the officers with a dinner at the Onandago Hotel. Some of the largest exhibitors were Lord & Burnham Co., F. R. Pierson Co., H. A. Dreer, James Vick & Sons, Arthur Cowee and F. C. Thomann.

JOHN YOUNG, Secretary.

Denouncing the housing facilities for horticultural exhibits at the fair as an "insult as well as a joke," the New York State Federation of Floral Clubs recently appointed a committee to confer with the commissioner about getting a new $200,000 building for the 1914 exposition.

Words were not minced at the annual meeting of the Federation in the Grange Building on the fair grounds.

It was emphatically asserted that the elaborate floral display this year, the best in the history of the fair, was due entirely to the hustling qualities and wide trade acquaintance of Superintendent Charles H. Vick of Rochester, who induced some of the most prominent growers in the country to send exhibits. Warning was issued that unless adequate facilities were provided, the leading flower growers of the State would not be represented at the 1914 State Fair.

Societies Back of Movement.

Behind the action taken recently stand the organized floricultural interests of the State, consisting of the New York Florists' Club, the Buffalo Florists' Club, the Rochester Florists' Association, the Tuxedo Horticultural Society, the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association, the Dutchess County Horticultural Society, the Albany and Utica Floral Clubs and the Syracuse Rose Society.

In efforts to secure a new horticultural building the florists have the support of the fruit and vegetable growers of the State, both of which were represented at the meeting held recently.

Before the close of the fair a committee of eight, two each from the State Federation of Floral Clubs, the Western Horticultural Association, the State Fruit and Vegetable Growers' Associations will meet with the Fair Commission.

The professional florists of the State represented investments aggregating more than $9,000,000, President William F. Kasting, postmaster of Buffalo, told the Federation representatives at the meeting held recently. In the industry over 25,000 men were employed.

Better Facilities Needed.

On account of the magnitude of the interests involved, he thought, the State of New York should provide more adequate facilities for floral exhibits. Vegetable and fruit growers were as much interested in securing a new building among the florists, it was said.

Frank R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, one of the largest exhibitors, thought that the fair management was not fully alive to the importance of the horticultural interests which instead of being the end should be made one of the chief features of the New York State Exposition.

"The present buildings for housing the fruit, flower and vegetable displays are a joke," Mr. Pierson said.

"An insult as well!" one of the representative florists exclaimed.

Would Be Great Attraction.

The floral exhibits, both inside a suitable building and on the grounds, could be made one of the strongest drawing cards of the fair, Mr. Pierson thought. Professional growers would be glad to take over the work of the floral decoration of the fair grounds without cost to the State.

Superintendent Charles H. Vick said that unless conditions are changed and a new building provided, it would be almost impossible to get large growers to exhibit at future expositions.

Greenhouses at Cornell.

President Kasting announced that strenuous efforts would be made to secure the passage of a bill for the erection of large greenhouses at Cornell University. A bill for this purpose, carrying an appropriation of $60,000, was passed by the last legislature, but was vetoed by the governor. It is now proposed to ask for a $75,000 appropriation.

Addresses were made by Earl A. Bates of this city and Prof. E. C. Patch of Cornell University.—Syracuse Post-Standard.

The Indiana State Florists' Association held a meeting at Smith & Young's, Indianapolis on September 11.

NEW JERSEY FLORICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The regular monthly meeting of this society was held on Friday evening, Sept. 12th. A visit was made by some of the members to the N. J. Experimental Station at New Brunswick, where the different results obtained in the various soils and fertilizers were noticed with great interest. The society is awaiting the end of the year, when a bulletin will be issued by the Experimental Station, showing these various developments on different flowers especially rose and carnation treatment.

John Devan tendered his resignation as secretary as he leaves for quite a distance. We sincerely hope for his future welfare as everyone feels sorry at the loss of so capable a secretary. He was a faithful worker for the society and he takes with him the best wishes of every member.

The society voted a cup, value $10, to be given as a prize for single dahlias at the coming show, Sept. 27th and 28th, and if the exhibit be meritorious enough a second prize will be awarded. The cup is to take the place of the cup so kindly donated for the best display of gladioli, by John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, N. Y., as there was no class for gladioli on the schedule. This cup will be set aside for a special gladiolus night next year.

Awards for the exhibits of the evening were as follows: Cypripedium Harrisianum Mrs. Barr, Llewelyn Pink, 90 points. Celosia, Mrs. Chas. Hathaway, 70 points. Lord & Burnham prize, Phoenix Rochebeni, Syd ney & Austin Colgate, 90 points.

Not for Competition Seedling dahlias, Mrs. H. Graves, certificate of merit; Cypripedium Barrii, Mrs. Barr, certificate of merit; Essex County Country Club, seedling rose, vote of thanks; collection of hardy roses, Wm. Tricker, certificate of merit; vase of aster Egeon, Wm. Tricker, highly commended.

GEO. W. STRANGE, Sec'y.
216 Main St., Orange, N. J.

ST. LOUIS FLORIST CLUB.

The St. Louis Florist Club held its regular monthly meeting on Thursday afternoon, September 11, this being the meeting for installing the new officers. This with a talk on "Gasing Against White Fly," by Adolph Jaenicke brought out a large attendance.

R. J. Windler, chairman of the Publicity Committee made a long report for his committee and said they needed money to carry on this work. After a long discussion it was voted to appoint a committee of 25 and that this committee raise a fund of $2,000 to be used for publicity work by them. The installation of officers then took place with John Connon in charge and President-elect Pilcher was duly installed and took President Weber's place in the chair. This was followed by the installation of Vice-President A. Jaenicke, Secretary Beneke, Treasurer Smith and Trustee Windler. Mr. Jaenicke's lecture on "Gasing Against White Fly" was illustrated by the use of the blackboard and proved very interesting to the growers present.

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The first meeting of the season was held on Tuesday evening, September 16. The topic for consideration was the recent Convention at Minneapolis. J. K. M. L. Farquhar, P. Welch, W. J. Stewart, M. A. Patten, T. J. Grey and Eber Holmes were severally called upon and each one talked on interesting phases of the Convention, the scenes and incidents of the journey and the responsibilities resting on the Boston members for the coming year to make the Convention here as pronounced a success as that of Minneapolis. All were optimistic and enthusiastic over the outlook and when Mr. Wirth assumes his position as president next January, he will find Boston willing and well prepared to take hold with him and work zealously to make the Convention of 1914 a record breaker.

There were a few exhibits including gomphrena, Gladiolus Princeps, Gorgeous carnation, Golden Glow chrysanthemum and some very fine apples. The chrysanthemums were elegant specimens and Herman Bartsch, who brought them, spoke very highly of the usefulness and profitableness of this early variety which comes in at so opportune a time and is all cleaned off by the time the space is needed for azaleas. The flowers shown were from cuttings planted June 14. His system is to plant them three in a bunch, the bunches 8 by 10 inches apart, and grow to single stems.

Messrs. Guerineau, Miller and Barney were appointed a committee to prepare resolutions on the death of J. M. Gleason.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

President Wallace R. Pierson called the Executive Committee of the American Rose Society together last week at a meeting in New York City, going particularly into the proposed work to be done regarding the establishing of a Rose Test Garden in the city of Washington. The committee in charge of this work, appointed at the annual meeting, were as follows: Messrs. Robert Pyle, Patrick O'Mara and W. F. Gude. Mr. Gude being located in the city of Washington had followed up the matter, in touch with the men in charge of this particular work of the Department of Agriculture.

The plan as outlined is—a garden of some two acres located at Arlington Heights, Va. Mr. Mulford of the Department of Agriculture is in charge. The permanent Rose Garden Committee appointed at the August meeting of the Rose Society in Minneapolis is composed of Messrs. Alex. Cumming, Jr., Hartford, Conn.; Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis, Minn., and Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa. This committee has been requested to prepare plans for a rose garden based upon the broadest lines and to inquire into the conditions of the famous rose gardens of Europe, as well as those already established in this country, and to report back to the Executive Committee for approval.

A CONFERENCE AT LAKE MINNETONKA

Arnold Ringier, Pres. Farquhar, W. J. Stewart.
Stewart Admonishes Ringier on Smoking.

Prof. Liberty H. Bailey of Cornell University, took up with the American Rose Society the desirability of having a test garden at Ithaca which could particularly try out the varieties most fitted for the latitude of the eastern and northern section of the country. Minneapolis has started a rose garden which was visited by the Rose Society while attending the convention in that city. New Jersey, through Professor of Horticulture Blake at New Brunswick, N. J., has a like project in view. The Executive Committee directed that a letter be sent to these three parties asking for the subjection of plans to be carried out.

The prize winners at the Hartford Test Garden in June were as follows: E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.; John Cook, Baltimore, Md.; Peter Henderson & Co., New York City; Lowe & Shawyer, Uxbridge, England; A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; Shatemuc Nurseries, Barrytown, N. Y.; Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa.; Hoopes, Bro. & Thomas, West Chester, Pa. They received the silver medals and certificates of merit awarded by the American Rose Society.

Special effort will be made to increase the membership of the Rose Society. The committee appointed at Minneapolis has mostly reported a willingness to push this work broadcast.

The Secretary has been gathering from American rosarians a list of roses originated in America, the variety, name and date. The meeting directed that this work be continued, and that the result as far as obtained be published in the Annual Bulletin as an official list. These Bulletins have been called for far and near, until there are only a few samples on hand for permanent record. The next edition will have to be increased.

The committee adjourned to meet the second Monday in October.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND,
Secretary.

WESTCHESTER AND FAIRFIELD HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The regular monthly meeting of this Society was held in Doran's Hall, Greenwich, Conn., September 12th. Interest centered in the fall show which will be held in the Armory, Stamford, Conn., November 7-8th. The finished schedule is now in the printer's hands. A very interesting address on the hickory bark beetle was given by Mr. De Viver of Brouxville, N. Y. showing specimens of the beetle and the havoc it is doing to the hickory, also instructing the members how to combat this new pest which is doing so much damage in the New England states.

The prize offered by A. R. Kennedy for best collection of hardy flowers was won by A. Whitelaw, P. W. Popp being second. Other exhibits were as follows: P. W. Popp, Certificate of Merit for collection of named gladioli in 65 varieties, Thomas Ryan, honorable mention for collection of hardy grapes, O. A. Hunwick, honorable mention for egg plant fruits, O. P. Chapman, Jr., Westerly, R. I., honorable mention for a splendid collection of dahlias.

A special prize is offered at next meeting for best collection of dahlias.

OWEN A. HUNWICK, Cor. Sec'y.

NASSAU COUNTY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The monthly meeting of this society was held at Glen Cove, L. I., on Wednesday evening, Sept. 10th. The Pino-Lyptol Co. donated a special prize for the fall show. Fruit and vegetables were exhibited by several members and the awards were as follows: Melons, G. Ashworth; corn, F. Pettroccia; apples, H. Boeltcher. Honorable mention to H. Jones for melons, thanks of society to J. Robinson for apples. The schedules for the dahlia show, Oct. 8th, were distributed. The prize list is a good one and a successful exhibition is looked for by all. JAMES MACDONALD, Cor. Sec.

A WORD OF THANKS AND APPRECIATION.

The Local Committees in charge of the arrangements of the Convention of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, held in our city, Aug. 19-23, wish to express their sincere thanks to all who have helped to make the Convention of our National Society the great success it was:—

To His Honor, the Mayor, whose address of welcome to our guests captured their hearts and made them feel at home.

To the Honorable Board of Park Commissioners, whose action in giving the use of the land and preparing same, together with the contribution of plants and labor which made possible the outdoor plant exhibit, and whose musical entertainment at Lake Harriet was enjoyed by our guests.

To the daily press and trade papers which accorded us liberal space, and rendered in their issues good accounts of the Society's aim and work and the Convention's deliberations and achievements.

To the Civic and Commerce Association whose assistance in publicity work before and during the Convention was of the greatest help toward the success of the meeting.

To the merchants and others who through cash donations, advertisements in our Souvenir Album and the loan of autos, etc., made the entertainment of our guests possible and a source of pleasure to all.

To the hotels who so well provided for the comfort of our guests, and to the people of our city in general who in one way or another gave us their support and good will in our undertaking.

Our friends and guests have departed for their homes with nothing but praise and the best of feelings towards our city and its people, all due to the assistance given us in our efforts to bring about these happy results.

Again, we thank you.

CONVENTION EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE of the Minneapolis Florist Club and Minnesota State Florist Association.

MEDFORD HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Medford (Mass.) Horticultural Society feels very much encouraged over its second exhibition, which was held on September 12, in the vestry of the Mystic Congregational Church. The exhibits showed care and good cultivation; in fact, some of the specimens in the different classes would have been winners had they been shown at some of the larger societies' exhibitions. The children's gardens were quite a feature and competition was keen, good taste in arrangement being quite noticeable. A committee had charge of this branch of the Society's effort since early spring, and worked hard visiting the various gardens and instructing the children in their care. The result of this continued effort throughout the season was quite apparent, showing what can be done even in horticulture when the elders come down to the children's level, and help to keep up enthusiasm. Other noticeable exhibits were the dahlias shown by Parker A. Mansfield of Malden. The centre pieces for dinner tables by Miss Arington and Mrs. D. J. Puffer were as fine as the writer has seen in this line around Boston. Miss Gertrude Copeland of Melrose gained the silver cup for the best general display of twenty varieties of cut flowers. The tuberous-rooted begonia flowers of Mrs. I. J. Sturgis of Brookline, attracted considerable attention on account of their size. Excellent vegetables were shown by Mrs. J. W. Tufts and Mrs. Hardy Garret. The tomatoes in Mrs. Tufts' collection were grand, Stone and Success being of enormous size and fine shape and color.

The Breck-Robinson Co. of Lexington put up a fine trade exhibit of gladioli and other herbaceous flowers. B. Hammond Tracy had a table of gladioli of the newer kinds. The platform was filled with flowering and foliage plants from the greenhouses of the Lawrence estate.

GEORGE F. STEWART.

CONNECTICUT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Our regular series of autumn meetings commenced on the evening of the 12th instant, at the County Building, Hartford, with the observation of "Hardy Perennial Night," and a splendid exhibition of over sixty varieties of hardy herbaceous plants, made by President Huss and Treasurer Hunt.

A first-class certificate was awarded to each. President Huss then gave an interesting and instructive description of the different varieties, their merits, uses, and methods of propagation. The meeting was largely attended, and seven new members were added to the roll.

A. Cumming, Jr., our former efficient secretary, and lately head gardener of the Park Department of Hartford, has recently removed to Cromwell, to fill an important position with A. N. Pierson. He will retain his membership and interest in the society.

The society has recently sustained a loss in the resignation of Secretary George W. Smith, who, however, retains his membership relations, and who is now actively engaged in inducting the new secretary into the numerous duties of the office.

As heretofore stated, the society will not give any fall exhibition this year, owing to the recent tinkering with the state statute appropriating funds to incorporated agricultural societies, and on account of which we lost over $150 last year to reimburse us for premiums paid out. The present statute corrects a verbal technicality in the old one, resumes the appropriation to this and similar societies; and our organization will doubtless renew the fall shows next year. Sept. 26th will be "Dahlia Night" and we look for a grand display, despite the unfavorable season.

DAHLIA AND FRUIT EXHIBITION AT BOSTON.

A very fine exhibition of seasonable flowers and fruit was held by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, September 12-14. The display filled the large exhibition hall and the small hall adjoining. The date was at least a week too early for the dahlias. A great many were shown but quality was not up to usual standard. Prominent among the prize winners in the dahlia classes were: W. D. Hathaway, E. W. Ela, Sisson & Thurston, Miss Fanny Foster, J. K. Alexander, E. F. Dwyer & Sons, C. H. Walker and Lilian M. Towle. Other exhibitors, to whom gratuities were awarded were as follows: Thos. W. Head, George B. Gill and G. H. Walker, dahlias; Wm. Whitman, F. J. Rea and Old Town Nurseries, hardy herbaceous flowers; Mrs. J. Y. Gardner and Mrs. Fred'k Ayer, decorative plants; Mrs. E. M. Gill, Mrs. M. W. Charbourne and Theo L. Dean, flowers. The following received honorable mention: Eastern Nurseries, Clematis 848 and Potentilla 821, both novelties from China, collected by Purdon; B. Hammond Tracy, gladioli arranged in baskets, etc.; Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., very extensive display of gladoli and dahlias; R. & J. Farquhar & Co., varieties of Buddleia variabilis, palms, phloxes; Mt. Desert Nurseries, large display of hardy herbaceous flowers; Peirce Bros., bouquets of Mme. Cecile Brunner rose.

The new clematis above mentioned is a yellow flowered species very similar to C. Tangutica, but hardly the equal of the latter from appearances. The potentilla is a very pretty and distinct species with bright yellow flowers. In the plant display of Mrs. Ayer, Dracaena Godseffiana attracted much attention, being well furnished with bright scarlet fruit.

The fruit display was notable for the native grapes and peaches which were ahead of anything shown in recent years, and for the inferiority of the apple classes. Thos. E. Proctor, gard. James Marlborough, showed a splendid collection of foreign grapes, which took the Farlow prize and also received honorable mention for Princess of Wales peaches.

A very interesting exhibit was made by David Lumsden for the New Hampshire Agricultural Experiment Station, —showing a large French cantaloupe an English musk melon, and a hybrid that he has raised by crossing these two. This exhibit received a well deserved silver medal. Honorable mention was awarded to Mrs. V. V. Hersey for Boston Market tomatoes and to Baker Farm for Sterling Castle tomato. Wilfrid Wheeler exhibited a very fine collection of peaches.

DAHLIA AND HARDY PERENNIAL SHOW AT PHILADELPHIA.

A very good exhibition of dahlias and hardy perennials was held in Horticultural Hall, on the 16th inst. The largest exhibitor of dahlias was W. Atlee Burpee & Co., who showed some one hundred and fifty varieties. In the competitive classes the most successful prize winners were: Wm. Robertson, David Aiken, Joseph Hurley and John Little. One of the most striking among the new dahlias was the variety Margaret Bouchon exhibited by Robertson, for the Dreer prize. This may be described as a glorified Kriemhilde, same class and nearly double the size. A striking item in Hurley's collection of outdoor flowers was, the Orleans Baby Rambler rose unusually fine as to color and substance for this season of the year. Dreer put up a good exhibit of dahlias single flowers inserted in pots of adiantum which set them off nicely.

Many of the regular exhibitors among the private gardens around Philadelphia were unable to show, dahlias being off crop on account of the dry weather. Three weeks ago most of them could have made an excellent showing. Peacock sent in his famous new peony flowered variety John Wanamaker, a handsome shade of lavender pink of fine form and substance. We do not think it will become popular as a commercial variety, being weak in the neck and requiring to be wired to make it stand up.

J. Murray Bassett made an interesting display of the Ranere raspberry, a two-crop variety that has excited some attention of late years.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The New London Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting on Thursday, 11th inst., when plans were discussed for the Dahlia Show which is to be held on the 24th. A paper was read by Mr. Fox of Uncasville on the "Development of the Wild Flowers of the Fields and Woods."

The Ladies' Home Circle of St. Louis held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. John Steidle on Wednesday, September 17. In our note last week mentioning this meeting it was stated that the date was Mrs. Steidle's birthday anniversary. This proved to be erroneous, but all had a good time notwithstanding.

Dates for the sixth annual fall flower show of the Pasadena Horticultural Society have been determined on. The big exhibit of autumn flowers will be held October 23, 24 and 25. The show will probably be held at The Maryland as in former years. Special attention is being paid this fall to the schools, with a view of obtaining a large number of exhibits from the pupils, showing what they have done with their school gardens. The American Gladiolus Society has offered two prizes, silver and bronze medals for the best exhibits of gladioli, but it is not likely that there will be any entries in that class, as the gladiolus season is over by August.

Resolutions on the death of J. A. Bolgiano:

RESOLVED, That in the death of Joseph Ault Bolgiano, for many years head of the seed firm of J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md., who died March 1, 1913, in the seventy-seventh year of his age, our Association has lost another Charter Member who was prominent in the organization of our Association, and for many years a hard worker for the welfare of the seed trade.

We recognize in his death the loss, not only to our membership, but to the community and many institutions with which he was connected as well.

We express our sympathy with his family and friends in their bereavement.

RESOLVED, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of our Association and printed in our annual report, and that a copy be sent to the families of our departed member.

WALTER MOTT'S NOTES BY THE WAY.

San Antonio, Texas.

The long continued drought has at last been broken, bountiful showers having fallen through the entire state. Vegetation revived and a good second picking of cotton is predicted. Grand old specimens of Chamaerops excelsa and Washingtonia filifera have withstood the drought and even Latania Borbonica has come through well. Gorgeous beds of cannas planted around the Alamo and San Jose Missions are in a perfect blaze of bloom. Alphonse Bouvier is used for background. Chas. Henderson, J. D. Eisele and Chicago for scarlets; Souv. de Antoine Crozy, Queen Charlotte and Florence Vaughan are in the list of old favorites. Tarrytown makes a fine bedder, while everyone recognizes King Humbert at sight—it is simply magnificent. Very attractive is a hedge of Euonymus radicans variegata surrounding the new post office building. It is 3 feet high and almost as much through. Ficus repens is very striking against the gray stone structure.

The white periwinkle is much used by the florists; the single bloom is bunched and wired making an excellent substitute for carnations, being at its best before the latter come into crop. White Wonder is the most popular white carnation in the southwest. It has withstood the drought very well and is doing finely planted inside early. The use of window boxes is on the increase, using up all the surplus stock; in fact, there was a scarcity before the season ended. While much artificial stock is used in some decorations there does not seem to be any danger of the real article being superseded for fine work.

During Recess

Joseph Breck & Son's Employees.

About 150 employees of Joseph Breck & Son of Boston were the guests of the Breck-Robinson Company at their nurseries in Lexington, Mass., on Sept. 13. Charles H. Breck, president of the firm, was present and gave his touring car for the use of the women to carry them over the large estate. The party arriving here found lunch awaiting them. A. E. Robinson, general manager of the nurseries, received the company. After lunch and a trip about the nurseries the party repaired to a large field where some athletic sports were enjoyed. A baseball game between teams representing the Boston store and the nursery lasted seven innings, resulting in a victory for the nursery team, 19 to 6. A game of baseball for women was then started and a team captained by Miss Mary Collins faced one captained by Miss Jennie McCarthy. Miss Collins' team won, 6 to 3. The field events were then held. The summary:

Ladies' Race—Won by Miss Josie Kilduff; Miss Jennie McCarthy, second.

Married Men's Race—Won by Alec Joiner; James Carroll, second.

Three-Legged Race, man and woman having ankles strapped together—Won by Alec Werner and Miss Elizabeth Dillon.

After the games a general good time was held, after which the party was conveyed to Boston in special electric cars.

CHICAGO NOTES.

At the regular meeting of the Cook County Florists' Association, this week, the subject of the organization of a bowling league will be taken up.

The Boston Store is offering a large space in its store for the holding of flower shows. This place has conducted a large number of plant sales during the past year.

T. McAllister, in charge of the plant department at A. Lange's, returned from a three weeks' rest, which he loyally spent in Chicago. He says: "There is no better place."

The usual number of florists will compete at the State Fair at Springfield, October 3 to 11. There is always an attractive floricultural department, which this year is in charge of J. E. Taggart, Freeport, Ill.

Last week another florist was moved by appearances of grief to give up a large floral piece and several of her hard-earned dollars, in exchange for a worthless check. This easy game should be well-known now and watched out for.

The Chicago seed stores are very busy places now and the fall bulb business appears to be in full swing. The Dutch bulbs are the last arrivals and hyacinths, tulips, narcissus, and crocuses are being opened up. So far stock seems good.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. are building a box factory at Morton Grove as a part of their equipment at Plant C. There will also be an annex for preparing ruscus and manufacturing the ruscus wreaths, this business having outgrown the accommodations of the store, even in its present size. Chief Engineer Goodwin, who suffered a very severe injury to his face, is doing nicely.

Miss Mary Hayden, of Sam Murray's, Kansas City, Mo., was fortunate in recovering the silver mesh bag which was stolen when Poehlmann Bros.' store was burglarized three weeks ago. The bag was in her traveling case, which she left over night at Poehlmann Bros., after her visit at her home in LeRoy, Wis. The bag was a valuable one and was found in a pawnshop where it was easily identified by the name of her sister engraved on the inside.

Visitor: James Culbert, Rossville, Ill.

ST. LOUIS NOTES.

The Vandevoorts' department store opened its floral department on Monday, September 15, with David Geddes in charge.

Charles Ford, of A. Herrmann, New York; A. T. Hey, of Maywood, Ill.; J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill.; and R. Newcomb, of Chicago, were visitors the past week.

John Young, of the C. Young & Sons Co., was married to Miss Hazel Lanigan, last week, and the happy young couple received many congratulations from friends in the trade.

The Mullanphy Floral Co., of North Grand avenue, have leased the southwest corner of Seventh and Olive streets, under the Mercantile Club and will open a flower store there early in October, to be known as their downtown branch. The location is one of the best in the city.

VIEW IN ROSE GARDEN OF MRS. A. W. TEDCASTLE, MILTON, MASS.

Our illustration shows a bit of rose garden in a Milton, Mass., estate. Rose gardens worthy of the name are now, since the advent of the Wichuraiana Ramblers, possible in any part of New England, or corresponding climate in any part of the country. Even the Crimson Rambler, which in its time filled a useful place, is now far outclassed by varieties equally vigorous and hardy but far superior in color and foliage.

The public should be made aware of the fact that if they plant good strong Ramblers now they can have a fine display of flowers the coming summer. Given plants with strong, well-ripened canes, all that is necessary after planting them out is to lay the canes down and cover them well with soil. When uncovered in April they will come out in perfect condition and will bloom freely. Many more might be sold if the public were made acquainted with the many new and beautiful varieties now at their disposal and the quick results that are possible with proper methods of planting and care.

Obituary

James Bishop.

James Bishop, Rochester, N. Y., who was one of Rochester's pioneer florists and who for the past five years had been in charge of the flowers in Highland Park, died on Sunday, Sept. 7, aged 63 years.

William Paul Bender.

After a severe illness of five months, Wm. Paul Bender died on the 12th inst., aged 52 years. He was a well-known gardener having filled important positions in Baltimore and Philadelphia during the past twenty years. His most important place was that of Henry A. Parr, at Rider, near Baltimore, which he managed for many years. He achieved distinction especially in the chrysanthemum, introducing a number of new varieties some of which are grown extensively in the commercial world to this day. He was a native of Germany.

M. E. Pierce

M. E. Pierce, a well-known and respected citizen of Chester, Pa., passed away Friday, Sept. 12, in the Crozer Hospital, following a brief illness of typhoid fever. The funeral took place from his home, 323 Parker street, where he has conducted a florist business for the past few years, on Monday afternoon.

Melchor Pierce was born seventy-five years ago in Lower Chichester township, where he moved to Chester when a young man and ever since has claimed Chester as his residence. He was a stonemason and contractor and has laid the foundation for many of the old buildings of the city.

John Chambers.

It becomes our sad duty to record the death of John Chambers, former superintendent of the parks of Toronto, Ont., on Sept. 1. Mr. Chambers was 63 years of age, having been born in 1850 in Canterbury, England. He came to Canada at the age of 21. His work on the park system of Toronto showed landscape and garden ability of a high order. In 1891 he was vice-president of the Society of American Florists, having been elected as such at the Boston Convention in 1890, and he was a tireless worker in the Convention at Toronto in 1891, where his congeniality and unvarying good nature made him very popular with the convention visitors. He was a member of the American Association of Park Superintendents and several local associations.

Constant Ponnet.

The sudden death of Constant Ponnet, who for over twenty years has conducted a florists' establishment in Alexandria, Va., and a stand in the Center Market, came as a great shock to his many friends in Alexandria and Washington as he had been attending the Market but a day or two before. Mr. Ponnet was a native of France and was sixty-six years of age. When quite a young man he emigrated to this country and some time later engaged in the florist business. Death was due to heart failure. He went to France last year, staying for some time in an effort to better his health, and apparently was much better upon his return. Mr. Ponnet is survived by his widow, two sons and five daughters. Burial was from St. Mary's Catholic Church and interment in St. Mary's Cemetery.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

L. C. Page & Co., the Boston publishers, are just out with three new books which we briefly note.

Ralph Somerby at Panama is a story of the time of Charles the Second, by Francis Raleigh. Full of thrilling adventure, buccaneers and pirates, wild Indians and Spaniards in fierce conflict, this dramatic tale founded on the early history of the Isthmus of Panama, stirs the reader with an irresistible fascination. The boys, as well as those of maturer years, will find this portrayal of lawless life and physical prowess in the early days of Central America a story of absorbing interest; 306 pages with ten full-page illustrations and copious historical and explanatory notes.

The Golden Road, by L. M. Montgomery, is quite the opposite in character from the foregoing. It is a story for girls, brimfull of humor and merry frolic. Its characters are original and the author has weaved together a series of amusing incidents in a most felicitous manner. As a remedy for "the blues" it will surely prove invincible; 368 pages; price, post paid, $1.40.

Royal Castles of England, by Henry C. Shelley, author of Inns and Taverns of Old London. This is a superb volume. The contents comprise eleven chapters on Southern England, six on Midland England, and seven on Northern England. There are 48 full-page reproductions in sepia from photographs and drawings of these ancient fortresses which have been so closely associated with the history and romance of England, and the loves and hates, the triumphs and defeats of her rulers; 350 pages, exclusive of plates. Price, $3.00 net.

CINCINNATI NOTES.

Henry Schwarz has opened a branch store at 4605 Main avenue, Norwood. His son Ed. is taking charge of the store.

Chas. Windram and his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Hety, are motoring through the South to the Lake Shore Ferneries at Leesburg, Fla.

Visitors: H. A. Demeranville, Mobile, Ala.; Mr. Cohan of Wertheimer Bros., New York; Wm. Gardner, New Castle, Ind., and Mr. Uhl, Greenfield, Ohio.

BOSTON Stock in market each day is getting lighter and there is no bad glut on any line. Gladioli and asters are shortened up, recent frosts in the country districts having hit them hard. Some indoor asters now coming in are very fine and bring from $2 to $3 per 100. As to roses there is no special demand although sales are gradually increasing. Many small, short-stemmed buds are received which, of course, have to be sold for what they will bring. Carnations are improving noticeably but stems are still short. Lily of the valley moves along nicely.

CHICAGO Good stock meets ready sale. The second week in September found a normal demand for all kinds of flowers that could be classed as good, and the week ended with a general clean-up which carried over into Sunday. Monday, the 15th, was busier for the shippers than for those doing a local business, still there was no accumulation of stock. American Beauties are perhaps scarcer than any other flower, the buds for the present cutting having been severely injured by the high temperature about three weeks ago. The demand for lily of the valley continues good, especially in out-of-town orders. Carnations are now showing a rapid increase in length of stem and size of bloom and cuts are decidedly larger. Asters are beginning to evidence the coming of the close of the season. Plenty of fairly good ones are still seen and the aster season is counted as a good one. All kinds of roses are limited in quantity rather than otherwise, which is just as well, for they are now about equal to the demand and prices hold steady. Gladioli are holding to their season's record of being unsatisfactory all around. The first shipments of boxwood are now in from Virginia. Carnations with 22-inch stems are about "the limit" this week and come from Budlong's. Growers expect to begin cutting chrysanthemums regularly about October first. The stragglers which have come along the past six weeks have not received the cordial welcome which will encourage early blooms in the future.

CINCINNATI Stock of all kinds is still plentiful. The aster receipts are larger than at any time this season and only the best are selling. The gladiolus market is in the same condition as the aster market. Dahlias are now coming in strong. Up to this time, however, there has not been a very large call for them. Cosmos is selling well, but the cuts of it are as yet rather limited. Roses are enjoying a better call this week than at any time for the past several weeks. Beauties sell very well. A limited number of carnations are coming into the wholesale houses. The lily supply is rather limited but the receipts seem to be ample for requirements.

NEW YORK Stock has shortened up greatly in this market and for a little time express charges will be very light. If a good demand would materialize now things would hum, but there is little doing and, even with the reduced receipts, the wholesalers have to work to unload what comes in. American Beauty roses are tending towards normal values and specially good grades of other roses enjoy a fairly steady price. Carnations are improving and with the improvement comes the possibility of getting a little better figure for the top grades. Dahlias and asters are the jonahs just now. The sooner Jack Frost swallows them the better it will be for all the rest. Lily of the valley good and in fair demand.

PHILADELPHIA Beauties sold up clean by end of week. High grade white roses are also in good demand. Radiance is the best seller among the pink roses. There are a good many low-grade among the pinks and these hang fine. Some excellent Richmonds are now to be had. Asters are rather sluggish except in the extra fine qualities. Much of the medium and lower grades remained unsold at the wind-up last week. The advancing season and the cooler weather has greatly improved the dahlia and from now on the stock ought to sell well. Lily of the valley is cleaning up nicely. Carnations are improving and pretty good prices are being realized for all the high grades. Of course a large percentage is short stemmed. Orchids and gardenias, demand and supply both improved and both about on an even keel so that prices remain about the same. Early chrysanthemums going very well. The market could use more white but the yellow one seems the most plentiful.

ST. LOUIS Since the cool weather with good rains which broke the long dry hot spell, business has seemed to pick up. The local trade have had quite a busy week and the last few days cleaned up the market on all the good grades of stock that came in. Beauties had a large demand, so did other roses and carnations but only of the better grades at any time. Smilax is scarce and other greens have a big run.

WASHINGTON A drop in temperature of about forty degrees has necessitated the firing up of boilers in the local greenhouses and last week caused a shortage of locally-grown roses. There is, however, plenty of stock of all kinds to be had. Carnations are improving in quality as are American Beauty roses. Dahlias are in heavy supply. Business seems to be on the pick-up as many of the department stores, and millinery and other establishments are holding fall openings and using quite a quantity of cut flowers. Many of the florists are also busy with fall palm and fern sales and report a good demand for this stock.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

A. R. Jones and C. H. Grakelow are back safe and sound, from a month's sojourn through the West Indies and Panama.

Robert Schoch, of the M. Rice Co., rotund and rosy, has returned from his western trip and is greeting friends at the store with his usual smile—and bragging about the fine lot of good orders that came his way. It does one good to look at him.

Visitors: G. Hickenson, secretary Hammond Greenhouse Co., Richmond, Va.; Miss Rena Bester, Hagerstown, Md.; Julius Ruzitka, New Bedford, Mass.; Clifford L. Flint, San Luis Obispo, Cal.

Boston visitors: Paul Berkowitz of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Wm. Anderson, So. Lancaster, Mass.; Mr. Marquardt, representing R. M. Ward, New York; A. E. Thatcher, Bar Harbor, Me.; Leonard Barron, Garden City, N. Y.; Mr. Don, of Weeber & Don, New York.

Personal

David Welch, of Welch Bros., Boston, is on a brief trip southward.

The daughter of Thomas F. Galvin, of Boston, was married at their summer home in Nantucket, Mass., on September 17.

Herman Waldecker of Braintree, Mass., sailed on the Imperator, August 30, for an extended visit to his old home in Germany.

Miss Grace Goldring, daughter of Fred Goldring, and Clarence E. Ostrander were married at Slingerlands, N. Y., on September 3.

John C. Young, son of W. B. Young of C. Young & Sons, florists, and Miss Hazel I. Lanigan, a telephone operator, were married in Clayton, Mo., on Monday, Sept. 8.

Mrs. Beatrice Moss, of the F Street store of F. H. Kramer, Washington, D. C., has returned from Ridge, Md., where she spent a very enjoyable vacation. Among the visitors in town last last week were Robert Schoch, of M. Rice Co., Philadelphia; Charles McCarthy, Boston, Mass.; and William Rehder, Wilmington, N. C.

John Etchingham of the firm of Etchingham Bros., florists of Wayne, Pa., severed an artery in his left wrist while doing some glazing work on the roof of the greenhouses. When pushing a pane of glass into its place, the glass broke and his arm passed through, inflicting a cut of such depth as to sever an artery. The flow was stopped by Dr. E. F. Miller, of Wayne, who was summoned.

READ THIS

You will need to buy something this winter—stock, supplies, equipment, etc., for store or greenhouse. Look through the Buyers' Directory and List of Advertisers in this paper and you'll probably find what you want listed there. We are proud of the fact that HORTICULTURE is recognized as the best paper of its class in this country in quality of reading matter and also of the fact that it is coming to be acknowledged as the best advertising medium. The best friends of HORTICULTURE are those who buy from HORTICULTURE'S advertisers whenever possible and, in corresponding with the dealers always take the trifling trouble to refer to the paper. We have many such friends, otherwise our advertising columns would soon be deserted.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.

This is what happens to open mortise joints. They cost less to make—but oh, what a difference in their lasting.

We don't have to leave the "horns" or ends on our "Sash That Last" to keep the joints from "breaking out." Even if they are left on, open mortise joints quickly rot out.

Don't let anybody's clever sales talk blind you into thinking that open mortise joints are equal to blind mortise ones. Sash That Last are blind. They outlast three to one of the others.

Buy Sash Now

YOU have got to have some more sash—there's no getting around that. "Get them, then you've got them." At odd times when work is a little slack you can set some of your men painting and glazing them. Then when you are ready for the sash, the sash will be ready for you.

The man who looks ahead is the man who gets ahead.

But don't buy any old sash just because the price is cheaper. The price is cheaper, but the sash are not. No cheap sash ever is cheap. Our Sash That Last are cheap, because they are made to last and do last.

We make our Sash That Last, so they will last, without regard to cost. We make them too good. But they do make lots and lots of friends for us, which, of course, makes money for us in other ways. So we sell our Sash That Last at nearly cost and consider it the very best kind of advertising.

We mailed you a circular last week giving some special prices on lots of 25, 50 and 100 or more. If you have mislaid it, send along your order just the same, and we will see that you get the special price.

Every sash is guaranteed to be as claimed. If you are not fully satisfied, send back the sash and back will come your money, including any freight you paid.

P. S.—Can't find out of a single case of sash ever being returned. Looks like we are pretty safe in making that money-back offer.

B. D. KING IS THE GARDENER

THAT QUESTION OF PRICE

BY way of illustration, let's take an automobile costing $5,000 and another $4,000. The design of the body of both is practically the same. To the casual observer one is as good as the other. You buy the $4,000 car, but you say to yourself, "some day I'll have one of those other cars. This one of mine is all right, but that other car certainly has the stuff in it."

By the same token, some curved eave greenhouses may look like the U-Bar. They may answer a certain purpose, but they haven't "the stuff in them" that the U Bar has. That's why the U Bar costs more. It has "the stuff" in it.

A complete framework of glavanized, aluminum finished, steel U Bars must of course cost more than express roof bars. The many little niceties of finish those things you say delight in, also cost. The best thing in anything, from cheese to greenhouse, cost more. Cost more because they are worth more.

There are many reasons why U Bar Greenhouses are worth more. Just how much more, we would like to both tell and show you—mostly show.

Send for catalog. Or send for us. Or both.

Care of Carnations

Look after the disbudding from now on. Not only will it enlarge the bloom, but it will also help to stiffen the stems. If disbudding is ever needed it is needed at this season, when the carnation is naturally not at its best. The second tier of wire and string supports will now be needed, so the stems will grow straight and upright. Some of the taller ones will also soon need the third support. It can be put on first as easily now as later and it is not in the way, so put it in place as soon as convenient. One great mistake which inexperienced growers often make is to close the ventilators tight in the evening after a bright day, thinking to corral a lot of heat in a house, to keep it warm over night. Not only will this always fail to accomplish the desired result, but there is no surer way of starting leaf-spot, or many diseases that are so much complained of these days. I have believed in ventilation continually for years and I still find that plenty of fresh air is the best preventive of disease. It makes no difference whether the temperature is abnormally high or low, fresh air will aid the plants to bear the unnatural conditions.

Forcing Spanish Iris

Spanish iris may be planted now or even in October, in boxes about 5 inches deep and of convenient size for handling. Use a compost of old hotbed manure and sandy loam or a similar mixture. Plant deep enough so that the upper tips are exposed just a little after watering. Cover the boxes with hay or straw to keep in the moisture. Set the boxes out in frames and cover with sash when it becomes necessary, protecting enough to keep the tips from freezing. Bring into the house for forcing in January or February, giving a moist atmosphere and a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. Bring in at different times to secure a succession of bloom. The time required to obtain blooms will be about six or eight weeks. Do not let them become dry at the root and keep the floors damped down to produce needed moisture in the atmosphere. To insure finer flower heads give some liquid manure once a week and then increase to twice a week until the blooms show color. Keep plenty of ventilation on all occasions as this is one of the most important points in growing fine iris.

Hardy Stock for Spring Sales

All florists who handle perennials for spring trade will easily recognize the value of having a good lot of this stock in pots. Stock that you have planted in the field is all right for planting while dormant, but where the planting season is prolonged for weeks, which is always the case, this is where pot plants fill the bill. Now is the time to attend to this work. Dig them up now and pot in 4 or 5-inch pots in good soil and place them in a frame where later on when the hard weather comes they can have some protection. Give them water and attention until they get thoroughly rooted. Along in January you can bring them into some very cool house and grow on slowly. These plants will command a good price in the spring.

Poinsettias in Pans

Now is the time to make up pans of poinsettias. "Pan" is hardly the right term. The seed-pan is too shallow. The azalea pot, or "half-pot," as it is better known, is the correct thing. These half-pots should be made up from small plants in 2½-inch pots. It is not safe to make them up from plants taken from the cutting-bed, as some may start to grow strongly and others only feebly. Select plants which have been well-rooted in the little pots, plants of about equal height and vigor, short-jointed and of firm growth. An 8-inch pan will meet with the readiest sale and next a 9-inch and 10-inch. A few larger than this can be filled, but there will be much less demand for them. An 8-inch will make room for six plants; a 9-inch, seven plants, and a 10-inch nine plants. If you want any 6-inch or 7-inch pans wait three weeks before filling them, because if filled too early the soil will become exhausted before time to sell, and exhaustion of soil means a loss of foliage. Although the poinsettia is a tropical plant and should not be allowed to be in a house below 60 degrees at any time, the loss of foliage is not so often caused by low temperature as by impoverishment of the soil; so the soil for the pans should be rich. A rather coarse heavy manure and a 5-inch pot of bone meal to a bushel of the compost will do quite well.

Timely Propagating

If you are among those who are anxious to work up a large stock of certain plants in the bedding line, or wish to propagate a large number of certain varieties from a small stock on hand, it is not too early to get started. The present is the proper time to propagate coleus, as well as alternanthera, perilla, achyranthes, verbenas, petunias, salvias, heliotropes, fuchsias, German ivy, etc. All will root in a short time. For alternantheras it is better to use flats of convenient size, about 2 or 3 inches in depth, using either sandy soil or a layer of soil in the bottom and a layer of sand on top. Insert the cuttings of about 2½ inches in length, and they can remain in these flats all winter. They will stand practically still all winter, and require a rather dry atmosphere to keep in good shape until spring comes, when, with longer days and a little bottom heat, they will soon make up for lost time. Alternantheras should be kept in a house where the temperature is about 65 degrees at night and a high degree of moisture in the atmosphere is needed for them to do anything like well.

Oxalis

These make good pot plants for winter flowering, with their graceful mass of bright cloverlike foliage, and endless array of golden-hued flowers throughout the winter and spring. Dormant bulbs of the different varieties should now be planted. The pans or pots should contain sufficient coarse material in the bottom to help drain off any surplus of moisture that may be in the soil. Give them a porous and somewhat sandy soil, liberally enriched with well-rotted manure. Place two or three bulbs in a four-inch pan and keep in a temperature of 55 degrees at night.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Irises; Lilium Formosum; Otaheite Orange; Orchids; Peonies; Chrysanthemum Stock Plants.

Pollen stealing

We, in this country, can hardly appreciate the extent to which the science of orchid hybridization has been and is now being carried on in Great Britain nor realize the intense interest and infatuation which attaches to this pursuit among those who have taken it up either as a hobby or as a commercial enterprise. Under existing conditions the few grains of pollen in the bloom of a pedigreed hybrid possess a subjective value which almost makes the historic tulip craze in Holland "look like thirty cents." To remove the precious grains from the open flower is the work of but a second if one understands how, and we are told that petty thieving of this sort has become so prevalent at the exhibitions that the owners of valuable specimens fear to let them out of their sight. The offense seems to us a most contemptible one and merits punishment just as severe as would the theft of money or other property.

House cleaning

The announcement by the Secretary of the American Carnation Society which appears in our correspondence this week, to the effect that an effort is being made to purge the excessively voluminous lists of carnation varieties comes as welcome news. We hope, however, that the work outlined in Mr. Baur's notice is to be only a beginning, for many times the number represented in the list given might well be eliminated, so far as any practical value is concerned. It is quite probable that many of the recorded introducers would be more than pleased if their connection with the exploiting of more or less worthless failures could be buried in oblivion, and surely nobody else would shed any tears either now or hereafter if this were done. Not only the carnation but the rose, the sweet pea, the chrysanthemum and—just now the dahlia and the gladiolus especially, are all carrying a useless burden of names which serve no purpose other than to encumber and confuse. Let's get rid of them.

The golden road

No more valuable asset, as it appears to us, can a grower and introducer of novelties possess, than the reputation of scrupulous care and thorough testing out of every candidate for favor in the horticultural world before he will attach to it his name and endorsement. Had this course been the rule during the past five and twenty years, for instance, and "the rogue's march" been played to a few of the humbugs, what a different aspect would our chrysanthemum, rose and carnation lists present today and what a multitude of disappointments would have been prevented! Perhaps it is safe to say, however, that no man can ever be quite an infallible judge of his own productions, no matter how impartial he may try to be. When we see the dissemination of a novelty such as Polypodium Mandaianum, for example, proclaimed with unqualified laudation, naturally our faith in it all is greatly strengthened by the fact that the encomiums are not alone those of its fond and devoted sponsor but that they also reflect the conclusions of disinterested and capable judges repeated with unvarying unanimity at home and abroad through a period of years. Looking from this viewpoint alone the great possible utility of the special societies, directly or indirectly, to everyone engaged in horticulture looms up most convincingly and the price of the maintenance of these organizations is nothing as compared with the service they are capable of rendering.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur C. Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Tying the Teas

With the Tea roses it is well to heed the danger that will arise from bunching up the plants too much while tying. The old method of running a string around the whole plant with the stake for the center, is a very poor one indeed, and we can pity the man who ties all his roses thus. The loss of the foliage in such cases is very large, and that is not the only way that the plants suffer. By carefully investigating the difference we find that the plants thus tied do not break from the bottom very freely, not as freely as the plants where the shoots have been tied separately, or at least tied to one another, so that the bottom of the plant has some chance to get some of the sunshine that we get at times. Needless to say, the plants that lose all their bottom leaves will become very hard, and not only will it be difficult to get them to break from the bottom but it will interfere with the flowing of the sap, which will mean flowers of a poorer quality.

The Rainy Weather of the Past Week

We do not know if all the rose growers that happen to read these notes have experienced any rainy weather, but with us we consider it a very trying time for the rose grower, especially those that have given their plants a little more water than was necessary, and find that their plants are rather soft. Mildew will threaten the soft growths and foliage and it will be only with the greatest care that the disease will be kept at bay. It has been almost too warm to use steam, but a little of it can be turned in during the night, if the growers are wide awake. And it pays to be awake on occasions such as these. Where a trustworthy night fireman is on duty the grower need have very little fear that his roses will be damaged in any way through neglect.

The Cold Nights

Then, too, there are the cold nights that have already well set in, and the grower who will not turn on sufficient heat to allow them to be comfortable, will have a good chance to regret his actions. A pipe or two of steam is all that may be necessary, and the benefit thus derived will far exceed the expense for the coal that is burned or the labor expended on the fires, and the care of the boilers during the night and early hours of the morning.

Sulphur on the Steam Pipes

Whether mildew is visible or not it is well to apply a little sulphur to the pipes here and there all through the houses, allowing one one-inch pipe for twenty feet of width. This pipe can be safely painted every ten or fifteen feet, painting a piece about two feet long. This will be sufficient to kill any of the mildew spores that may be lounging around awaiting a chance to work havoc with the plants should conditions become ideal for their rapid development. It is a mistake, however, to use too much sulphur on the pipes, and it is dangerous as well, for sulphur fumes will kill the plants much quicker than the mildew itself if they are allowed to become too strong.

Fumigation

Never for a moment forget this important item in the routine of rose growing. Whether you decide to use hydrocyanic acid gas or some of the tobacco products that are offered to the trade at the present time, never let a week go by without its weekly fumigation. If you spray let it be the same. Never let the fly make its appearance, for once it does it will take quite some time to clean it out again. It is much better to give the plants a mild dose of either smoke or spray, and do it oftener, than to apply a heavy dose at long intervals, for the latter is very injurious to the plants, to say the least, and the harm thus resulting will be traced, not only in the growth of the plants but in the flowers themselves.

BRITISH HORTICULTURE.

Trade Chances.

Sutton & Sons already control one of the largest seed firms in Great Britain. The firm has been established over a century, and a large army of employees are engaged in the seed warehouses and extensive trial grounds at Reading. Messrs, Sutton's business is now to be extended by the acquisition of the seed branch carried on by Veitch & Sons, at Chelsea, for the last 60 years. Messrs. Sutton have also purchased from Messrs. Veitch the chief portion of the seed grounds at Langley, near Slough. The nursery business of Messrs. Veitch will still be carried on for sometime, until Sir Harry Veitch finally retires from the business.

A Dahlia Display.

Although growers have experienced an unfavorable season there was a big display of dahlias at the annual show organized by the National Society, at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, on Sept. 9 and 10. The quality of the blooms in many cases was not up to the usual standard. There was an extensive show of the new collarette and paeony-flowered kinds, which attracted considerable notice. Cheal & Sons showed Crawley Star, the new cosmea-flowered dahlia. This novelty has been awarded a first-class certificate from the Society, in addition to other awards.

Autumn Roses.

The National Rose society had every reason to be satisfied with its autumn show in London, on Sept. 11th and 12th. Some excellent groups were staged by the trade. Paul & Sons, received a gold medal for their collection. The seedlings, of course, aroused keen interest. Once again the Irish raisers were well to the fore. Alexander Dickson & Sons, Ltd., received a gold medal for Red Letter Day, and another for Edward Bohane, two new H. T.'s. S. McGredy & Son, obtained a gold medal for Edgar M. Burnett, a new H. T. The same awards were made to Hugh Dickson for Murial Dickson a new hybrid brier; and to the Rev. J. H. Pemberton, for Moonlight, a new H. T. The table decorations were a special feature. The first prize was secured with a pleasing arrangement of Melody, the popular yellow H. T.

POLYPODIUM MANDAIANUM GOES FORTH

Polypodium Mandaianum.

An event of more than passing interest is the distribution of the noble fern, Polypodium Mandaianum, which commenced this week at the greenhouses of W. A. Manda at South Orange, N. J. This remarkable fern has been in Mr. Manda's possession for over ten years, during which time he has been dividing and multiplying it assiduously until now the stock amounts to about 25,000 plants, large and small. Since the announcement of the high honors awarded to this plant at home and abroad, orders have been coming in fast and practically every salable plant is sold in advance. Mr. Manda expects it will take at least two weeks to pack and deliver the stock. Every plant is packed as though going to an exhibition, each individual frond being tied several times to an upright stake and the greatest care being exercised to insure its delivery in perfect condition. Mr. Manda's affection is so bound up in this plant that we honestly believe he feels at heart deep regret at seeing it go out.

The beautiful fronds of Polypodium Mandaianum, laciniated, crimped and undulated in the most charming manner, have a place of their own as cut foliage in decorative work. No other green can rival its effect and the texture is so firm that it lasts in cut state for many weeks without changing. The plant thrives best in shallow pots or pans, being a surface grower, and seems to be equally happy if merely attached to a clump of osmunda fibre and suspended against the greenhouse wall, where water seems to be its only requirement for robust growth. Knowing this, the enormous size of the fronds and their remarkable substance is all the more astonishing.

The houses filled with the plants have been a sight worth seeing. A specimen at the head of the houses has a spread of ten feet. Others fastened to the top of dead tree-fern stems seem perfectly at home and form stately standards, while large clumps hang on the walls in the manner of stag's horn ferns.

While on the subject we might mention another fern which impressed us on a recent visit to South Orange, as a valuable acquisition. It is a sport from Nephrolepis tuberosa which originated with Mr. Manda and has been named plumosa. The fronds are long, narrow and arched, the tips of the pinnæ being beautifullly plumose and of a pale green which makes a striking contrast with the very dark color of the rest of the frond. This seems to be a tougher fern than the various well-known forms of N. exaltata and although the plants grow quite dense in the centre indiscriminate watering does not discolor or otherwise unfavorably affect the fronds.

Of Anthericum Mandaianum, introduced not long since by Mr. Manda, its only drawback seems to be that it propagates too fast. Anybody can get up a big stock of it in no time. It is strongly variegated and the leaves are very tough—not brittle as in the old, well-known, Anthericum variegatum. This plant received an award of merit in England and was also one of the group of twelve new and rare plants which won the first prize at the London International, last year.

PURIFYING THE LISTS.

HORTICULTURE PUBLISHING CO.:

Gentlemen:—We are sending you a list of names which we propose to drop from the carnation register, unless we succeed in securing data which we now lack.

Will you kindly publish this list, with the request that anyone who can supply the color, parentage, originator, disseminator, and date of dissemination of any variety in the large section of the list, will please communicate the same to this office?

We have been working on this carnation register through a period of several years and have complete data on most of the varieties listed. As soon as it becomes apparent that the register is as complete as it is possible to make it, the American Carnation Society proposes to publish it in pamphlet form and distribute it among its members.

It is calculated that this register will be of great benefit to those who secure copies, as it will contain full data on practically every carnation introduced within the past 40 years. It will stand as the highest authority in carnation nomenclature.

Yours very truly,

A. F. J. BAUR,

FLOWERING FOXGLOVES IN MARCH.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

Will you please let me know if foxgloves can be flowered in February or March if given a few frosts now in the pots, the same as Campanula pyramidalis and with the same treatment, or is it advisable to not let them freeze. Your answer to this will be a great help to me.

Dalton, Mass. C. S.

Nahant, Mass., Sept. 17, 1913.

Dear Sir: I have had no experience in forcing foxgloves, but I think with gentle forcing they might be had in flower by March. I think several good freezings would help. T. ROLAND.

ANTHERICUM MANDAIANUM.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

NEWPORT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The autumn exhibition of this Society, which was held September 16-17 and 18 in Convention Hall at the Newport Beach, proved to be a decided success financially and otherwise. This new hall, which has a floor space of 80 x 154 feet, seemed at first to be much larger than necessary for the exhibits, but, fortunately, many entries were made for groups and large specimen plants which made a fairly well filled and very attractive hall, the decorations that have been in place during the summer blending nicely with the exhibits. The main exhibitors in groups and specimen plants were: Vincent Astor, gard. James Boyd; E. J. Berwind, gard. Bruce Butterton; Mrs. H. McK. Twombly, gard. Alex. Fraser; H. M. Brooks, gard. James Bond; R. L. Beeckman, gard. John B. Urquhart, and the Wilson Nurseries of Middletown, R. I., the latter with hardy evergreens in tubs.

Following is a condensed list of first awards:

Plants.

Group of palms, ferns, foliage and flowering plants, James Boyd. Group of palms and other foliage plants, Bruce Butterton. Specimen Kentia in 12-in. pot, specimen Phoenix in 12-in. pot and specimen palm, any size, J. Boyd. Adiantum Farleyense and A. Gloriosa, J. B. Urquhart, 1st in each. Nephrolepis, any variety, J. B. Urquhart. Any other fern, dracaenas, crotons and pandanus, James Boyd, 1st in each. Adiantum Farleyense, J. B. Urquhart. Nephrolepis, Miss Fanny Foster, gard. C. M. Bugholt. Dish of foliage plants, Alex. Fraser. 25 Gardenia blooms, J. Boyd. 25 American Beauty roses, J. B. Urquhart. 25 outdoor roses, J. B. Urquhart.

Dahlias.

Collection Cactus by private gardeners, C. M. Bugholt. Collection Cactus by commercial growers, Sisson & Thurston. 20 varieties and 12 var. C. M Bugholt. 12 Decorative and 12 Show, W. D. Hathaway. 25 single red and 25 white, J. B. Urquhart. 25 single pink, C. M. Bugholt. 25 single yellow, Sisson & Thurston. 25 red, any type, 25 pink, any type, 25 yellow, any type, 25 white and 25 any other color, C. M. Bugholt. 12 Peony flowered, Sisson & Thurston.

Fruit.

Grapes white, and grapes black, J. B. Urquhart. Peaches, Samuel Speers. Muskmelon, W. J. Matson. Apples, R. B. Almy. Other fruits, Samuel Speers.

Vegetables.

Twelve kinds of vegetables, Stumpp & Walter cup to John Fletcher. Collection of 24 varieties, A. T. Boddington prize, J. B. Urquhart.

Miscellaneous Specials.

Six vases cut flowers, John Forbes. Display outdoor flowers, also table of decorative foliage plants, James Boyd. Display of gladioli, for cup given by John Lewis Childs. E. Rollins Morse, gard. D. Foley. Weeber & Don prize for collection of tomatoes. J. Boyd. Michell silver medal for the most meritorious exhibit, J. B. Urquhart, for a handsome plant of Adiantum Farleyense gloriosa. Michell bronze medal to Alex Fraser for six large ivy plants trained in pyramid shape. Arthur Griffin of Woburn, Mass., was awarded a certificate of merit for Gloriosa Rothschildiana hybrids.

Decorative Work.

The table decorations on the third day were not equal to previous years, at least in number, but the one put up by Secretary Wm. Gray was very favorably commented on. The flowers used were Mrs. Aaron Ward roses. David Boyd, an assistant at the Vincent Astor place, also deserved much credit for winning the first prize in the R. L. Beechman class. In the three classes of fancy baskets and centre pieces Alex. Fraser was the champion.

The judges were Colin Robertson, Fred Carter and A. L. Dorward, of Newport; David McIntosh, Tuxedo Park, N. Y.; Arthur Griffin, Woburn, Mass.; and Robert Johnson, and they seemed to be as successful as judges generally are in satisfying the exhibitors.

View in Newport Autumn Exhibition

Sergeant-at Arms W. F. Smith and Secretary William Gray appear in the picture the latter standing by his tagle decoration, which was awarded first prize in the Miss F. Foster class.

The annual ball of the Newport Horticultural Society was held on the evening of the third day of the exhibition in the dance hall adjoining the one in which the show was held. This also proved to be a very successful affair in every way. The hall, a very large one, was well filled with willing dancers under the management of John T. Allan. James Robertson.

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS CLUB.

In spite of the bad night a good attendance was had Sept. 18th. The exhibition was a little disappointing as we have very few chrysanthemum growers among us and two of those had their crops in so early that they were over. A vase of well-finished Golden Glow was exhibited by Fred Spinner and an unusual specimen of staghorn fern by Wm. Aherne of Columbia.

The programme consisted of a series of short questions the first of which was, "What do you consider the best protection for carnations when first planted in?" Answered by Amos Rohrer of Strasburg. He uses a light coat of whiting on the inside of the glass and syringes it off gradually so that by the time he has syringed it the third time the glass is clean, but he added that this would not be practical in houses that leaked as the whiting would wash off very easily. Another advocated the covering of the plants with newspapers until they had taken hold, but it was considered dangerous to do this on account of the likelihood of certain weather conditions arising that would create a stem rot tendency underneath the papers. Some used lime (air-slacked) and others mud as a shading on the outside of the glass.

The next question, assigned to W. B. Girvin, of Leola, was "How late in the season do you think it would be safe to plant Beacon or any other variety in order to insure a Christmas crop." Mr. Girvin said that the earlier he planted the better results he had for December blooming. After considerable discussion pro and con the question was left undecided as one too big for the size of our Club.

Ira Landis of Paradise, Pa., was assigned to answer "What do you consider the best method of growing daises, planting them in pots, boxes or solid beds? Mr. Landis was unable to be present but the other daisy growers all seemed in favor of the solid bed system of growing them.

Rudolph Nagle gave us a very interesting talk on his question, "Give report on any early 'mums you have been growing." He has had very good success, but the writer not being up on this end of the business would only create confusion if he attempted to give a synopsis of the talk.

For the meeting of Oct. 16th, Snapdragons, Midseason Chrysanthemums and the Growing of Greens will be up for discussion. Visiting florists or of the allied trades are always welcome at these meetings. A ladies'

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The club will hold a field day on Saturday, September 27, 1913, at the Dedham Nurseries of R. & J. Farquhar & Co. Members and friends are invited to take cars to Forest Hills, where special electric cars will leave on East Walpole line for Dedham at 1.30 P. M. sharp. Running time to Elm street, where nurseries are located, is 25 minutes from Forest Hills. It is hoped that a large number of members and others interested, including ladies, will join in this field day, which should prove one of profit and interest. Cars will leave at 5 P. M. on the return journey.

UNCLAIMED PRIZES AT MINNEAPOLIS.

C. N. Ruedlinger, Chairman of the Sports Committee at Minneapolis, writes that at the outing at Lake Minnetonka, August 23rd, at the S. A. F. convention in Minneapolis, there were two girls who did not claim their prizes—one a Miss Raymers, who won third prize in the girls' race of ten years and under; the other, Miss Nelson, who won third prize in ball throwing contest. Mr. Ruedlinger is unable to locate these parties. They may have their prizes by writing to him. His address is 2924 Aldrich avenue, South.

COOK COUNTY FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

The regular meeting of the Cook Co. Illinois Florists' Association was held Sept. 18 at The Tavern, Chicago. The picnic committee reported the financial results of the recent outing. A friendly communication from the Chicago Florists' Club was read by the secretary and a motion followed that the president appoint a committee to act for the Cook Co. Florists' Association. A vote of thanks was given the New York Florists' Club for the entertainment furnished on the train to the Convention at Minneapolis.

An exhibit of hardy carnations and cannas was given by Peter Pearson of Gunnison Ave. The club listened to a talk on insurance by F. Wallace.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The St. Louis County Growers' Club will meet on Wednesday evening, Oct. 1st.

The Lady Florists' Home Circle spent a very pleasant afternoon at their meeting at Mrs. Steidle's home in Olivette, Mo. The ladies presented Mrs. Steidle with a fine set of table linen.

The Annual Flower Show of the Dobbs Ferry Horticultural Association will be held Nov. 7th and 8th, in the Town Hall, Dobbs Ferry. The schedule is now being prepared and a copy will be sent to all applicants by H. Kastberg, secretary.

One of the best exhibitions in the history of the society was the Dahlia Show of the New Bedford (Mass.) Horticultural Society on September 19. Among the large exhibitors were James Garthly, representing the H. H. Rogers estate at Fairhaven, Mrs. H. A. Jahn, W. D. Hathaway, Forbes & Keith, Mrs. T. M. Stetson, J. I. Gurney and J. P. Rooney, gardener for Mrs. Frederick Grinnell.

As announced in our advertising columns, an auction sale which we believe will interest many of our readers particularly at this time, will take place at Macniff's New York salesroom, Tuesday, September 30. It is not often that such an opportunity is presented for securing large specimen palms and similar conservatory material.

Peas.

Since our last crop news was published, more definite information has come to hand affecting peas, beans and corn. The most reliable information we have justifies the statement that peas are going to be a pretty fair crop this year, and while there may be some shortages, they will not be serious enough to cause embarrassment. There will doubtless be some shortage in the smooth varieties, such as Alaskas and Extra Earlies, but the wrinkled sorts in most instances will probably be delivered nearly full on contracts, and most of the growers will have some surpluses of different varieties. While the crop has been a very good one, growers did not sell themselves as closely as they have in former years which, of course, enables them this year to nearly or quite fill their contracts as already stated.

Beans.

We reported beans as being a somewhat uncertain proposition in our last report on crops, and the situation has not improved since then. On the contrary, owing to early frosts many crops have been seriously damaged and it is now definitely understood that there will be a considerable shortage in seed beans. It is, of course, too early as yet to state the probable deliveries in figures, and doubtless this will not be possible for some weeks yet. Inquiry among growers develops the fact that none of the prominent ones are willing to name prices on beans at present. Most of them announce that the crop will be short, and that they are unlikely to have much, if any, surplus to offer, and that it will be many weeks yet before they will be able to make a definite statement.

Corn.

The severe frosts of a week ago over the greater part of New York State proved very disastrous to corn. The crop was very late, owing to slow growth as a result of the severe drouth of the past summer, and much of it had hardly reached the canning stage when the frost caught it. We are advised that the canners had only been operating from a week to ten days, while a number had not put up a single can, and will not on this year's crop. The loss to the canners of this State will amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars. Fortunately, the frost seems to have been confined largely to New York State and portions of New England. We are also advised that it did considerable damage in Michigan. But the West, so far as we can ascertain was not affected to any appreciable extent. As the carry-over of canned corn from last year was very large, prices are not likely to rule abnormally high excepting possibly on the very fancy grades; therefore, those who are fond of this article of diet need not fear a famine, although there will be no three cans for 25 cents as has often been the rule the past season.

As to seed, the probabilities are that there will be enough to meet requirements, although all indications point to considerable advance over last year's prices. Much, of course depends on the weather from now on, and we will endeavor to keep our readers informed of the progress and development of the crop and the curing of same.

Small Seeds.

In other lines of seeds that are commonly known as "small seeds," conditions are much the same as previously reported. There are not many shortages in the line of standards, most shortages occurring among the specialties and, of course, are not as severely felt as when standard lines are hard hit as in past seasons.

Notes.

J. C. Vaughan stopped in New York a few days on his return from Europe.

W. C. Rickards is once more on the staff of J. M. Thorburn & Co., at 53 Barclay street, New York.

Incidentally J. F. Noll & Co., report a most gratifying volume of business and with its present able head, this company is bound to forge rapidly to the front.

Stumpp & Walter Co., moved into their new location at 30 and 32 Barclay St., New York, this week. The store is very spacious and well located for local trade.

The new seed house of Newark, N. J., starts under very promising auspices, Mr. Wilson being a seedsman of ripe experience while his associates are energetic business-getters. We wish them prosperity.

Burnett Bros'. new establishment at 98 Chambers street, New York, is being put into finished shape as quickly as business demands permit of. They have the entire five stories with basement and sub-basement and the location is first class.

W. A. Fisk, of Barrett's Seed House, Providence, R. I., will on October 4th celebrate his 70th birthday. He does not look the part and we are inclined to think he has counted up too fast entirely.

Chicago—Reports from all quarters would show that general satisfaction is felt with the bulbs, the last shipments of which are now coming in. Quality is exceptionally good and fine displays attract much attention to the windows of the down-town seed stores and trade is generally pronounced good.

Onion sets are slowly but surely rising in value. Growers are more than pleased with the crop in all its colors, white, yellow and red, which is said to be so hard that shrinkage will be light. Beans are not yet harvested but owing to wet weather at this time a light crop is expected.

ST. LOUIS NOTES.

George Waldbart returned last week after a summer's travels in Europe.

R. J. Windler and Mrs. Windler will spend a few weeks at Chicago, at the home of Adam Zender, Mrs. Windler's father.

The Florist Club trustees say they will enforce the new rule at the next meeting to open promptly at 2 o'clock. This was decided on at the last meeting to give the out-of-town members a chance to get home at an early hour.

Visitor: Walter Mott, representing Benj. Hammond, Beacon, N. Y.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE EXHIBITION.

The eighty-second Fair of the above was held at the Engineering Building, West 39 street, New York City, Sept. 23rd to 25th. Admission was free and consequently it was well patronized. Pity it was, it seemed to us, that exhibitions like this are not held where the great masses can see them—even to make such a school event would tend to everlastingly impress—but we have in our mind's eye the hundreds of thousands about the City Hall, many thousands of whom have window gardens and back yards and who would find delight and encouragement in a better education on flowers. The future of horticulture depends not on the obscure few—but on the broad unknown, and the millions who admire are more important than the few who own. Demonstrations of the uses to which flowers, fruit and vegetables can be put would pay, not only in increased attendance, but in lasting value to those who do attend. To have, say, a couple of artists show how to arrange the different flowers in the home—give examples of artistic arranging that would educate even those in the trade. Who can tell the ultimate influence of practical demonstrations in the variety and care of plants suitable to window gardening? There are many worlds between the greenhouse or garden and the dining room or hallway, and those connected with shows should get away from the selfish gratification of their regiments of vases and bottles. The nicety of a mud-pie is charming to the kid. Is it right to remain kiddish all one's life?

But let's get back to our job of telling you what was at this Fair. While the schedule called for a variety of things it was primarily a dahlia show, and let us here state that never a better show of dahlias was seen in New York City. Ten thousand blooms might have been about the number shown in about four hundred varieties, and considering the weather we had last week, the quality of flowers tended to amaze even the practised eye. To the optic attracted by color these myriads of shades, tones and selfs created a splendid galaxy, for in nothing else in the kingdom of flora can such colors be seen.

Isn't it about time dahlias were named and classified with some sense? Do those back-fence classifications add to present day intelligence or attract buyers? On the other hand don't they libel the flowers and denote ignorance? Think it over, ye cataloguers.

George L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I., deserves special credit for his comprehensive and splendid exhibit of a thousand blooms in all types and classes, winning ten 1sts and as many 2nds and special prizes. David Herbert & Son, Atco, N. J., rivalled this with their splendid exhibits, showing all the classes the firm is famous for, winning 1st, 2nd or special in every class for commercial growers. Head's Bergenfield Nurseries won many prizes, their paeony-flowered type being very attractive. Harold Cottam of Wappinger Falls, N. Y., captured 1st and specials in classes for 50 and 25 var. and P. W. Popp, gardener to H. Darlington, Mamaroneck, N. Y., deservedly won 1st for his fifty magnificent varieties of glory star type in the class for private gardeners. Chas. S. Gall, Paterson, N. J., added to the list of prize winners with many well displayed lots. That old veteran, Jas. Kirby, gardener to Wm. J. Matheson, Huntington, L. I., got his full share of 1sts and 2nds. John Lewis Childs of Flowerfield, L. I., got his share of notice from the public by exhibiting a new white show dahlia he named Dee-lighted. Forbes & Keith, New Bedford, Mass.; Richard Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., Whitemarsh, Md., and J. P. Sorenson, gardener to Wm. Shilleber, Essex Falls, N. J., were all creditably represented and duly rewarded.

Exhibits in gladioli were few, Mr. Popp winning first in both classes; John Lewis Childs, second. Herman H. Baer, New Hyde Park, L. I., exhibited a group of pink gladiolus, a seedling of May × Shakespeare in form and color resembling "Scribe," for which he was awarded a special. John Lewis Childs made miscellaneous exhibits of montbretias and hardy flowers to which specials were awarded.

Julius Roehrs Co. were the only exhibitors in groups of orchids and decorative plants and took all in that section. Many beautiful bits of orchids were in their groups. Lager & Hurrell came in late with three specimen orchids—three dainty queens which won specials.

In roses Chas. H. Totty got a special on a white seedling of My Maryland and first on 25 blooms of Mrs. Shawyer which were easily the best roses there. also first on yellow with "Sunburst." W. H. Maginnis, W. H. Waite and R Hughes were the other winners.

Herbaceus flowers from Wm. Duckham, early chrysanthemums from Messrs. Totty and Swenson, apples and pears from Mrs. W. P. Masten, Harold Cottam, Wm. Dowlen and Jas. Kirby; grapes from E. E. Corby, Dehn & Bently, and vegetables from Wm. Dowlen, Jas. Stevens, J. G. P. Kennedy, E Bertolf, Mrs. Masten, H. B. Fullerton and A. Macdonald—all these were worthy and suitably recognized, but after all it was a dahlia show and a good one. Much credit must be given to hard-working Secretary Eagleson, and Manager Billy Rickards. The judges were Peter Duff, Alex. McKenzie, Ed. Reagan and J. J. McNicols. None better.

E. S. MILLER RETIRES FROM THE BULB BUSINESS.

E. S. Miller, from whose bulb and hardy perennial gardens at Wading River, N. Y., so many meritorious things have been exploited, announces that he has sold his entire stock of bulbs and hardy plants, the purchaser being John Lewis Childs of Flowerfield, N. Y. The stock includes about three hundred seedling gladioli which Mr. Miller has been selecting with critical care for the past eight years and which have not yet been disseminated. When they do appear something good may be looked for.

In the future Mr. Miller will devote his time to fruits and general seed growing. He will continue to live at the old homestead in Wading River and we wish him many years of happinesss and comfort in his semi-retirement.

The above advt. is one of a series of paid advts that Penn the Florist, of Boston, is publishing weekly, alternating in the four florists' papers, to become better acquainted with the florists of the country. These advts have been published daily in the different Boston papers. Any florist desiring to use same in his home town, may do so without further consent. These advts. have been the means of establishing our present great volume of business.

CHICAGO NOTES.

E. E. Peiser is home after a long absence.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Vaughan are expected home about October 1st.

F. F. Benthey, for several years with Kyle & Foerster, is now with Zech & Mann.

One of the down-town florists has a window in green and yellow, a pretty suggestion of early fall.

Harry Rowe will leave his present location on Monroe street, Oct. 1st, and move to the second floor, at the northeast corner of Washington street and Wabash avenue, where he will include both the wholesale and retail branches of the business.

The Abest flower store, 3345 W. North avenue, was opened Sept. 15. The proprietors are L. Hoekner of Peter Reinberg's and C. S. Stewart, formerly with W. W. Barnard Co. Both are well known to the trade and have the good will of all.

Wm. Graff will take charge of the retail store for Sam Pearse at the Clybourne Ave. place where Mr. Pearse has been for many years. The new place on Higgins' Road is now about complete and is a model plant of the latest methods of construction.

A smaller quantity of decorative stock is employed than usual in the large department store openings this week. Very little, even of prepared green was used and Asparagus plumosa in limited amount is the only natural green seen. An absence of grapes, berries, etc., is noticed and extreme simplicity rules.

A light frost, the first of the season, visited this vicinity early Monday, the 22nd, causing but slight damage. The following night, the record of the coldest weather for the time of the year was made, when the growers all about the city found their thermometers registering 28 degrees and excepting in sheltered places out door flowers were destroyed.

Visitors: R. Karlstrom, of W. A. Manda, So. Orange, N. J.; Henry Ilg Winnetka, Ill.; A. C. Reicher, Michigan City, Ind.; Roy Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia.; H. W. Voss, Council Bluffs, Ia.; F. X. Gorley, Nat. Kingsley, Mr. Seegar, Miss Armstrong and Henry Ostertag, all from St. Louis, Mo.; B. Shroeter, Detroit, Mich.; Luke Collins, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Brighter skies and brighter prospects are the verdict for this week. The stock of flowers coming in is much shortened up and the quality is not any too good after the dark rainy period which has interposed since our last report. Asters are about finished, due to stress of weather and attention is now diverted to the carnation and rose in consequence. Good prices are realized for whatever few asters are offered and the value of carnations has taken a distinctly upward turn. Roses are not up to quality shown before the equinoxial disturbance, being off color and soft and they have made no advance thus far in market value. Cattleyas are beginning to appear in greater numbers and prices have eased up. Gladioli are still with us and selling satisfactorily. Dahlias fairly abundant but they are not called for to any extent.

BUFFALO Weather conditions have been one day summer and the next a drizzling rain or cold and cloudy and business is rather uneven. As for stock, the receipts have been heavy on asters, gladioli, dahlias and roses, the latter coming on a little too fast. About all the winter varieties are coming in including the tiny Cecille Brunner or Mignon. Beauties are good and enough of them. All grades are had and the shorter ones sell best. Lilies are a little between crops and carnations are coming on more plentiful each day.

CHICAGO The market is very shy on all flowers except asters, gladioli and the miscellaneous out-of-door stock, cut because of the coming frost. Asters are supposed to be limited to one more week and where the frost was severe the season for cutting is now over. All roses sell readily, the supply of good ones being insufficient to meet the demand, much to the regret of the wholesalers, who are seen hurrying from place to place to get the stock for their orders. The price on carnations has gone up with a bound—three dollars for any good stock, while the few fancy ones have brought as high as five dollars per hundred. A few cattleyas are in the market. Dendrobium formosum blooms bring $6 per doz. and oncidiums from $2 to $4 per 100. Chrysanthemums are cut in larger quantities each day—October Frost and Golden Glow the only varieties so far. Lilies are still too scarce for the demand, lily of the valley about equal to the call and gardenias out of the question for a few weeks more.

CINCINNATI The close of last week and the first days of this week gave us the first touch of real cool weather this year. On Monday night there was a light frost in some exposed places. Up to this time, however, no damage from same has been reported. There is a fair and active demand in the market. The supply, although it has shortened considerably, is still easily sufficient for requirements. Shipping trade is very good. As fast as the asters and gladioli have been going out just so fast has the demand swerved to roses and carnations. The quality of the roses is very good. American Beauties and pink roses are selling the best. Carnations, too, are and have been improving until now most are of a very creditable quality. Lily receipts are rather limited in number but are exceptionally good. The cut of dahlias does not seem to be very large at this writing. All blooms of quality have been selling readily at fair prices.

NEW YORK

There are plenty of roses, at least, in all the wholesale stores but most of them belong to the underworld of rosedom, to judge by their appearance. Clearing skies and cooler weather may yet give them a little more style than they possess at present, not to mention the mildew which seems to have hit some of the experts while they were looking the other way. There are a good many asters still in sight but not many of them are any credit to their race. Gladioli are also on the downward grade and very near the jumping off place. Dahlias are making a brave effort to fill the vacancy but they haven't the quality to land them anywhere. As a rule they are a very bedraggled tribe this year. Cattleyas are coming in now in abundance, the labiata season being on. Lilies fairly plentiful but holding their own as to price. A few chrysanthemums everywhere, acceptable as to quality for so early a date. Carnations are gradually coming into the field of vision and the situation favors them for the moment. Isn't it about time for the distinguished gentleman with the first bunch of violets to walk in?

PHILADELPHIA

Business in the flower trade here has improved very much during the past week. Things were a little sluggish at the start but by the end good business was being done and there was very little surplus. Dahlias were a dominant feature and sell better than they have done so far this season. Roses plentiful and good with excellent demand. White roses—also Radiance and American Beauty leading. There are also some very choice pink Kallarney coming in. Among the new ones we have to chronicle the advent of Mrs. Chas. Russell and Johnkheer Mock. These meet with generous approval from the buyers and are a welcome addition. The old-time talk of lack of variety in the commercial rose market is now a thing of the past. Carnations are improving a little, but the bulk are still lacking in stem. Mrs. Ward seems to be the best so far. Orchids are in with a rush and the bottom has fallen out. Cattleyas dropped from seventy to forty cents in a twinkling. Lily of the valley, Easter lilies, white chrysanthemums and nearly all white flowers have sold themselves—in fact more could have been used. Buyers were begging for them at times.

ST. LOUIS

With cooler weather the market looked much better during the past week. Quality has toned up considerably. The continuous rain put a crimp in the retail trade and the opening of fall was not as good as was expected by the store men. Roses are of good quality and bring from $3 to $8 per 100 with values stiffening up. Carnations are not as yet up to the standard and only a few of the long stemmed ones are coming in. Other stock, such as asters, gladioli, tuberoses, lily of the valley and Easter lilies make up the daily market stock at present. Should the cool weather continue prices will go up on all grades of stock.

QUARANTINE UPON POTATOES.

Washington, September 22.—Notwithstanding the fact that potatoes have been placed on the free list in the new tariff bill, the recent action of the Federal Horticultural Board in continuing indefinitely the quarantine against potatoes from the British Isles, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Newfoundland, and St. Pierre and Miquelon, the principal sources of outside supply, makes it improbable that there will be any reduction in the price of that staple article of food. The object of the quarantine, which was first imposed just a year ago, is to prevent the introduction into the United States of a dangerous potato disease, now unknown in this country. This disease is known as the potato wart, the potato canker, or black scab, and is prevalent in the above-mentioned countries.

This notice is of considerable import to potato growers, as it not only insures their crops from the ravages of this disease, but also may affect the price of potatoes. Our potato crops are accustomed to vary greatly, running from a great shortage one year to a great surplus the next. The quarantine shuts off practically all supply from abroad—though it may be noted that it does not affect potatoes from Bermuda or Canada—and means that we shall have to produce practically all the potatoes we consume for an indefinite length of time. The year before this quarantine order was issued (in 1911) there was an importation of 13,000,000 bushels of foreign potatoes into the United States.

A communication from the London Bureau of Agriculture, transmitted through the British embassy and our State Department, has recently asked that this quarantine against potatoes be raised or modified. The Federal Horticultural Board, however, has ruled that the risk of introducing new diseases into the United States is too great to justify a change. A considerable area in England and Scotland is more or less infected with wart disease, and these infected districts adjoin Liverpool and other ports from which shipments would be made to the United States. The quarantine against Ireland is particularly important, because of the existence there of certain potato diseases known as powdery scab and pink tuber rot. These diseases also exist in the other countries placed under quarantine.

Regarding the importation of European potatoes for seed, the Department finds that practically all European varieties are unfit for culture in the United States, as compared with the best of our own. The Board holds that it is detrimental for American agriculture to encourage the sale and use of foreign seed potatoes (as was done by dealers prior to the quarantine), because of their relative lack of vigor and productivity in the local fields.

The Board also states that the present condition of the 1913 potato crop in the United States is, on the whole, most promising. It does not seem apparent at this date that market conditions will require an importation of potatoes into the United States this winter.—New York Evening Telegram.

DAHLIA SHOW AT MICHELL'S.

Over two hundred varieties of dahlias were exhibited on the occasion of the fifth annual show of the H. F. Michell Co., held at their seed store in Philadelphia, the 23rd, 24th, 25th and 26th inst. Most of these were grown at the Michell nursery at Andalusia, Pa., and proved a great attraction to the public—besides being of educative and commercial value. In addition to this the store's customers were invited to compete for prizes in dahlias and other flowers, also vegetables, and some very good displays resulted from this. Among the prominent prize winners were William Robertson, John Little, Robert Morrow, George Zinn, William H. Hart, David Aiken, N. McGranaghan, Stephen Aiger, J. J. Burleigh and Wm. Norris. A fine collection of hardy outdoor flowers came from W. S. Mason, Farmington, Conn., and was awarded a special prize. The judges were Joseph Hurley, Haverford, Pa.; Peter H. Lane, M. D., Chestnut Hill, and George C. Watson, Philadelphia.

The show was free to the public. All of the employees worked hard to make it a success, but special mention is due to Messrs. Freud, Fuld and Bradley.

FIREPLACE DAYS.

Fireplace days, and O, how sweet
Around the flaming log to meet
The sunshine of a hundred years
To burn away our sighs and fears,
With leaping spark and golden tongue
Of flame to fill the room with young.
Old fireplace days come back, come back,
With sweetheart eyes to look from dream
Into the old log burning there,
Bright with the ruddy fireplate gleam!

Fireplace days, and here we are
Beneath the golden Autumn star,
The fiddle tuned, the cider drawn,
The old floor waxed, the sand spread on
And light hearts waking to the blaze
Of backlogs in the fireplace days.
Old fireplace days, so full and rich
With memories loved and old,
Of sweethearts in the lanes of life
Worth all their weight in gold!

Fireplace days, and ain't it fine
To watch the old brass andiron shine,
And click the tongs and see the coals
Flip off as Mister Backlog rolls
Down from his perch, half burned in two,
To spread his broad smile wide for you.
Old fireplace days, and goodby chill
When here the warm glow of the fire
Burns in the hearts that love it still,
The homelight of love's old desire!

Why HORTICULTURE has stood the test as a profitable Advertising medium for the trade.

Because It is read by the men of standing and influence in the Horticultural field, every one of whom is a prospective buyer.

Why HORTICULTURE is so widely read.

Because Its contents are distinctly representative of American Horticulture and are thus indispensable to the Florist, Nurseryman, Seedsman and Gardener.

An Admirer of HORTICULTURE in the Central West writes; "It has won on its merits. It is our most prized weekly visitor."

And Now You See How HORTICULTURE has managed to elbow its way in between its older rivals and why the best trade advertisers find it an indispensable auxiliary.

It's No Secret That the men who read HORTICULTURE are the sort of men that advertisers like to talk to and if you have anything to advertise you can't afford to get along without them

NEWS NOTES.

West Grove, Pa.—Burgess John B. Tanguy has purchased of A. Spark Watkins the Guernsey avenue greenhouses, for some time owned and operated by the latter, possession given at once. The property includes a chain of greenhouses with four acres attached, chiefly devoted to growing and shipping chrysanthemums and carnations. Price $2,700.

New York—Quite a number of floral people had a narrow escape from injury in the wreck of the Whitestone, College Point trains, last week, in which three persons were killed and many hurt. Among those who helped to extricate the injured were P. J. Smith, James Coyle and Frank Goldsmith. Frank Zuber was among those who were hurt but fortunately his injuries were not very serious.

Walter Mott's Notes by the Way

St. Louis, Mo.

Geo. Waldbart has returned from a European trip and is giving to the press his impressions of the great exhibition in Ghent and experiences elsewhere, which will undoubtedly help the business. He is more than ever in favor of home-grown stock.

J. J. Beneke talks of retiring from business in the, we hope, distant future, for the genial secretary of the Florists' Club is ever ready to impart any news of importance and his store is the Mecca of every traveling man who calls on the craft here.

The Schisler-Corneli Seed Co. are doing an immense business in grasses, which are treated scientifically and thoroughly tested in a testing house built for that purpose. They also experiment with fertilizers and insecticides, thus being able to advise their patrons intelligently.

The craft are busy with store openings in which artificial flowers mingle with natural plants. This is unavoidable, for apart from a few early chrysthemums, Advance and Golden Glow, seen farther south, the supply of blooming stock is at present very limited. The sharp change in the weather will undoubtedly be beneficial all around.

Obituary

A. D. Perry.

Aziel D. Perry, a well-known horticulturist in Central New York, died Sept. 17, at Syracuse, at the age of seventy-four.

Louis Stieffel.

Louis Stieffel, aged 71 years, and for the last thirty years a well-known florist at 1932 Third avenue, New York, died September 13th. He is survived by his widow.

Joseph Emory Arnold.

Joseph Emory Arnold, florist, died September 5th, at his home in Tyrone, Pa., aged 55 years. The business will be continued by his three sons under the name of Arnold Bros.

John Spencer Williams.

John S. Williams, of Providence, R. I., died on Thursday, September 18, aged 70 years. Mr. Williams was an amateur patron of horticulture, active and useful in the affairs and work of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society at whose shows he was a frequent exhibitor of garden flowers, and with whose members he was very popular personally.

George McWilliam.

George McWilliam, head gardener at George Marston Whitin's estate, and known as an originator and grower of rare plants, died at his home in Whitinsville, Mass., Saturday morning, September 13, aged 67 years and two months. His death was caused by bladder trouble. About two years ago Mr. McWilliam sustained a fall and since that time had been in failing health. Five weeks previous to his death he was operated on at the New England Baptist Hospital, Boston, and a week before he died was brought to his home.

Mr. McWilliam was born at Culroach Farm, Inch, Wigtonshire, Scotland, and came to the United States in 1872. He was employed on the R. M. Pratt estate at Mt. Auburn, Mass., under the late David Allan, until 1884, when he went to take charge of the gardens of Josiah Lasell, and has been with the Lasell-Whitin family ever since.

Mr. McWilliam was especially successful as a hybridizer and grower of calanthes, dipladenias, grapes and other hothouse specialties, some of which have been illustrated in HORTICULTURE from time to time, he being also a frequent contributor to our reading columns. A very large number of gold and silver medals and certificates adorned his library and were to him a source of great pride. He was a member of the Massachusetts and Worcester Horticultural Societies and acted as judge at many of the flower and fruit shows of these and other societies, including the International Flower Show at New York last spring.

George McWilliam was a man deeply in love with his work and in knowledge of the science of plant growing stood in the first rank. He was very retiring in manner and unassuming, yet sturdy in his convictions. His sterling honesty, sympathetic nature and kindly ways placed him high in the esteem of his fellow gardeners and florists and he will be sadly missed in the town where he lived so long and among his horticultural associates. The funeral was held on September 16, with Masonic ceremonies.

He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Isabelle McCrea; a brother, Alexander, in Nova Scotia, and two sisters in Scotland.

"LEAVES NOTHING TO BE DESIRED"

So Speaks Chas. Umbach, former Gardener for Mr. S. J. Hyde, Greenwich, Conn.

THIS is a particularly attractive and practical little lean-to proposition.

The half timbered cottage in combination with field stone and our curved eave greenhouse is a source of delight to the owner and the pride of Mr. Umbach. Here's what he says of it.

"I'm glad to say that the curved eave house erected by Lord & Burnham proved fully that it was the right house to build both for pleasure and service. It gave excellent satisfaction. Your method of construction leaves nothing to be desired."

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Irises

There is no better time for planting than within the next four weeks. Work the soil over one foot, or, better still, 15 inches deep; pulverize it thoroughly, add a liberal amount of well-rotted manure, it matters little whether from cows or horses. If the soil is a stiff clay, as is the case with us, a good dose of sand is a splendid thing to incorporate into it. Fall-planted irises produce better flowers the first season than if transplanted in spring. They can be planted from 12 to 18 inches apart each way. A collection of German, English and Japanese iris will give a long succession of flowers.

Lilium Formosum

The lily grower, the man who grows thousands of them for Easter, who figures on the number of buds the plant will produce to judge whether a certain sort is more profitable to grow than another will find these lilies very useful, for they produce freely flowers of a fine type, with excellent texture. They can be potted singly into 6-inch pots. Give them a good watering after they are planted, but afterwards let them dry out before giving any more water, as the bulbs will rot if given too much. The best place to stand the pots is in a frame on some coal ashes, where they can remain until cool weather arrives. The earlier ones should be picked out and given a place as near the glass as accommodation will permit in a house of about 60 degrees at night and they will be useful during January and February when flowers are not so plenty. So long as the bulbs are started early and you have a pot full of roots, and good growth by February, the rest is easy.

Otaheite Orange

These desirable Christmas subjects should now be given a place on the sunniest bench with temperature from 52 to 58 at night. Place them far enough apart to admit the sunlight and turn them around frequently so that every side will get the benefit of some sun. Plants that are in healthy condition will take a good deal of moisture out of the soil so they should be examined each day to see which need to be watered, as some will require a more liberal supply than others. Attend well to day temperature, keeping it as near 70 to 72 as possible during sunny days. Give syringings once a day now and do it good as it will be a great help in keeping down scale and mealy bug. By all means strive to keep free of these pests if you want highly finished plants. When pots are well filled with roots give liquid manure once or twice a week.

Orchids

Now when we are liable to have spells of dark and rainy weather we shall have to be very careful about watering orchids. A good rule to follow in whatever watering you do is to let it be done fairly early in the morning, which will give them a chance to dry out some before the night. Shading can be reduced now as they will be better for all the light they can get. All such orchids as cattleyas, laelias, cœlogynes, odontoglossums, dendrobiums, miltonias, etc., can stand full sun by the middle of October. From this out overhead syringing should be gradually discontinued. Where syringing is carried on, let it be done in the mornings of bright days and only in the form of a fine misty spray. Give ventilation whenever possible as they all enjoy plenty of fresh air, outside those of the East Indian and tropical kinds. Make it a point to change the air at least once a day.

Peonies

The peonies are perfectly hardy and so robust that they grow well in any ordinary garden soil. However, they furnish the best flowers when planted in good, deep-trenched ground, and in situations where the soil retains a moderate degree of dampness. If the soil be poor, it should be copiously mixed with rich old manure. Cow manure is the best for all light soils. Manure must not come into direct contact with roots. The best time for planting peonies is September and October as soon as the temperature is cool enough for the plants to be sent without damage. Plant at least four feet apart each way and not too near voracious shrubs, the roots of which exhaust the soil. The plants should be inserted with the crowns or dormant buds about three inches below the surface and should then be well watered if it is at all dry.

Stock Plants of Chrysanthemums

As the different varieties are cut and the stock roots lifted and boxed up do not place them under the bench but give them a frame where they can have all the sun possible. Later on they can be given a bench in a light but cool house. When treated this way they will produce from 30 to 35 cuttings from each root.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Chrysanthemums; Campanulas; Lilies for Christmas; Planting Phlox; Perennial Borders; Preparing for Cold Weather.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Care of Late Vinery

Watch the berries closely here to determine when they are ripe so that the temperature and general care of the house can be adjusted to favor their keeping in good condition a maximum length of time. It will be difficult to determine an approximate date for ripening in the different sections of the country, as so much will depend on the latitude and the heat of the summer months. This house is usually kept back as long as possible in spring and grown as cool as is practical throughout, which will make our friends in the north a month or more behind those further south. Keep the house going nicely until finished up, when a cooler and drier atmosphere will be more congenial to their welfare. Do not make the mistake so often made of keeping the border dry immediately the berries are ripe. It is a mistaken idea as a little thought will reveal. If the roots are dried out they cannot furnish the necessary amount of sap to keep the berries plump. This can be misconstrued and anyone is liable to think a real wet border is the ideal. No, that is not the point; when a vine border is dry give it water even though ripe fruit is hanging. Some varieties are given to split a few berries about the time they are ripening. Look out for these and remove them before they damage any of the perfect ones.

Prune Pot-Trees

As a preliminary to the general overhauling these trees are to have, the necessary pruning can be done before they are removed from their summer quarters. Plunged as they are to the rim of the pot and spaced so that it is an easy matter to get around them, no time is better for pruning. There is a direct opposition in the method employed to prune trees that are grown in pots to those that are growing on the trellis. The former should be kept pyramidal in shape, making a center or leader essential, while trellis trees are best with the center left open. When disbudding was properly attended to in the spring there will be very little wood to be cut out. Remove any that is crossing a neighbor, also any that makes the trees unshapely. Shape should always be considered, as a one-sided tree is not profitable, but the greatest factor is the fruiting buds for next spring. A tree having plenty can be put into good shape but where they are scarce we sometimes reluctantly have to leave all the wood bearing the promise of a crop next year. At the time of disbudding some of these can often be removed if there is enough to make a crop without the fruit they carry. Use a sharp knife for all pruning.

The First Frost

The first frost is welcomed more in the early fruit houses than elsewhere, coming as it does to herald a few weeks' rest for the tired subjects found there. It is generally noticeable that we get one frost of sufficient severity to cut down all tender growth, after which we are exempt for a short while. This has often been our experience. I do not think it is wise to let the first or second frost cut in on the vines and trees that are more tender than those growing outside; rather let them down gradually. Put a minimum of 35 deg. on them for a while and after they have gone down to this two or three times let them have all that is coming for a while.

Crowding Plants in the Fruit Houses

With the advent of frost it is a common occurrence to see the fruit houses crowded out with flowering plants or shrubs. In many instances this is unavoidable and is no great detriment to the vines for a short time so long as they are free from the many pests that we are continually fighting. It is most disappointing to a man after warring against mealy bug say for instance, all the growing season through, and promising them all he knows from his undertaker's dictionary during the winter cleaning to find a new and vigorous stock imported into his domain through the intrusion of plants that are infested. It is of no use to say syringe them with some insecticide or other or fumigate them and the bugs are all dead. Some will go as far as to tell you to give them a good syringing with the hose and that is the end of them. Is it? Where do they go to? Bug is a hard thing to get rid of, once it is in a vinery or peach house. If your houses are clean now, keep them so and take no chances of getting them infested.

Winter Cucumbers

Keep the winter cucumbers going along all the time; any check will take some time to be made up. Frequent top dressings are much better than a large quantity at any one time. Use the best loam procurable, broken up into small lumps. Mix in two parts of rough leaf soil to every three of loam and add a little fresh horse manure. It is not necessary to make this very firm; a gentle pressing with the hands will be sufficient. Keep a sharp lookout for red spider, as they will do a great amount of damage in a short time.

Parsley

Parsley will be needed on every private place during the winter months and provision should be made at once to accommodate some of it in the greenhouse or heated frames so that it will take hold of the soil in its new quarters and make a little growth before the short days set in. If no sowing was made especially for it remove some of the latest sowing from the garden. Protect a few rows of the best growing in the garden and later on they can have some dry leaves thrown over them which will furnish a supply until the real bad weather sets in.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Cuttting

Now that the cooler weather is here to stay, as we may safely say, you cannot make a greater mistake than to cut your roses too tight. A trip through the cut flower market last week displayed a large amount of roses cut practically green, that would take a long time to look anything like what fresh cut roses should. They will open, of course, but they will never be near as large as the roses that have been allowed to develop their full size before they are cut and shipped off to the markets, where they will no doubt bring much less than the large buds. American Beauties, especially, will be found harder to dispose of than the ones that will be cut when they ought to be. Do not, however, let them go too far, for the market has no use for overblown roses.

Packing

As much as has been said and written on this subject, much stock is practically ruined by being very carelessly packed for shipment and, as a result, the roses appear in the market bruised and broken. Growers should remember that the roses have to be handled a number of times before they finally arrive at the homes of the people who buy them, and then they can picture how they would look if they leave their greenhouses all bruised. Handle them as carefully as possible, and instruct all your men to do the same. Men who really take interest in their work, and who have the welfare of their business at heart, will hardly have to be instructed in their ways. With new and inexperienced help, it is different, and the training of the proper methods should begin at once, for once the system is learned the men will not do wrong, as a rule.

Mulching the Early Houses

The early planted houses will now be pretty well cut off the first crop and as soon as the breaks begin to appear a little bone meal may be applied, followed by a light mulch of manure. This being the second, the dose need not be as heavy as the preceding mulch. After watering it into the benches it is well to allow the plants to become a little dry before the second watering is given. The object is to allow the new breaks to strengthen sufficiently before they are forced to grow up fast. Should they be forced from the time that they are starting, a large number of them will be weak and will not have the stem that well-grown stock should possess.

The Proper Height to Cut Beauties

In cutting Beauties it is well to remember that the higher they are cut from the bench the harder the wood below the cut will become. And the harder the wood the more difficult it will be for the sap to flow up to the growths above the so formed joint. Also the plants will be more inclined to break from the bottom, than where the wood can be kept soft all the way down to the soil in the benches. We try to have the first wire about a foot above the bench, and then we cut two eyes above the first wire, except in the very front row, where the breaks coming from below can be cut two eyes from the nearest joint, as is the case with Teas. We would even have the wire lower but for the fact that it is hard to get at the bench, where the plants are planted four rows to the bench.

The Yellow Leaves

It is almost too early in the season to look for these, and yet they will be likely to appear here and there. Keep these picked off the plants as much as possible. Special time should be given to this work, for although it looks very useless, still it does away with a hiding place for insects and fungus spores. It will also add appearance to the plants, as is needless to say. Keep a close watch for the spot, and you will be killing two birds with the one stone.

Feeding the Plants with Manure Rich in Nitrogen

In using manures which are known to contain large amounts of nitrogen great care should be exercised so as not to apply too much of this manure at one time. This would not hurt the plants very much later in the season, when the temperature of the houses can be controlled, but now when the thermometer is bound to run up on the clear warm days, it is better to go slow, for an overdose of this would mean soft plants, and soft plants are very hard to keep clean during the dark, damp spells that our climate seems to be subject to. Another reason for withholding the nitrogen is that the plants will likely produce weak stems, which are very undesirable in the flower trade as a rule. And the weak stems do not end there either, for they can be traced into the next crop, as the growths will not be as strong as the ones from good strong eyes, on good sturdy wood.

Repairing the Broken Glass

Only a few weeks left in which this can be done right, and growers should lose no time in getting their houses repaired. Happy the man where a pane of glass is put in at once, right after being broken, and the job is not put off until sometime when there is little to do. This usually means when the first snow begins to blow in and then the night fireman is usually the one who has the honor to do with all kinds of remarks that which should have been done long ago. Lantern light, and cold weather does not go with glass repairing very well, and generally a few panes of glass are broken, for as is very likely there is not a decent glass cutter on the place, and the glass will not fit. A good glass cutter can be had for ten cents, so invest a dollar now and then in glass cutters, and reduce the amount of glass used on the place for repair work.

An uncracked nut

According to the Minneapolis Journal, fruit growers of that State are permitting thousands of bushels of the finest apples to rot on the ground because prices offered do not warrant the orchardists in gathering and marketing them. Apples in Newark Centre Market are quoted at from twenty-five to forty cents a half-peck, or from $2 to $3.20 a bushel. The farmer can't afford to market his apples because of low prices and the public can't afford to buy them because of high prices. Seems to be something wrong here somewhere.—Newark Evening News.

If the foregoing is true—and we have no reason to doubt it—there certainly is "something wrong somewhere." And when we read in one of our contemporaries that French-Roman hyacinths are unobtainable and in another contemporary of same date that there is a surplus of these bulbs in French hands, "there is something wrong somewhere." And, again, when we see flowers piled up in wholesale markets or lugged away by street speculators at bargain counter prices while, according to reports, other places are suffering from a flower famine, isn't it reasonable to infer that "there is something wrong somewhere?" Respectfully passed along without further comment to the "Publicity Committee."

Vicious tactics

Referring to the practice of renaming or misbranding varieties of plants, concerning which we wrote in condemnation in a recent issue, we should suppose that all fair-minded and honorable men would agree as to the grievous injury inflicted on the business by the indulgence in such tactics. We are, therefore, greatly surprised to have one correspondent assert as a sort of justification, that this renaming business "is constantly done by all growers" of a certain specialty. How many there may be who believe likewise we know not but it is much to be deplored that even one of the horticultural fraternity should harbor such a wretched opinion of his fellow-workers. Besides, the charge is not true. There are exceptional cases where the renaming is done and the parties who are guilty are the sufferers in the long run because they soon become marked men in the trade. Statements in their catalogues are accepted at a discount and their specialties, if bought at all, are bought with mistrust. Instead of condoning, it is the duty of everyone to raise his voice in condemnation and to do his best by influence and example to put a stop to this evil which has so often in the past brought confusion and discredit to our business.

"United we stand"

We are pleased to note that the joint committee of the New York State Federation of Florists' Clubs, State Vegetable Growers' Association, State Fruit Growers' Association and Western New York Horticultural Society are promptly getting busy under their indomitable chairman, W. F. Kasting, on their assigned duty to endeavor to secure a new horticultural building at the state fair grounds in Syracuse. The horticulturists of the Empire State should have a creditable exhibition building. The acquiring of such will serve as an example and incentive to other states and we wish the committee and the organizations which they represent all the success they deserve, but perhaps the most hopeful and promising feature of this movement is the alliance of all these related but hitherto segregated interests for united effort in a common cause. It is indeed strange that the diversified horticultural interests of the country have not recognized the value of associated work and the advantage to be gained by the strength of numbers. If the co-operative spirit now manifested should continue and grow we can see how horticultural industry will quickly come into its own as a potent force in state and nation.

OUTDOOR FRUIT AND VEGETABLES

Preparing for Next Season's Work

October is a great month for preparing for next season's work. The ground is usually fairly dry and in far better condition for working than in early spring. If your garden has any spots which you remember were a little too wet last spring now is the time to get in a tile drain to the nearest convenient outlet. Three inch tile will be large enough as well as small enough, and don't forget to put it down at least four feet below the surface.

Potash Manuring

Because there is great danger from burning if high-grade sulphate or muriate of potash is used in spring it is far better to "do it now," so as fast as the ground is cleared of crops sow 200 pounds per acre of either of the above forms of potash and its burning qualities will be all washed away by the time of next growing season's advent.

Lime

Where quantities of farm-yard manure has been used on the garden year after year an annual application of about a half-ton per acre of fine ground or air-slaked lime will be very beneficial, in fact a necessity. It is a good plan to apply this dressing as evenly as possible over the surface and then rake or harrow it in.

Basic Slag (Phosphatic Manure)

If basic slag is used as a source of phosphoric acid (and it is at once one of the cheapest and best sources) it should always be applied in autumn if results are to be expected during the following growing season. Insist upon a finely ground sample, otherwise it will be very slow in producing results. From 10 to 20 hundred pounds to the acre is about the right amount.

The foregoing recommendations for the garden proper are especially applicable to the orchard and all the small bush fruit trees such as currants, raspberries, etc.

Transplanting and Pruning

The small fruit bushes such as currants and gooseberries are very apt to grow on until their condition is like unto the slums of the great cities—"overcrowded." Look them over carefully and if they are approaching this condition, get busy! And either lift some of the plants and replant where conditions are better or else go in with the pruning knife and cut away all of the old wood which has fruited and even some of the younger wood if necessary so as to give the remaining branches abundance of sun and air. Raspberries should have had all their old fruiting canes cut away ere this, but if this has not been done certainly no time should be lost in carrying it out as the young canes which are to fruit next year will be sure to stand the winter better for the ripening they will get from the increased exposure to the sun.

Globe Artichokes

Select those plants which gave the finest samples of product and mark them to be lifted later for next year's stock, as this is the only way to get the finer types as amongst nearly every lot of seedlings there are a lot of worthless kinds.

PLANT LABORATORY AT THE COLLEGE OF PHARMACY, UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA, ST. PAUL, MINN.

(See Cover Illustration.)

In order to pass upon the identity and quality of vegetable drugs and their preparations, the pharmacist must have a thorough understanding of the plants from which the drugs are obtained. The Medicinal Plant Garden is maintained by the College of Pharmacy primarily to increase the facilities of the college in giving instruction of this character. Over 70 per cent of the plants yielding official drugs are under cultivation and several hundred species yielding unofficial drugs are also grown.

The value of the drug garden as an educational factor has been so clearly demonstrated during the past two years that a medicinal plant laboratory has just been completed wherein the work of studying medicinal plants will be continued through the winter months and where tropical medicinal plants will be grown. This laboratory, which has the outward appearance of a greenhouse or palm house, is 38 x 61 feet in size, with two floors. The superstructure represents the latest type of the Lord & Burnham steel frame, curved-eave greenhouse construction, with the ridge 26 feet above the floor, allowing ample room for growing tropical medicinal trees.

The upper or main floor will be used exclusively for the culture and study of the growing plants. The arrangement of the plant benches and students' work tables is unique in that over 2500 square feet of space is available. This large amount of space was secured by placing the students' work tables, which are of concrete, around the sides and by constructing a large open pyramid in the center of the house for the plants. Under the pyramid provision has been made for shade-loving plants and for starting roots from the cold storage room, etc. A large concrete aquarium, conveniently located, gives ample room for aquatic plants. In the fall of the year the pyramid will be packed with medicinal plants potted in the garden by students and these will be used for study during the winter. The potted plants having been used up by early spring, the space is then devoted to the propagation of new plants for the garden, over 20,000 of which were produced during the past spring. Steam coils are located under the various plant benches, each on separate valves, hot and cold water faucets, and electricity for light and power are provided, giving complete facilities for the determination of the effects of physiological factors upon the medicinal value of plants.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

NEW JERSEY FLORICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The eighth annual Dahlia, Fruit and Vegetable Show of the above society was held in English's banquet hall, East Orange, N. J., on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 27 and 28. The hall was completely filled with exhibits, making this the best show the society has yet held. The weather proved fine both days, making the attendance from neighboring towns very good indeed.

List of Awards.

Hitchings & Co. cup for 36 dahlias in 12 vars.: H. Darlington, gard. P. W. Popp; 2nd prize to Mrs. H. Graves, gard. E. Thomas; 3rd, D. Kindsgrab, J. Lewis Childs cup for 50 single dahlias: Mrs. Wm. Barr, gard. E. Panuska. Michell Co. medal for 25 Show dahlias and prize for 25 decorative: M. B. Metcalf, gard. George Wraight. Michell medal for 25 cactus dahlias: G. S. Stillman. Dreer prizes for centerpiece of dahlias: Essex County Country Club, gard. Frank Drews, 1st; H. Darlington, 2nd.

In the miniature garden competition: C. C. Goodrich, 1st; C. F. Rand, gard. Wm. Zeidler, 2nd; and Essex County Country Club, 3rd. In fruits: S. & M. Colgate, 1st; and C. C. Goodrich, 2nd.

First-class certificates were awarded as follows: A. C. Van Gaasbeck, gard. A. P. Wenzel, for decorative dahlias, also for show dahlias and white decorative dahlias; S. and A. M. Colgate, gard. Wm. Reid, for yellow show dahlias, pink show dahlias, red show dahlias and bronze show dahlias; Mrs. Wm. Barr, gard. E. Panuska, white show dahlias, red decorative dahlias, pink cactus dahlias, six show dahlias, best cactus dahlias; Mrs. Chas. Hathaway, gard. Max Schneider, maroon show dahlias; C. C. Goodrich, gard. F. Bergelund, pink decorative dahlias, maroon decorative dahlias, six decorative, six cactus, best show and best decorative dahlia; Lager & Hurrell, collection of orchids; Mrs. C. Hathaway, celosia; Mrs. S. M. High, dahlias; W. A. Manda, seedling dahlias; Frank Drews, seedling rose. Cultural certificate to C. C. Goodrich, for celosia. Special mention to Mrs. Chas. Hathaway, for gladioli. Vote of thanks to S. and M. Colgate, for dahlias; A. C. Van Gaasbeck, for peony-flowered dahlias and mixed dahlias. W. A. Manda staged a very effective group of foliage plants and ferns, including the celebrated Polypodium Mandaianum.

The judges were Wm. H. Duckham, C. H. Totty and John E. Lager.

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The next meeting of the Club will be held at Horticultural Hall on Tuesday evening, October 14, at 8 o'clock, the halls of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society being all rented for October 21, the regular date of the meeting. The speaker of the evening will be M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J., secretary of the National Association of Gardeners, on, "Who is the Real Gardener?" Exhibits of early chrysanthemums and other seasonable flowers are particularly desired at this meeting.

The secretary will be glad to have the names and addresses of any additional members who may wish to take landscape gardening courses the coming season, as it is desired to start these classes as soon as possible.

W. N. CRAIG, Secretary.

The Horticultural Club of Boston held its monthly meeting at the Parker House on Wednesday evening, October 1. E. O. Orpet, of Lake Forest, Ill., and Eber Holmes, of Montrose, Mass., were guests. Louis J. Reuter brought a vase of flowers of a new bright red rose of foreign origin, which created a favorable impression.

RHODE ISLAND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual September display of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was held on Sept. 23 and 24, in the parlors of the Mathewson Street Methodist Episcopal Church, Providence, and one of the largest and most attractive exhibits of flowers, fruits, vegetables and honey ever shown in this city, was viewed by a large number of persons. Exhibits by pupils of Webster avenue and Grove street grammar schools were a credit to the schools, the displays consisting of both flowers and vegetables. The dahlia displays were very extensive, there being no less than fifteen large exhibitors of these as specialties.

E. K. Thomas of the Rhode Island State College, was superintendent. Heretofore the blooms have been shown on flat tables. This fall Mr. Thomas introduced an innovation in the way of benches with a step formation, starting one foot from the floor with four tiers, the maximum height being four feet. This scheme gave a pleasing effect and made a hit with visitors and exhibitors alike.

Charles M. Bogholt, gardener for Miss Fanny Foster, Newport, won the first prize for the best 1913 cactus variety, which he has named the Golden Crown. A. E. Johnson, of Montello, Mass., won the honors in the open class for the best bloom shown by originator, the Marjory Field. They were not in competition. Sisson & Thurston, of Newport, who make a specialty of cactus dahlias, carried away six firsts. Lewis A. Jillson, of Lakewood, was awarded first prize for a collection of 100 blooms any variety, the display being uniform in size and color, and the flowers large and rugged. W. D. Hathaway, of New Bedford, Mass., received four firsts and six seconds, and William Steele, of Auburn, captured two firsts and one second. The judges were Alexander McLellan, of Newport, and Eugene Appleton, of Providence.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The Rochester Florists' Association are planning for an extensive fall show to be held in Convention Hall, opening Nov. 4.

The St. Louis Ladies' Florist Circle will meet next Wednesday afternoon, October 8th, at the home of Mrs. E. Schray, 4100 Pennsylvania Ave.

The St. Louis Florist Club will hold its regular meeting on Thursday, October 9th, at 2 P. M. The newly-elected officers will officiate for the first time.

The annual flower show of the Spokane, Wash., Horticultural Society, opened on Friday, September 19. The city parks as well as many private estates were well represented in the displays.

The florists of Newark, N. J., and vicinity, have organized the Essex County Florists' Club with the following officers: Edward Jacobi, president; G. W. Mueller, vice-president; John Crossley, secretary; August Begerow, treasurer.

The Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., will hold its next regular meeting at their quarters, 1214 F street, Northwest, Tuesday evening, October 7. Many matters of importance are scheduled to be taken up and some little entertainment may be expected.

The Preliminary Schedule of Prizes of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for the year 1914 is out and copies may be had on application to the secretary, W. C. Rich, Horticultural Hall, Boston, Mass. Twelve regular exhibitions are listed for the year.

The Florists' and Gardeners' club of Holyoke and Northampton, Mass., resumed its monthly meetings for the season at the greenhouses of G. H. Sinclair on Tuesday evening, Sept. 23. The chief business of the evening was to make the necessary arrangements for the flower show which is to be held in Holyoke, Nov. 16.

At the monthly meeting of the Minnesota State Florists' Association, held last week, the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, O. J. Olson, St. Paul; vice-president, Wm. Desmond, Minneapolis; secretary, Gus Malmquist, Minneapolis; treasurer, E. P. Holm, St. Paul; executive committee, Theo. Wirth, A. Lauritzen, Hugh Will and Prof. L. R. Cady.

A very tempting preliminary premium list is being sent out by the Horticultural Society of Chicago for its Spring Flower Show, March 24 to 29, 1914. This will be the twenty-second annual event and it is safe to predict that it will surpass all the others. There are 110 classes which include flowering plants, miscellaneous, bulbous, orchids, roses, ferns, palms and foliage. There will be 46 cut flower classes. Medals for special features are offered and 10 classes for private gardeners complete the list. R. J. Haight, Secretary, 536 S. Clark street, will mail lists upon application.

DURING RECESS.

The Cook Co. (Ill.) Florists' Association's bowling league is now organized with four three-men teams, to play ninety games or thirty series. The league is composed of Wm. Lorman, secretary; Allie Zech, John Zech, J. Jacobs, F. Krause, E. Armstrong, Wm. Wolf, F. Ayers, L. Koehler, J. Byers, Geo. Econemopulos and Otto Goerisch. The opening game was scheduled for Oct. 1st., but was postponed one week owing to the death of the secretary's father and of Mrs. Goerisch.

A team of five, known as The Florists, in the North Chicago League, have been organized by Ernest Farley. The bowlers are E. Farley, W. Wolf, J. Huebner, Fred Price, W. Lorman.

The Extension Service of the Massachusetts Agricultural Society has inaugurated the publication of a periodical news service covering the several branches of the extension work and other items of agricultural and general interest, local and state-wide. Erwin H. Furbush is Supervisor of Correspondence and Lecture Courses.

A POT PLANT FARM.

The enormous consumption of small ferns for jardiniere planting and table baskets, cannot be fully realized until one has visited some of the establishments making a specialty of raising and supplying this material. One of the sources of supply for the Boston market and New England generally, is at A. M. Davenport's, in Watertown, 4 miles from Boston. Young ferns are here mentioned not in thousands but in hundred thousands and shipping is going on from morning to night every day. Here is probably the largest stock ever seen in this country of the much prized "Bird's Nest" fern, Asplenium Nidus Avis, of which there are estimated to be not less than 30,000 now in small pots and probably 100,000 in seedling pans.

Mr. Davenport has added one house this season to his already large range, which is 41 x 200, and is getting ready for another about the same size, and he will need them judging from the young plant stock coming on. The finest Lorraine and Cincinnati begonias the writer has ever seen are here, from 2½ in. up to 6 in. and larger, there being 7,000 of the latter of unprecedented luxuriance and texture. Mr. Gough, the grower and foreman of the establishment, says that these are all from leaf cuttings struck last December and January and that their astonishing growth in this brief period is due to nothing more than some cow manure mixed in the potting soil and the maintenance of a regular night temperature now of 60 degrees. These plants are worth a long trip to see. Much interest is taken in one form which is believed to be a sport from Lorraine, with foliage and flower considerably larger and growth much more robust than the type.

The general run of decorative plants, such as cyclamen, azaleas, ivies, palms, araucarias, holly ferns, etc., are seen here in quantity and high quality. Among the things not generally seen are browallias and the lovely little sky-blue daisy Agathæa cœlestis; 3,000 azaleas held over from last year's importations and planted out in summer, are thickly set with buds and with their dark glossy foliage are distinctly superior to any directly imported stock—an object lesson which carries a valuable suggestion to plant growers. As with the begonias the cyclamen are beautiful demonstrations of cultural skill. There are lots of them but they will not last long when the trade gets to stocking up on high-class Christmas flowering plants.

MICHELL'S INTERMEDIATE GIANT FLOWERING

Sweet Pea -- Blanche Ferry

A novelty of extraordinary value to the florist. Seed sown in October will commence flowering March 15th and continue through April and May. Three to four extra large blooms are produced on long stems from 16 to 20 inches in length. The culture of this variety is the same as all other Winter Flowering sorts, except that it should be sown during the month of October. Our seed is original greenhouse grown stock. Per oz., $1.00; $3.50 per ¼ lb.; per lb., $12.00.

WALTER MOTT'S NOTES BY THE WAY.

Louisville, Ky.

The season has opened up very auspiciously here with store openings, social functions and the like.

Knoxville, Tenn.

C. W. Crouch has resigned the leadership of a swell orchestra which he held for a quarter of a century and gave much time. He has completed a large range, growing entirely for his downtown store.

The recent rains have given the seedsmen quite a rush for seed for fall sowing. D. R. Mayo, a pioneer in the trade, remarked that he does not remember handling grass seed, particularly clovers, of purer quality and plumpness. The tendency of the southern market is for lower prices, although the higher grades are quoted considerably lower than last season. Bulb trade is opening up well. A frost occurring in the northern part of the state cut down all outdoor flowers and many gardens are being cleaned up preparatory to planting bulbs.

As announced in our advertising columns, Charles Schwake, for many years with Chas. F. Meyer, has opened for himself as bulb and nursery stock importer at the corner of Warren street and West Broadway, New York. Many years of experience have given Mr. Schwake a very wide acquaintance with the trade and the goods and he will undoubtedly score a success from the start. Among the foreign houses he will represent is that of Aug. Hohman, lily of the valley exporter, Hamburg, Germany, for whom he will have the exclusive American agency.

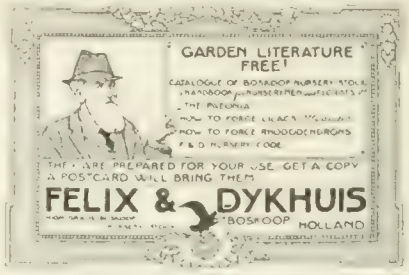
ONIONS FOR WINTER FORCING.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

Dear Sir:—Please tell me which is the best kind of onions to grow under glass, for sale through the winter, also what temperature. Thanking you in advance, I am,



Yours truly,

Mo. R. L. I.

Replying to the above inquiry about the best onion for winter-forcing under glass: The writer knows of nothing better than the Early White Barletta. This is a good, easily grown variety which reaches a size fit for use in the shortest possible time. Sow in flats or benches in a night temperature of 55° to 60° and ranging to 65° during the day. Syringe frequently to keep spider in check.

PERSONAL.

John McKenzie of North Cambridge, Mass., is a visitor in Montreal this week.

Albert Kinsman Gardner of Rockland, Me., State horticulturist and son of former United States Senator Obadiah Gardner, was married to Miss Florence Zelma Oak of Bangor, on Sept. 24, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Oak, in Bangor,

M. C. Ebel, of Aphine fame, has taken a brief respite from his warfare on green fly and mealy bug, long enough to get married. Miss Ida Rose Weyers was the fortunate young lady and the ceremony was performed at Madison, N. J., on September 25th. HORTICULTURE extends congratulations.

St. Louis visitors.—Arnold Ringier of Barnard's, Robert Newcomb of Vaughan's, Guy Reyburn of Henderson's, and F. McCabe of Randall's, all of Chicago; Mr. August Dormann, superintendent of public parks at Alton, Ill.; Geo. Madsen of the Alton Floral Co.

FLORISTS' TELEGRAPH DELIVERY.

A Factor in Progress.

With reference to the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, I want to say that it eventually will give prestige and power to all its members who have the foresight to increase the membership by bringing in new applicants, and also to bear in mind not only new members, but the character and quality of the members.

If properly developed, we have one of the most important factors for progress which our business has developed in recent years. This slogan, "Member of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association," if used on all your correspondence, advertisements, or even on your own glass fronts, will have the effect of inducing patrons to ask what the object is, and by knowledge of its doings, etc., you will impress them with such information as will surely be the means of new business in this direction. It could be made in due time to carry as much dignity in being a member of the F. T. D. in connection with flowers, as there is in being a stock broker and a member of the stock exchange. In other words, the F. T. D. could be to the florist as the stock exchange is to the broker. This can eventually be worked out when we have sufficient members in good standing in all cities and towns throughout our country, properly imbued with the fact that it is not alone organized for financial gain, but also for convenience to one another, as well as to our customers in time of emergencies, etc.

Fill Orders Considerately.

This is one of the points we must not lose sight of, that we should, if necessary, fill an order for our brother florist even at no profit to ourselves, so that the order is filled creditably. It will eventually be the means of more business, and in that way will be a gain in the end. Of course, these problems can be worked out later, as we become better acquainted by meeting one another at conventions and flower shows, so that we can better give our views and experiences in filling orders on hurry calls, as we are asked to do and are asking others to do. I merely mention this because only last week, one of our patrons left a small order to be delivered in a small town in New Jersey, and we telegraphed same to our good brother florist, and he filled the order after having to send his automobile some fifteen miles over the road specially with this package, as he would not have had time to catch the funeral any other way. We surely appreciated the service, and immediately sent a letter of gratitude as well as check for his courtesy.

Securing New Business.

We have used the lines: "Flowers delivered in all parts of the United States at one hour's notice," and "Members of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association," with great results as a footnote in all our advertisements in the daily and Sunday papers in our city. This has been the means of bringing new business which we feel is partly due to this method. We have never kept any record of our business in this direction, but hardly a day passes but what we send out from three to a dozen orders to all parts of the U. S. As this is but the beginning of what may some day be one of the most important factors in a growing business, one can readily see the necessity of having a chain of good men and good stores to accomplish our purpose.

The telegraph companies in due time will be only too glad to co-operate with us and give us whatever benefits we may want by way of special service or code, if we show results with our association. I have already been approached by representatives of the telegraph companies for information about this organization. Not too much credit can be given the organizers and officers of the association for the good work they have accomplished in so short a time. It shows clearly that we have the right men, but simply need the numbers to accomplish our purpose.

An Emblem Needed.

Another factor in the interest of the F. T. D. most important, is the need of an emblem, same to be copyrighted and used whenever and wherever possible, something similar to the idea now being used by Mackay-Bennet Cable Company for instance. I would suggest that members get ideas suitable for such a purpose and send them to our secretary, who could at the annual meeting refer them to the Board of Directors for approval. Another suggestion would be to have one or more good advertising experts invited at our annual meetings who could enlighten us on subjects pertaining to our line of business. We could all benefit by such talks, and our association could, without doubt, procure the most able speakers without much difficulty. Would also suggest that our secretary have papers read on subjects tending to uplift and incidently point out some of the evils now prevalent which could be easily eradicated.

HENRY PENN.

Boston, Mass.

A GLIMPSE OF WAVERLEY, MASS.

When you say "Waverley," you think of "Edgar." Can't help it. Going anywhere near Waverley, now, one not only thinks but sees it—"Edgar Co." embroidered perpendicularly in black brick on the new 100-ft. chimney of yellow tile, which, just completed, makes a marked feature of the landscape. This smoke stack, 8 ft. in diameter at the base, is part of a new heating equipment installed this season, including two giant Kroeschell boilers, new mains and rearrangement of pipes throughout, as well as some rebuilding which, next season, will be undertaken on a larger scale. Among the improvements made this year is a capacious "coal-hole," 20 ft. deep, with cement walls, into which 240 tons of coal have been dumped as a starter.

The chrysanthemum houses show a very healthy, sturdy lot of the best varieties for the Boston market. These are Golden Glow, which sold well this season and is about finished, Early Snow, White and Yellow Tousset, Wm. Duckham, Dr. Enguehard, Alice Byron, Chrysolora, Timothy Eaton, Unaka, Roman Gold, Bonnaffon, Pacific Supreme and Halliday. Anyone wishing a list of profitable first-class commercial varieties can safely tie to the foregoing. Pot plants, in 6-in. pots, will also be fine this year, stocky and loaded with bloom.

After the chrysanthemums are disposed of the benches will be devoted to azaleas of which some 75 cases are just in port at Boston, mainly the Christmas bloomers. A lot of Firefly and others amounting to several thousands are in frames, having been left over from last season and planted out, and look superior in many respects to freshly imported plants. It pays to keep and care for them here for one season.

Poinsettias are a leading specialty here and are seen in pots singly or in pans—three plants to a 6 or 8-in. pan, five to a 10-in. pan, etc. Cyclamen and Lorraine begonias are extensively grown and will be in prime bloom for Christmas if shipped now and grown along. Genistas are very fine, all pot-grown as the preferable way. Small ferns occupy a large space and are having a heavy sale this season as are Dracæna indivisa, pot-grown, of which there are thousands.

CHICAGO NOTES.

E. Kalish, of Kalish Bros., St. Louis, Mo., was called home by the death of his cousin.

The fall sales of pot plants, mostly Boston ferns, have begun at the department stores. No doubt they help to increase the popularity of plants but the prices would work havoc with the business of a regular florist.

Robt. S. Edgar, of Waverly, Mass., who has taken a position as foreman for F. Oechslin at 4911 W. Quincy street, is now getting his family nicely settled at 4910 W. Jackson Blvd. Mr. Edgar is the son of the late W. W. Edgar, of Boston, and has grown up in the business, having had experience both in England and this country. One thing is certain, he will not learn anything wrong in plant growing at Mr. Oeschlin's, so they both are to be congratulated on the opportunity of working together.

Chicago had a record week with the opening of four new flower stores. The Venetian Flower Shop, in the Venetian Bldg., has been rented by Peter Sgoros, who has been in the same business in other parts of the city. Dinger & Black are opening a new store at 211 E. 55th street, or Garfield Blvd., a fine south side location. Fred Dinger has been with Wm. J. Smyth for several years. Roy Berg, who has been with The Globe Greenhouses six years, starts for himself at 5729 Chicago Ave., and Peter Terres, who recently sold his place, known as Columbia Florist, to Albert Cole, has now opened another store at 3984 Cottage Grove Ave.

Visitors.—T. Heaven, Benton Harbor, Mich.; E. Kalish, St. Louis, Mo.; Wm. Dykes, of Ed. Jensen's, New York; W. E. F. Weber, Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

Charles Scarborough, formerly with Gude Bros., but who has been spending the summer with his parents at Morrisville, Pa., is reported as having entered the employ of H. H. Battles, Philadelphia, Pa.

T. E. Miller, accompanied by his wife and son, has returned from an extended trip through Europe. Theodore Diedrich has returned from a visit to Germany. Among the other returning European travelers are Adolphus Gude and Fred H. Kramer, who leave England for home this week.

In addition to opening a new store at 3211 Mt. Pleasant street, N. W., the main store of J. A. Philipps, at Fourteenth and Harvard streets, N. W., is undergoing considerable improvement. The floor has been covered with tiling, a sanitary material similar to concrete, a new ice box is being built and a balcony is to be run around the store occupying all but the window space.

Mr. Mulford, of the Department of Agriculture, is at present busily engaged in the preparation of plans for the proposed rose garden at the Arlington farms, operated by the Department. In company with Robert A. Pyle and W. F. Gude, he last week inspected the site. Messrs. Gude and Pyle are especially enthusiastic over the project which for a number of years has been recommended by the S. A. F. and O. H. at its national conventions. While a start is to be made on a two-acre plat, it is believed that this will be materially increased as the garden grows in size and popularity. Upon the completion of the plans, Mr. Mulford will submit them to the several committees appointed by the American Rose Society and the S. A. F. and O. H.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

James Tasker, late with Dreer at Riverton, succeeds Maurice Fuld in the Michell establishment. Mr. Tasker is an expert plantsman and will divide his time between the store and the Michell nursery at Andalusia.

The Dreer Fall Exhibition of dahlias, hardy perennials, and greenhouse plants, is announced for Oct. 4th to 11th, at Riverton and Riverview. Everybody cordially invited on any or all of these days. The show will be unique of its kind and well worth going a long way to see.

The Leo Niessen Co. opened their Baltimore branch house, Sept. 30th, at 5 and 7 Center street. The location is central and the quarters ample. W. E. McKissick, an able and experienced man in the wholesale cut flower world, is manager. With two new factors in the situation, we look for "ginger" in the southern metropolis from now on. At all events, the Baltimoreans may rest assured of better service than they have ever had before.

A magnificent display of dahlias was put up by Gimbel's, one of the leading department stores, on Sept. 30, and attracted great crowds. Philip Frend, of Michell's, was in charge and surpassed himself in effective staging and genre. Some two hundred and fifty varieties were shown and plenty of space was given in the main arcade. The dahlia is certainly getting boosted here this fall. First it was Wanamaker's, then the P. H. S., then Michell's, now Gimbel's, and next week it will be Dreer's. That's going some for an old turnip of a flower like the dahlia.

Visitors: John D. Hopper, Richmond, Va.; R. W. B. Evans and wife, Wilkesbarre, Pa.; J. J. Fuchs, Pittsburgh, Pa.; B. F. Gane, Williamsport Floral Co.; John Beck, Milton, Pa.; P. Joseph Lynch, Heller Bros. Co., New Castle, Indiana.

New York.—Opportunities come once in a lifetime like that at McNiff's auction rooms on Tuesday last. A magnificent lot of tall kentias were put up and the few buyers who attended bought at their own prices. Kentias fifteen feet high, made-up plants in tubs, in splendid condition went to G. M. Stumpp and J. H. Troy for $40.00 and $45.00. Many valued them at from $125.00 to $150.00. Plants ranging from the above down to 6-ft. specimens, both single and made-up specimens, were sold at from $12.00 to $6.00, all in fine condition. J. I. D.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Trade has been looking up a little bit, but at present writing has taken a lull and with the increasing receipts of carnations, chrysanthemums, cattleyas and most roses there is a tendency for stock to lag somewhat in wholesalers' hands. Quality generally is very poor and will continue to improve now. No great advance in prices of anything is looked for during October and growers and dealers would be well pleased if they could only be assured that there would be no slump as soon as the chrysanthemums begin their main incursion. The new crop carnations look pretty nice and some of the newer roses are making a good record for so early a date.

BUFFALO Since the 1st of September, there has been quiet and dull days, and as the days pass into autumn trade has taken a little life and is gradually becoming better. Autumn weddings have consumed a good portion of lily of the valley, white roses, orchids and other bridal flowers and there has been a fair supply of everything along the line. Asters continue to come in, though the end is near. A few gladioli are seen now and then, also other outdoor material. Dahlias hold the centre of the market and so far have taken well, the single varieties especially. The rose crop is on and it must be said that such a fine lot of roses at this time of the season has very seldom been seen. Choice Killarney, in red, white, pink, and double, also Queen, Perle, Hillingdon, Ward and the beautiful Sunburst, together with Bonsilene, Safrano, Radiance, Bride, Bridesmaid and Madison, furnish a good selection and are offered in many different grades to fill any order. Beauties, too, are good and there are some fine chrysanthemums in Golden Glow and Smith's Advance. Carnations are coming on better each day. Trade is gradually working its way toward the busy season.

CHICAGO A complete absence of asters makes most of the wholesale houses appear rather bare, for chrysanthemums are not yet plentiful enough to make up for the departure of asters. All told, it has been a good aster season and a profitable one for all concerned. Golden Glow predominates in chrysanthemums, but there are not enough now to fill the demand, and of white there are still less, a very few Smith's Advance and October Frost being seen. American Beauties are inclined to be scarce in the short and medium lengths where the greatest demand is. All other roses are in fair supply with demand increasing as out-of-door flowers are disappearing. There is a good demand for lily of the valley and the quality is first-class. Carnation season may be said to be with us again. Stock is now of good average size and some few carnations have reached "fancy" stage. There are plenty of carnations but not more than can be used to advantage. Some flowers have been received from the south, including blue gentians, which arrived in fine condition. Very few dahlias as compared to past years have been in the market this season. Green is to be had in all kinds. Smilax still continues scarce.

NEW YORK As the season runs its course the flowers which have held the centre of the stage for weeks past are rapidly making their exit and the stock characteristic of the fall begins.

PHILADELPHIA

Market conditions continued to improve during the past week, the demand being better and, with an accompanying falling off in receipts, prices hardened considerably. What was still better than the hardening was the good clean-up. Very little good stock of any kind went to waste or got sacrificed. Among roses perhaps the most plentiful was American Beauty. These were of very good quality also and were in good demand. White roses were scarce and not enough to go around. The new red, Mrs. Charles Russell, is showing up well. There seems no doubt now as to this variety's making good in this locality, both from the grower's and the retailer's standpoint. Plenty of dahlias of excellent quality. The demand is good. October Frost, the good old standby, and Montmort made their bow during the week in the chrysanthemum line. In white, Smith's Advance still holds the fort. The cattleya demand has improved a little, but the market is still below standard as to prices. Carnations are scarce, not nearly enough of the better kind to go around and prices have gone up on these. Many orders for good flowers had to be turned down. There are still a few asters coming in, but the flush of this crop is over. They are pretty good quality. Any amount of good cosmos, pink, red and white. Autumn foliage and eulalia plumes are in and these are in demand. They harmonize very well with subjects like the tritoma, which is around in good form and fairly plentiful. The greens market has taken on some life and seems to be on the way to normally lively conditions.

PROVIDENCE

The demand for indoor flowers strengthened considerable during the past week, and while the quantity of the glass-grown blooms has been equal to the call of the trade, the quality has been very poor, as a rule. Outdoor flowers are practically extinct, frosts in many places having depleted the few blooms that were left unprotected. Asters are nearly all in, a few being found in some of the retail stores. Asters this season have been below the average in quality as compared with previous years. No real cause can be given for this aside from the unfavorable growing conditions. Violets have just begun to come in, the quality being fair for the beginning of the season. Roses are showing some improvement in quality. Carnations are poor and very scarce and the price is stiff considering the quality. Some very good white and yellow chrysanthemums are being offered at a fair price. This is the second week for this flower and the stock appears to be very good.

S. A. G.

ST. LOUIS

The market is not in very good condition. A lot of stock is coming in but among this there is a great scarcity of fancy stock, especially in carnations. In roses, however, we find a good quality. The sensational feature last week was the cut in prices of fancy ferns, two of the markets selling at $1 per 1000. There is a big lot of outdoor stock still coming. The demand is not so good on these of late. The trade is looking for chrysanthemums daily, but only a few Golden Glows are in. The weather is too warm for violets. Lilies and lily of the valley have had a splendid call the last week.

WASHINGTON

Business is beginning to pick up well now that the cold weather is coming and stock is in much better condition. Carnations are coming in with longer stems and the blooms and foliage of the roses are much better. American Beauty roses are good and are bringing from $1.50 to $4 per dozen, while the price on other roses has increased somewhat, due to better quality. Orchids are slightly more plentiful with the exception of white ones. Snapdragon is beginning to come in but there is little demand for it. The call for violets, the first of which have just been seen, is quite heavy although the stock is not good. Gardenias have shortened up considerably in supply and the local houses are unable to fill all demands. Due to the many weddings, the demand is heavy on lily of the valley and there is just about enough of this to meet all calls.

Boston, Mass. — William Sim has leased stalls Nos. 1 to 7 inclusive at the Boston Flower Exchange and put his son, Henry Allen, in charge as salesman. The young man has also the sale of Peter Fisher's carnations. Mr. Sim has been picking Princess of Wales violets for two weeks now and they are fine for so early in the season.

ATTENTION If you wish Dark Green and Fresh Cut EVERGREENS, finest quality Selected Stock. Laurel Branches, 2x2x4 ft. case, $2.50 per case; Pine Plumes, $2.75 per case; Laurel Stems large bag, $1.00. Try our Cedar Boughs, only $2.25 per case. Once used always used. Obituary

Mrs. Henry Trochsler.

Mrs. Henry Trochsler, of 3524 K street, Philadelphia, Pa., who conducted a retail flower store, died of apoplexy, September 17th.

William Elias.

William Elias, superintendent of the Walter H. Phelps estate, Bernardsville, N. J., died at the quarantine station in New York harbor, September 13th, on his return from England. He was 61 years of age. He is survived by his wife and two daughters.

Mrs. Otto Goerisch.

Otto Goerisch, a favorite in florists' circles, and employed by the children motherless. When Mr. Goer- A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, has the deepest sympathy of the trade in the loss of his wife, which leaves two little isch returned from work, Sept. 23, he found her dead, apparently having died of heart failure.

Justus Geist.

Justus Geist, an old-time florist, died on Thursday, September 25, at the hospital in Melrose, Mass., of pneumonia, at the age of 69 years. Mr. Geist was one of the large growers of

THE LATE GEORGE MCWILLIAM.
Obituary note in last week's issue.

Bonsilene roses away back in the days when the "Boston rose" was the leading flower in the florist trade of this country. Of late he has been in failing health.

Wm. Lorman, Sr.

Wm. Lorman, well-known to the trade and for many years with the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, lost his father on the 24th. Wm. Lorman, Sr., like his son, was very fond of bowling and after an evening spent in this way was talking with friends on his way home, when a bullet, fired by a policeman at a burglar, struck an electric light pole, then glanced, hitting and killing Mr. Lorman.

Buying A Piano And A Greenhouse

Another True Story With A Moral.

LAST evening one of our fellow town's folks phoned me to come over and "see their new piano." Not hear it, but see it.

I went. A more gorgeous case I never saw. The grain of the wood stood out like a map.

The lid and music rack was a patented slidable – downable upable affair that all the members of the family each in turn showed me how it worked. It also had four pedals. This was considered a truly great advantage, I being informed that most self-respecting pianos are having only two. The keys had a particularly peculiar slant. Just why they slanted was not important.

Nothing had been said of its musical tone—so I ran my finger up and down the keys and found the tone to be just what you and I would have expected.

It made musical sounds not tones. As a piece of cabinet work and sample of jim crack skill, that piano was a wonder. As a musical instrument it was a flat failure.

On my way home, I couldn't help thinking how some growers bought their boilers and greenhouses just like those folks bought their piano.

They allow themselves to put too much importance on the jim-crack unimportant things and too little on the vital ones.

What do you care whether a boiler has a certain fandangle grate or not—what you want to know is: Will that boiler heat your house economically.

What do you care about this or that particular unimportant fitting that some concerns talk so loudly about using in their greenhouse construction?

What you want to know is: Will the construction itself give you the best growing house possible and last you longest possible with least possible repairs.

First be sure you are sure of securing the vitally important things. It's time enough then, to consider the jim-cracks.

Our construction is weak on jim-cracks.

But it's strong on the strong points that go to make your investment an enduring paying one.

Put it down in your note book that pianos, boilers and greenhouses require great care in their buying.

Send for our Commercial Greenhouse Catalog. "We go anywhere for business."

Lean Horse for Long Race

THE saying: "A Lean Horse for a Long Race," is true as it is old.

The U-Bar is the leanest of all the greenhouse constructions.

Leanest, because it's made of the strongest material; with the least material needed to make it strong.

The U-Bar roof bar and rafter, are one.

Every roof bar is a steel rafter.

Every rafter is a steel and cypress roof bar.

Not-with-standing this rafter and roof bar combination —the U-Bars are no larger than the usual cypress bars used in other constructions.

Like the lean horse, the U-Bar frame is all muscle.

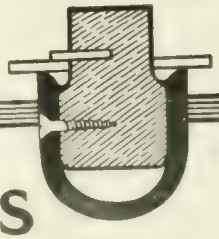
Not only is such a house, when built such a way, decidedly more graceful and architecturally attractive; but it's unequaled for productiveness.

The highest possible endorsement of the U-Bar construction, is that other concerns are trying in every way to make their houses look like the U-Bar houses.



So don't think that if a house has a curved eave, it's a U-Bar house.

If it's not built with the U-Bars, it's not a U-Bar curved eave house.

Send for catalog. Or send for us. Or both.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

NEW YORK BOTANICAL GARDEN

Chrysanthemums

Keep the stock clean of all by-growth, lest the flow of sap be diverted to nourish this useless growth. All the energies of the plant should be led to where they are needed for the development of perfect buds and foliage. Feeding should not be kept up too long. I think no flower, when it shows color well, should receive any more liquid nourishment and in the case of red varieties feeding should stop even before the buds show color, as these kinds are very much more addicted to damping than other varieties. Let well enough alone as the last watering with liquid may be the means of spoiling the flower. The times for saturating the bench are gone and the plants, as they finish, need less and less water. Only water on bright days and then in the early morning so that all superfluous water gets dried up before night. A heavy, moist atmosphere at night is to be avoided above all things, as the moisture will condense on the petals and cause them to damp. Keep the plants clean of greenfly by light fumigation or spraying with some kind of nicotine preparation.

Campanulas

It is now time to lift these valuable forcing biennials. Lifted now, your plants will have time to make new roots before the hard weather sets in. In potting them use whatever size that will hold the roots nicely. Use a rich compost of fibrous loam three parts, well decayed cow manure one part. Work the compost firmly around the plants. Give them a good soaking of water and place them outdoors until frost arrives of sufficient severity to threaten the breaking of pots. When hard weather sets in you will have to give them some protection. These campanulas can stay outside in a frame until they are wanted for forcing which is generally in January some time. You cannot get them to flower before the middle of April so do not start them too early.

Lilies for Christmas

The earliest Bermuda lilies should now be removed from the coldframe to a warm house. Some of them will have formed sufficient roots by this time. No actual forcing is necessary. If given an average temperature of 60 degrees they should be in plenty of time for Christmas. The grower can employ any degree from 55 to 75 degrees at night as he may see fit in order to get his lilies in at the right moment. When coming into flower they can be fed with some liquid manure which will improve their quality very much. Fumigating frequently, say about once a week, will keep the plants free of the pest. When the plants are from 15 to 20 inches high they ought to be staked and kept neatly, but not tightly tied. Water carefully so as not to sour the compost. Let them show signs of dryness first, and then give enough water to soak the whole ball through. Frequent and slight waterings are dangerous. Syringe regularly.

Planting Phlox

For a planting of phlox make the beds in the fall when the soil is comparatively dry and pulverizes in the digging. It pays to trench the ground well for this perennial, and have plenty of well decomposed manure thoroughly incorporated with the soil. Then dig out the required depth at one end, about two feet wide, and place on one side. This is to give room for trenching. Loosen the soil at the bottom. Then put a layer of fresh manure about a foot wide in the bottom up against the end. Continue digging, shoveling the soil upon the manure, say six inches thick and at that angle of about 45 degrees with the base toward you and the apex within one foot of the original surface. The decaying manure will not only provide humus but will allow the admittance of the air. Continue with alternating layers and when the end is reached the bottom soil previously laid aside may be used to fill the open space.

The Perennial Border

From now on up to the end of October is the best time to make new borders or divide and replant old ones. When grown commercially it is essential that the soil be spaded deep and, still better, trenched. Then apply a generous amount of well rotted manure. Any extra labor and fertilizer put into the preparation of the border will be repaid for some years afterward in results. Perennials will grow in almost any situation, but in order to do their best they should have an open and sunny situation away from food-robbing roots of large trees. See that each plant has sufficient room to allow it to develop to its full size. Learn the height and spread of each different plant and then plant accordingly.

Preparing for Cold Weather

It is now time to see that all plants that are still outside in frames have the proper protection against frost, otherwise you may get caught and have numerous plants spoiled. So do not take any risks at this late date, but give proper protection from this out.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Ardisia crenulata; Mignonette; Violets; Cannas; Lorraine Begonias; Outdoor Roses.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Care of Strawberries

It is wonderful what strawberry plants will do after the cool nights set in. They seem to relish them equally as much as do the growers. Even when the night temperature goes down to 35 and 40 they will still keep growing if they are fed well. Do not give up encouraging them to grow until they are plunged; all that can be put into them will be repaid when forcing time comes along as the strongest crowns will give the best crops. Continue to feed them every week or ten days with dry manure, using liquid cow manure for two or three days in between. It is better to use liquid for two or three days together in preference to one day only as some are liable not to need any water the day the liquid is used and so they are missed. Recent rains here have made watering a rarity. Keep all runners pinched off as they only weaken the plants and also remove the little side growths that are sure to come on all crowns. They may appear to make the crown look larger now but they are useless and have to be removed when the plants are started into growth or they would produce a quantity of short flowers at the expense of the main crown and its flower spike. Aim to get one good solid crown in each pot.

Ripen Up Pot-Vines

If the vines intended for early forcing are not getting all the sun possible see that they are removed without delay, for completely ripened canes are the only ones to get the "goods" from. For the few weeks remaining before they will be started into growth it will be well to give them the coolest place to be found. There is generally some location that is more exposed than the rest and if the vines are placed here they will feel more "winterish." Diminish the amount of water at the roots, but not too much—just enough to say they are being kept a little on the dry side. Stop all syringing in dull weather and once during the morning will be sufficient in the best of days.

Figs

Fig trees will stand the least amount of frost of any of the various subjects grown for pot work. A few degrees will do them no harm but be prepared to house them at short notice. Any trees that have assumed considerable size and occupy a large tub should be placed in a cool house in the near future as it is no small item to move them and they are not the best of things to protect temporarily. Any sharp frost will injure the first crop for next year which, upon examination will be found in the axils of the leaves or what were the axils, as no doubt many will be leafless at this time.

The Soil

Periodically we hear of making up the different heaps of soil for the various crops to be grown under glass and as October comes around we think of the work to be accomplished in the fruit houses before they are started into growth again. New borders to be made, unsatisfactory borders to be renovated, and top dressings for all. For this work there is nothing to beat sod that has been stacked for about a month or five weeks, long enough only to have the green grass decayed. Some of the later houses have got to put up with it older than this for it will be impossible to get it so short a time before it is needed. At that time we shall be glad to delve under straw-manure and leaves to get soil that is not frozen. Fall rains have also to be considered. When we speak of getting sod at this time of year it is one of the greatest mistakes to work any kind of soil when it is wet; lose a day anytime sooner than get on to the ground before it has had time to free itself of some of the excessive moisture. Sod is mean to handle when wet, in addition to being detrimental to its welfare.

Go over the work to be done and figure up how many loads of sod are required; then at the latest possible date have it hauled to the nearest available spot to where the majority is to be used. Sod heaps are unsightly, a fact often responsible for their having to be located away back some distance from where they are needed. However get them as near as you can, which will all save labor later on. Have the grass mown off close before cutting the sod, which is best done with a sod cutter. When the ground is ploughed up too much fine soil is taken with the sod. Leave sufficient room on all sides of the heap to allow of sufficient protection to be added to keep out all frosts during the winter months.

Falling Leaves

Leaves will be falling right along now in most of the houses. Do not leave them to accumulate from one week end to the next. Saturday is looked on in many places as "the" day for picking up the leaves and a general tidy around. This is all right, but every day should be a day to pick up leaves that have fallen from fruit trees, for, while every endeavor is made to keep them clean there may be some pests lurking around seeking a retreat for the winter months which the soil will afford them. It will only be a few minutes' job for a boy and will be a good investment.

Planting Melons

Through the winter months melons can be planted closer with safety. It will pay to plant them so for then there is not the necessity to get so many on each plant. One foot to fifteen inches (according to variety) will be far enough. We have found this system to answer better than growing in pots, during the past two winters. Watch the young plants closely for green fly and fumigate at once or the tender leaves will be crippled.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

The Outside Roses

In localities where the frost has already cleaned up the soft plants, the foliage on all the outside growing roses will be practically gone and the plants can be prepared for their wintering. A light mulch can be given of any material that may be on hand. It is best not to apply too much at first, for the weather generally remains quite warm, and the plants need no protection until after severe weather sets in. We never try to save the old wood on the plants, and always apply the mulch along the bottoms of the plants, and then cut them down later in the winter. This refers to the Tea roses that are planted outside for summer blooming, and has nothing to do with the Hybrid Perpetuals and other hardy stock that is never grown inside, and that require different treatment.

The Sod Lot

Just what to do with that piece of ground that was robbed of most of the sod for sod heaps, is a question often turning up in the fall when the sod heaps are being put up. It is waste to allow the land to lie idle and open to the action of the heavy winter rains and winds. This is especially true of places having but limited grounds. Do not allow this land to lie open by any means. The very simplest, and no doubt the best way, is to plow it up and sow in plenty of rye, say two bushels to the acre. If this can be done early enough in the season a little sand vetch can be added, and this mixture will make an excellent green manure to plough under in the spring. A little bonemeal scattered all over the land before sowing the rye will make it take hold of the soil better, thus making a better root system, and also will send it right up when spring comes, which is all the better for the ploughing under.

Old Greenhouse Soil

Now that the rush is over, and the weather has become cooler, making work much more pleasant, the heaps of old soil that have been wheeled out of the houses during planting time, can be disposed of. Do not apply the old soil to fields where you intend to take sod from in the near future, for there are all kinds of germs and fungi in the soil that will take a long time to die, and if the soil is brought into the greenhouse too soon after it has been used once, these spores are very apt to show vigorous signs of life and may make some trouble for the growers. Keep the old soil to spread on fields where farm crops are to be gown for a while to come at least.

Tobacco Stems in the Walks

Now that the ventilators will soon be closed a little more, the old way of keeping out greenfly will be coming into use again. This consists of covering all the walks with fresh tobacco stems, the odor of which will mean death to all the young fly. This system is good where the houses are unusually dry, but in most cases we find that these tobacco stems in the walks keep the atmosphere of the houses too damp to be liked by most members of the rose family. With so many of the good tobacco preparations to choose from, we would certainly do away with this old method that not only makes the houses damp, but also makes them all but agreeable to the health of those who have to work in them.

Using Up the Old Boards, etc.

Every now and then a new fire is started in one of the boilers which gives us an opportunity to dispose of some of the old boards that have a habit of accumulating in spite of an occasional clean-out. Never can these be used to a better advantage than to burn them up in the boilers and thus get a little out of them in heat. Break up all the old boxes that are worse than useless, and burn them. Keep the place looking neat as much as possible. All the most successful places are very neat. That is why they are successful.

Ammoniacal-Copper-Carbonate Mixture

Should blackspot make its appearance among the Beauties, there is nothing better than a spray of the above mixture applied with a fine nozzle so as to cover the affected leaves as much as possible. This will not cure the spot by any means, but will go a great ways towards preventing it from spreading, and if the growers use a little judgment in caring for the plants they will soon pull out of it.

Care of Plants to be Used for Propagating Wood

Be especially careful not to allow spot or any other disease to make its way into the houses where the wood will be taken for cuttings when the season comes. Plants that have been free from disease will give young plants that will resist disease surprisingly. We find that cuttings taken from plants that have never had any spot, will begin to get spot only after the others are almost dead from it. The same we find is true with mildew. The plants that have never had any mildew are not so likely to get it. Not that it is safe to think that because the young plants came from stock that never had any disease, one can disregard the health rules. All the rules must be observed as much as ever, and this, and this only, will keep the plants in perfect health.

Begonia Florence Nightingale

We are indebted to the Gardeners' Chronicle for the picture which adorns this week's title page. The tuberous rooted begonias enjoy deserved popularity, both as outdoor or greenhouse subjects, especially those of compact free-flowering character, good form and texture of petals, and with moderate sized flowers able to hold themselves up gracefully. This variety, which well combines these requisites, was given an award of merit by the Royal Horticultural Society when exhibited last year by Blackmore & Langdon at Holland Park.

Single-flowered chrysanthemums

It is to be hoped that where they are not already provided for, the single-flowered chrysanthemums will be made a special feature at all the forthcoming shows. They have a grace and beauty all their own and the public are beginning to recognize it. There are those who declare that the single-flowered chrysanthemums are the coming fashionable autumn flower and quite likely they are right. Let the floral artists get busy with them and demonstrate their adaptability for table adornment and vase use generally. Properly displayed they give variety and tone to a chrysanthemum show which is not otherwise attainable.

The Rochester way

We confess to a twinge of disappointment on learning that the Rochester Florists' Association will probably decide to abandon for a year the project of a big fall flower show, plans for which were already well matured. The Rochester shows, thus far, have been worked out on advanced lines and have furnished example and incentive much needed in many quarters, in the art of planning and arrangement for general effect. But "the better part of valor is discretion," and since there was some doubt of financial success, the cautious course is certainly the wisest. It is quite a novel idea that the withdrawal of the retail florist support should cause cancellation of an exhibition scheme. We have seen many shows where there was no retail support to withdraw. We wish Rochester all kinds of success next year and would suggest that the S. A. F. convention in Boston will be a good place to do a little campaigning to that end.

Profitless work

Experience is credited with being a great teacher—the best, in fact. But it does find what appears to be a tedious and almost hopeless job with some of the growers of flowers for market. One needs only to saunter through the wholesale marts of any of our large cities and take note of the trashy mixture of dahlia flowers, for instance, on which growers have paid good money for transportation but which presents not one single quality to recommend it and makes no appeal to the buyer for any practical use. This is equally true as applying to the gladiolus in its season and in a modified degree to a number of other flowers. We are not now referring to qualities of care or culture but simply to selection of varieties as to color, form, etc. The same old discredited sorts are grown over and over again year after year, apparently for no other reason than that the growers have them in stock, and oblivious to the fact that there are scores of varieties easily and cheaply obtainable, the flowers of which have a distinct and regular market value. We do not need to say that it takes just as much room, attention and care to grow the unsalable sorts as it does to grow those that the market will take and for which it will pay a good price.

Get a move on

Prizes offered for forced bulb material at the various spring exhibitions are fairly liberal, considering the little care and cultural skill required to bring them in. Yet, although the list of available varieties of tulips, narcissi and hyacinths is constantly being added to and presumably improved by European introducers, we see little, if any, advancement in these things as exhibited in this country from year to year, during the past quarter-century. It is not the fault of the seedsmen that so many planters and exhibitors cling to old deteriorated varieties, for the more progressive seed houses have been continually eliminating the worn-out sorts and cataloguing better things each season as soon as the price placed them within reach. Hyacinths such as Charles Dickens and Norma, once invincible, have today no chance on the exhibition board, against Enchantress, Lady Derby or Morina. Horsfieldi in narcissi is now hardly worth growing and the same is true of many once victorious tulips. Exhibitors abroad are far in advance of us in this respect as accounts in the foreign gardening papers show. We should like to see a little more enterprise and enthusiasm displayed on this side. There is still time to work up something creditable for next spring's shows.

OUTDOOR VEGETABLES AND FRUIT

CONDUCTED BY

Edwin Jenkins

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Jenkins. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Cauliflower

Cauliflower should be carefully gone over and the leaves drawn together and tied to protect the head (flower) from rain and frost as well as to keep it as white as possible. Now that there is danger of rather severe frost it is well to draw the soil well up around the stem and bottom leaves or to pack them well between and around the plants with litter or leaves. This will help to keep them quite late.

Celery

The celery that is to be left outdoors for the winter should be earthed up as a protection against frost as well as for blanching and before doing this it is well to tie each head carefully with a little thin raffia. Such stock that is going to be lifted and put in cellars or other frost-proof places are easily protected by boards placed on either side of the rows or by packing clean litter in between the plants.

Lifting the Various Root Crops

During favorable weather the crop of carrots, beets, salsify, and some of the parsnips, should be lifted and stored away for winter. Do not let these roots lie long on the ground before gathering them up as the quality is impaired by any great amount of drying. They are best kept where the temperature is just above the freezing point and an earth floor is more suitable than any thing else. Some parsnips may be left in the ground for the winter and if these are dug soon after frost is out their flavor will be found to be excellent.

Lifting the Exhibition Roots

Great care must be taken in this or all the season's work will be thrown away just by some slight accident which might be avoided if the job is done right. It does seem like a lot of work to dig right down to the bottom of a carrot or parsnip which is over three feet long but it is the only way to be sure to get it, for while it is sometimes possible to get hold of the top and draw the whole thing out, yet, on the other hand, it may break and then your root is gone and it is almost sure to be one of the best specimens that is ruined. So don't be tempted by "the easiest way" but go right in and dig. Having removed the roots from the ground soak them in a tub of clean cold water and sponge lightly. Then selecting the cleanest, straightest and best colored specimens, wrap them in wax paper and lay them in a cool root cellar, covering lightly with damp moss until the day of exhibition, of which "more anon."

Exhibition Onions

These should be hung in an airy loft so that the air can circulate all around them as these highly fed specimens are very apt to rot. Those who have not the good loft to hang them in can put their best bulbs in flats on shallow boxes upon a layer of excelsior and turn them over every few days so as to expose every part of them, and while a certain amount of sunshine will do them lots of good I would not expose them to the full sun under glass. Of course, if they are in a frame where the sash can be easily removed the sun will do no harm but in the greenhouse it is well to cover them with tissue paper during the hottest part of the day.

BRITISH HORTICULTURE.

Sweet Pea Trials.

The Committee of the National Sweet Pea Society have arranged to hold a series of trials next season at the Burbage Experiment Station Leicestershire, under the direction of Major C. C. Hurst. No certificate or award is given by the society for novelties unless they are sent for trial. If desired a test will be made as to the purity of the stock, on the payment of an extra fee. The annual meeting of the National Sweet Pea Society will be held in London, on Oct. 20th, when a satisfactory report will be presented as to the past year's progress.

Our Loss—America's Gain.

A well known figure in the horticultural world in the person of Mr. J. Harrison Dick, is leaving London to take up his residence in the United States. Mr. Dick, as the editor of the "Journal of Horticulture," has been held in the highest esteem by his colleagues. This was demonstrated at a gathering in London on Sept. 11th, when he was presented with a gold watch and an illuminated address by his gardening press confreres. He received felicitations on his new sphere of work, and best wishes for continued success. Mr. Dick has rendered valuable service to the United Horticultural Benefit and Provident Society, the committee of which have given him a gold fountain pen and an illuminated address, conveying good wishes and high appreciation of Mr. Dick's useful aid.

Hybrid Orchid Register.

The orchid committee of the Royal Horticultural Society have recommended that a new record, to be called the "Hybrid Orchid Register" should be established. Orchid raisers and growers are to be asked to bring their new plants when in flower for the first time, even although they may not be sufficiently developed to enter for awards, and to enter the name, parentage, and name of the exhibitor, on a registration form, to go before the committee. After testing to prove that the name is in order, it will be entered on the society's "Hybrid Orchid Register," and, once recorded, the name must be recognized for all crosses of similar parentage when subsequently shown, unless valid reason can be produced to prevent it.

The Dahlia Season.

The Royal Horticultural Society's show on Sept. 23rd was notable for an interesting display of dahlias. The Cory cup for a group of decorative garden dahlias was won by Carter, Page and Co., London Wall. E. C. Included were Negro and Union Jack (collarettes), Mrs. D. Fleming, Amos Perry and Australian (cactus), Delice and Mdme. Lamiere (decorative), Red Indian and Chieftain (pompons). Warnaar & Co., Sassenheim, Holland, had a fine show of imposing paeony-flowered varieties. The following new dahlias have received a first-class certificate from the National Dahlia Society: Rosa, a rosy mauve pompon by Keynes, Williams & Co., Salisbury; Wee Gracie, a cream pompon, by J. T. West, Brentwood, Essex; John Green, paeony-flowered, scarlet, with bright yellow centre; Pierrot, pale yellow cactus; Dorothy Hawes, deep rosy-pink cactus, and E. F. Hawes, shell pink cactus, by Stredwick & Son, St. Leonards-on-Sea, Sussex.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF NEW YORK.

The big fall show is only a short time off, beginning on October 31st and continuing until November 4th. It will be held in the spacious halls of the American Museum of Natural History, located in one of the finest residential sections of New York City. This building is one of the largest and finest in the world devoted to the natural sciences. Schedules and entry blanks will be sent upon application to the secretary, George V. Nash, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, New York City. Everything points to a big exhibition. New York is the center of a large horticultural field, which does and can produce the best examples of the horticulturist's art. An invitation is extended to all the local societies to help make this the biggest and best exhibition of years.

Do not forget that the National Association of Gardeners holds its annual meeting, as the guest of this society, during the exhibition, a hall having been reserved for their use at the American Museum of Natural History. This meeting will bring a large number of gardeners from all parts of the country, so let us take pride in showing all what can be done along the line of horticulture. Generous prizes are offered for chrysanthemums, roses, carnations, foliage and decorative plants, and orchids, and it is the policy of the society to offer special prizes for worthy exhibits not provided for in the schedule. Send your exhibits where they will be seen and appreciated by the many. Over 130,000 visited the fall exhibition last year.

For the first time in its history, the society is offering a silver cup, valued at over $100.00. This is to be awarded for the best exhibit of twelve vases of chrysanthemum blooms, in twelve varieties, three blooms of each, stems 18 inches long.

An appeal is made by the secretary for prompt entries of exhibits. Do not wait until the last minute, for this greatly increases his labors and interferes seriously with the proper and artistic arrangement of the exhibits. Send in your entries promptly that proper arrangements may be made for their display. First come will be first served.

GEORGE V. NASH, Secretary.

CONNECTICUT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The second September meeting of this society was held on the 26th evening of that month at the County Building, Hartford. This was "Dahlia Night" and the centre tables were completely filled with dahlias in cactus, decorative, collarette, show, fancy and peony classes. President Huss exhibited nearly sixty varieties, Niel Nelson about fifty varieties, and A. Righenzi about thirty varieties. The judges announced the following awards: President Huss, first-class certificate; Mr. Nelson, a first-class certificate, and Mr. Righenzi a cultural certificate. The exhibitors gave instructive addresses, going into details regarding the culture and propagation of these favorite flowers. The meeting was well attended.

ALFRED DIXON, Secretary.
Wethersfield, Conn.

GARDENERS' NATIONAL CONVENTION.

The annual convention of the National Association of Gardeners will be held this year in New York City during the fall flower show of the Horticultural Society of New York, which takes place October 30th to November 4th.

The business session of the association and the election of officers for the coming year will occur on Monday, November 3rd, at the American Museum of Natural History, in which building the flower show is held. On the evening of November 3rd the annual banquet of the association will occur at the Hotel Endicott, New York City.

Members intending to attend the banquet at the Hotel Endicott should notify any member of the following committee so that reservations may be made for them:—Thomas W. Logan, Jenkintown, Pa.; James Stuart, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; William J. Kennedy, Chestnut Hill, Mass.; John F. Huss, Hartford, Conn.; John W. Everitt, Glen Cove, N. Y.; John Canning, Ardsley, N. Y.; Peter Duff, Orange, N. J.; and M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J.

Everything points to a big convention, and the committee cannot give assurance to those who decide on the last day to attend the banquet, that they can be provided for. Tickets to the banquet are $2.50. Several men prominent in the horticultural world have expressed their intention of being present at the banquet, among whom are some able after-dinner speakers; and with the general programme a gala night may be anticipated.

M. C. EBEL, Secretary.

ALBANY FLORIST CLUB.

The monthly meeting of the Albany Florist Club was held on Thursday, October 2nd, at the Albany Cut Flower Exchange, which will be the meeting place hereafter. The Flower Show and Publicity Committee reported progress. An invitation was extended to the club to visit J. H. Snyder, the violet grower of Rhinebeck, N. Y., on Sunday, Oct. 5th, and about twenty members agreed to go. Two nominating committees, three members each, were appointed by President Henkes, to be known as the regulars and the opposition, to prepare separate tickets to be voted upon at the December meeting. The regulars are Fred Goldring, Thos. Tracey and Louis H. Schaefer; opposition, Edw. Tracey, John Haggerty and Frank R. Bilson. After adjournment Thos. Tracey, manager of the Albany Cut Flower Exchange, invited the members to a spread, which all hands enjoyed very much, extending a vote of thanks therefor. The next meeting will be at above place on Thursday, Nov. 6th.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

Examining Committees.

President Chas. H. Totty announces the committees to examine new chrysanthemums for the ensuing year, which are as follows:

Chicago—J. B. Deamud (chairman), E. O. Orpet, D. A. Robertson. Ship flowers to J. B. Deamud, 160 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Cincinnati—R. Witterstaetter (chairman), James Allen, Henry Schwartz. Ship flowers to chairman, Jabez Elliott Flower Market, care janitor.

Boston—Wm. Nicholson (chairman), James Wheeler, Alex. Montgomery. Ship flowers to Boston Flower Exchange, 1 Winthrop Sq., care chairman.

New York — Eugene Dailledouze (chairman), W. H. Duckham, A. Herrington. Ship flowers to New York Cut Flower Co., 55 W. 26th St., care chairman.

Philadelphia—A. B. Cartledge (chairman), John Westcott, S. S. Pennock. Ship flowers to A. B. Cartledge, 1514 Chestnut St.

Shipments should be made to arrive by 2 P. M. on examination days to receive attention from the committee. Must be prepaid to destination and an entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week they are to be examined, or it may accompany the blooms.

Seedlings and sports are both eligible to be shown before these committees, provided the raiser has given them two years' trial to determine their true character. Special attention is called to the rule that sports, to receive a certificate, must pass at least three of the five committees.

The committees will be in session to examine such exhibits as may be submitted to them on each Saturday during October and November, the dates of which will be October 11, 18, 25, and November 1, 8, 15, 22, 29.

Official Judging Scales.

Commercial—Color 20, form 15, fullness 10, stem 15, foliage 15, substance 15, size 10. Total 100.

NEW LONDON HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

This society held its annual dahlia show Wednesday, Sept. 24th. Owing to the dry weather there was not so much competition among the exhibitors. Mrs. O. P. Chapman, Jr., of Westerly, R. I., staged about 400 specimens, the chief attraction being a large cactus, twelve inches in diameter. It's the only plant in this coun-

DAHLIA EXHIBITION AT DREER'S NURSERIES, RIVERVIEW, N. J.

The accompanying illustration shows a portion of the extensive exhibit of dahlias, etc., in the Service Building at Riverview Nurseries, during the out-door Fall Flower Show, Oct. 4th., to 11th inclusive. An exhibition of this character enables visitors to make a closer inspection of the individual flowers than may be made in the fields where the cultures of dahlias are composed of over 800 varieties, many of which have not as yet been introduced. We have seen a good many dahlia exhibitions this fall but for novelties and good things, nothing like what was to be seen at Dreer's. Here were all the novelties from Europe—and these have to be seen to be believed. The rank and file have not been keeping track of the wonderful things the European growers have been doing of late years. You have to go to Dreer's to be up to date. We must leave for a later issue a critical review of the varieties, of course, but we may state here briefly, that the vast improvements in the collarte, cactus and decorative classes, were a revelation.

In cannas, the recent favorable weather gave a show that was simply amazing for October. Wm. Bates, Moros, and Gustave Gumper were the bright particular stars, not forgetting Hungaria of which latter there were shown some 25,000 clumps, probably the largest single stock in the country of that fine new variety. Over fifty varieties of phloxes were shown, all unusually fine for the season. The perennials, such as delphinium, helianthus, asters, etc., filled two long tables and were of surpassing interest.

Hardy perennials at the "Riverton" Nursery are also attracting much attention, as many of the late-flowering varieties are now in bloom. Other attractions, such as the water lily ponds, rock garden, hardy shrubs, evergreens, grasses, etc., together with the extensive houses of decorative plants, etc., are all attracting much attention and go towards making this Fall Flower Show a grand success. Many automobiles laden with enthusiastic flower-lovers are constantly arriving besides hundreds of visitors, by train and trolley.

try. Two other fine exhibits were by George L. Stillman, of Westerly, and W. M. Carroll, of Waterford. Andrew Beran, superintendent of the George M. Landers estate, put up a fine group of dahlias grown in six-inch pots. The children from the schools had good collections of vegetables and wild flowers.

If readers of HORTICULTURE want to see dahlias growing they should try to visit the Hillcrest Dahlia Gardens, Westerly, R. I., owned and worked by Mrs. O. P. Chapman, Jr. The fields are one mass of bloom of all colors.

FLORISTS CLUB OF PHILADELPHIA.

By forty-three to twenty-eight J. Otto Thilow was reelected Tuesday evening, Oct. 7, to the presidency for the third term, over one of the strongest candidates that could have been put up, Adolph Farenwald. This is no disparagement to Mr. Farenwald, but only shows how strong a hold Mr. Thilow has on the rank and file of the Club and their appreciation of the splendid work he has done during his incumbency.

A fine sport of Maryland after the style of Sunburst was exhibited by George Burton. It was highly commended by the committee and will be heard from in the future. Aurora has been suggested as a name for it and same seems very appropriate as it suggests the beautiful color. It is a great bearer and bids fair to be a commercial variety of importance. C. H. Grakelow told the members of his trip to Panama.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

A Call for Names of American Roses.

It is the effort of the American Rose Society to obtain a complete and accurate list of all the varieties of roses which have been originated on the American Continent, as far as it is possible to obtain them. This letter is addressed to rosarians with the hope of obtaining the fullest assistance in this direction. It is the intent to publish in the Annual Bulletin of the American Rose Society the list, as fast as it can be properly compiled, for authentic record.

Will you please give us this information:

What roses have you originated?
Names .....
In what year?.....
At what place?.....
Pedigree of the same.....

If you have not personally done this work, but have any information bearing upon the subject, will you kindly give what assistance you can?

BENJAMIN HAMMOND,
Secretary.

The third annual flower show of the Oyster Bay (N. Y.) Horticultural Association was held on Oct. 2 and 3. It was the most successful exhibition in the history of the association. A chrysanthemum show will be held on Friday, Oct. 31.

ELBERON HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Following is the list of special prizes to be competed for at the Annual Chrysanthemum Exhibition to be held at Asbury Park, N. J., on October 27-29th. Get busy, ye militant growers. Every win is a boost:

Charles H. Totty's silver cup for ten best white chrysanthemums.

The Wells' gold, silver and bronze medals for best two blooms of Miss Clara Banghart.

Hitchings & Co., silver cup for the best and largest bloom of chrysanthemum (Class 24 in Schedule).

Michell's Seed House, gold medal to the exhibitor winning the most prizes in points, based as follows: 3 points for a first prize; 2 points for a second prize; 1 point for a third prize.

Michell's Seed House, silver medal for the best and largest vase of 5 chrysanthemums: 1 pink, 1 white, 1 yellow, 1 bronze, 1 crimson, any variety.

Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., for a specimen plant of Phoenix Roebeleni: first prize, $7.00; second, $3.00.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The annual exhibition of the New Hampshire Horticultural Society will be held at Laconia on Oct. 22-24.

August Poehlmann, Guy French, George Asmus, M. Barker and Joe Einwech for C. L. Washburn, a committee representing the Chicago Florists' Club, met Oct. 6 with the following committee from the Cook County Florists' Association: A. Henderson, H. N. Bruns and W. Keimel. The object of the meeting was to bring about an affiliation of the two clubs, resulting in a motion to that effect to be presented to the clubs at their next meetings.

A very fine exhibition of vegetables was staged in Horticultural Hall, Boston, on October 4 and 5. It was free to the public. Splendid collections were shown by Col. Fred. Mason, A. W. Preston, Oliver Ames, J. A. Nixon, F. W. Sargent and W. J. Clemson. In the special classes, these exhibitors were also well represented as well as Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Whitman, David R. Craig, G. W. Page, Warren Heustis & Son, Mrs. A. A. Warburton and others. There were a few fruit exhibits of excellent quality. A first-class certificate of merit was awarded to R. & J. Farquhar & Co. for a new single hardy chrysanthemum from Corea.

At the monthly meeting of the Elberon (N. Y.) Horticultural Society on Monday, October 6th, awards were made as follows:

George Masson for dahlias, 90; C. O. Duncan for apples, 80; and Wm. R. Seymour for gardenias, 70 points. A certificate of culture was awarded to George Masson for a large display of dahlias.

The coming fall show, which will be held in the Casino, at Asbury Park, N. J., October 27-29, was the chief business of the evening. Schedules have been mailed to past exhibitors and will be sent to anyone upon request. The show promises to surpass all previous shows which the society has held. The schedule provides for over $1,000 in cups, medals and cash prizes. A very interesting and instructive paper was read by George Masson on "The Culture of Bulbs," with an interesting discussion following. The next meeting will be held on November 3rd.

OBITUARY.

George R. Oliver.

George R. Oliver, aged 78, one of the older residents, died at his residence in Bradford, Pa., on Sept. 25. He had lived in Bradford for the last 30 years and 18 years ago became a florist, which business he was conducting at the time of his death. Besides his widow he is survived by one son, and three daughters.

THE CARE OF DAHLIA ROOTS.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

Please tell me if it is better to separate dahlias in the fall than in the spring. I find that during the winter many of them break off from the main stem and sometimes a whole variety is lost by breaking. Also, if dahlias should be taken up before or after the foliage has been frozen.

Thanking you in advance,

Yours truly,

Mass. M. F. J.

Either fall or spring will do. The only objection to fall separation is that the split parts may dry out and so kill off the eye. One point in favor of waiting till spring is that one can see the eyes better then than in the fall.

It is immaterial whether dahlias are taken up before or after the foliage has been frozen, provided the frost has not been severe enough to reach the base of the stem and the eyes or to cause rotting of the lower stem and incidentally the eyes.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—Illustrated Descriptive List of "Four of the Finest" New Spencer Sweet Peas for 1914; also Advance Offer of Sweet Peas for 1914.

—Well printed, unique and attractive in makeup, the first Catalogue of Bulbs, Hardy Herbaceous Perennial Plants, Etc., of this new seed house makes a most favorable impression.

Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., Boston, Mass.—Bulb Catalogue for 1913. Includes also hardy perennials, shrubs, implements, etc., a very neat and well made fall list of good things for garden or greenhouse.

M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—Supplement to the "Willing Helper." Everybody in the trade knows the "Willing Helper" catalogue. This 12-page supplement is same size pages and intended to be attached to the main catalogue. It will be found very suggestive and useful to patrons of "The House of Rice."

Eastern Nurseries, Jamaica Plain, Mass.—Wholesale Trade List for Fall, 1913. An advanced list of ornamental hardy material indispensable in the planting of home grounds, landscaping, etc. Fine illustrations are given of the popular roses—Sargent, Egan, Farquhar, Minnie Dawson, Lady Duncan, Daybreak and Dawson.

NEWS NOTES.

A DENVER LEGAL CONTROVERSY.

I notice a news item in one of the trade papers referring to a controversy between The Park Floral Co. and the State Land Board and making it appear that we are largely in arrears for rent.

The correspondent is probably justified in drawing such a conclusion from articles published in the daily press, but the fact is that this is entirely a legal controversy involving the right of the Land Board to arbitrarily increase our rental under a lease which does not expire until 1926.

OPENING OF GALVIN'S NEW YORK STORE.

An interesting event of the present week in New York is the opening for business of the new establishment of Thomas F. Galvin, Inc., at Fifth avenue and 46th street. The formal opening, however, is set for October 15. The building which has been in course of erection during the summer is a six-story structure, of colonial architecture, tapestry red brick with white trimmings, and on the roof a highly ornamental curvilinear conservatory. All along the facade, on the ledge above the first story and on the line where the building meets the sidewalk a heavy line of green has been planted, composed of English ivy, euonymus, hemlocks and taxus, and the marque over the entrance on the corner has been similarly treated, making a strikingly pleasing effect. The store interior is unique and beautiful, walls and furnishings being in Wedgewood blue and white in rich design by Tiffany studios. Every feature is new and novel in flower store interior arrangement, the effort being to avoid the conventional florist store appearance. One large Tiffany vase of one variety of flowers in each window will be the only window adornment and the lighting effects are quite out of the ordinary also. All the stationery, boxes, etc., are in the same white and blue as the furnishings. The ammonia pipe system has been installed for cooling and additional storage facilities are provided in the basement, where also are workrooms, ribbon rooms, closets, etc., affording convenience for all requirements of an up-to-date florist business.

The conservatory on the roof is reached by two elevators from the store and when completed—which will probably be a month hence—will be a very attractive feature. The arrangement, which is to be designated the Jardin d' Or, will include a central pool and fountain, trellised vines, statuary, etc., with beautiful lighting effects.

W. A. Bridgeman, the manager, has been busy overseeing and arranging for the past two months. Mr. Bridgeman is thoroughly conversant with the New York trade, its needs, its sources of supply and in all respects well-equipped to carry out successfully this new enterprise under the management of a Boston house.

WEDDING NOTES.

A very elaborate decoration for a house wedding was executed by Geo. Weinhoeber, manager of Fleischman's, Chicago, last Wednesday, at the Boyd-Lyford wedding at Wheaton, Ill. The artistic blending of heather with American Beauties and maiden hair fern was the distinctive feature of the house decoration, 250 heather plants being used in honor of the nationality of the groom. They were the pink Erica globularia and the white Erica gracilis nivalis. Each guest upon arrival was presented with a small bouquet of white heather and pink roses tied with Scotch ribbon. The bride and maid-of-honor and the six bridesmaids all had white heather as a part of their bouquets.

Elaborate weddings seem to be very popular this fall and some of the retailers say they are coming along at a faster pace than usual for so early in the season. A large church wedding in Oak Park, Ill., was in the hands of J. Mangel, and the decorations were in colors arranged as to produce a rainbow effect. Seven bridesmaids carried seven-foot shepherd's crooks, wound with ribbon and flowers, which was a very pretty feature. Most places are reporting a lively wedding season already, which is certainly a promising outlook.

CHICAGO NOTES.

The American Importing Co. finds its mother of pearl letters growing in popularity and sales are increasing rapidly.

The State Fair at Springfield, Ill., always an event of importance to Chicago florists, opened auspiciously, and the floral exhibits are being staged at this writing. A fair number of the large growers are competing.

The annual contests between the city schools for the most attractive grounds and among the children for the best home gardens, vacant lot gardens and home window boxes, came to a close last week, and many cash prizes from $10 to $25 were awarded. Peter Reinberg, president of the Board of Education, has taken much interest in this contest and was warmly commended by the superintendent of schools.

Personal.

A. L. Vaughan is looking much better and seems on the way to complete recovery.

John Canger is back after a three weeks' vacation, but the bride has not materialized and he says there is no truth in the rumor that he was on a wedding trip.

Harry Rowe has moved into his new store at the northeast corner of Wabash and Washington streets, where he has a very large space on the second floor. The large ice box was used for the first time on Monday and things are fast getting into shape for a wholesale and retail business.

A PENN ADVERTISEMENT.

The following is the text of an effective advertisement which appeared in the Boston daily papers before last week.

What Flowers Do For Weary Brains.

The eyes and the brain of the busy man, no matter what kind of work he follows, become weary and need rest, just the same as any other part of the human body.

Nothing has been found in the wide world that will give weary eyes and a tired brain more immediate rest than a few moments gazing on a pretty bed of bright colored flowers. The contrast is so great from that which has occupied the organs until they were well nigh exhausted, and the effect is simply marvellous.

Flowers in the home divert the mind and rest the weary eyes of the housewife and mother.

A bouquet in the sick room aids in keeping the mind off the disease, and often starts the brain on a new channel of thought that puts the patient on the road to recovery.

Flowers in the office, or on the desk of the weary clerk or stenographer, will produce such a telling effect that by actual comparison more work is accomplished by those whose eyes and brains are rested by the presence of those gifts from nature.

Artists visit the parks and gardens to study the flowers, and their orbs are wonderfully toned up by the refreshing glimpses of the colors in nature, and no artist has ever been successful who does not study colors in the beautiful flowers.

It will pay any student, or anyone deeply engrossed in thought along any particular line which is apt to make the brain weary, to have a pot of bright flowers on the desk.—From Sunday American, September 14.

ROCHESTER FLOWER SHOW ABANDONED.

Instead of perfecting arrangements for a flower show that was planned for early in November, the committee of florists and others met at the Powers Hotel recently and voted to abandon the project for this year, at least. The action was a result of unexpected opposition that developed from most of co-operation the show could hardly be the downtown florists, without whose made successful.

It is said that the same retail florists were among those who, at the June meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association, voted in favor of an exhibition this year, and that their unexpected eleventh-hour change of front had led to a cancellation of plans.

Many organizations and persons were to have worked with the florists to make the 1913 show a success. The city park authorities, the State Conservation Commission, the Chamber of Commerce and such residents as Mrs. W. S. Kimball and George Eastman, whose collections of rare plants and flowers have nation-wide reputations, were to have made exhibits.

The chief objection that the downtown florists make to holding an exhibition this year is that the undertaking is at all times a bad financial risk, since the sum represented in the displays is seldom equaled and never exceeded by the receipts at the show, and that to undertake such a risk every year is not wise. They believe that once in two years is as often as the show ought to be held.

It is contended, too, that if the show is held too often popular interest in it will fag and the financial loss will be increased.

The opinion of the downtown florists did not receive general indorsement by the committee, most members of which expressed the opinion that in holding the show only once in two years the florists were defeating their chief object, the cultivation and maintenance among Rochesterians of a love for good flowers. It was pointed out that last year's show did not represent a financial loss, attesting growing popularity, and should give the florists courage to hold the show this year.

The downtown florists held to their position and the committee was forced to recommend that no show be held this year.—Rochester, N. Y., Chronicle.

CLEVELAND'S EXHIBITION HALL.

We show herewith exterior and unfinished interior views of the new building in which will be held the Cleveland (O.) Flower Show, Nov. 13, 14, and 15. This building is so large and so particularly well adapted for the purpose that it will undoubtedly interest many of our readers. It was built for a large garage to be used for car storage purposes. The floor space is 64,000 square feet. The part in which the show will be held is just in course of construction, having been added about a year later than the rest of the building.

Cleveland is going to have a large show. And in this building they have room enough to accommodate everyone who has an article worthy to be exhibited. The city is a center of great wealth and exhibitors who go there will find an appreciative clientage.

NEWS NOTES.

The Boston Retail Florists' Club had their first meeting and dinner on the evening of Tuesday, Oct. 7, at the American House. President Henry Penn was toastmaster. After the speaking a vaudeville entertainment followed.

The formal opening of The Orchid Store, the new floral establishment of Newsham & Scheuermann, took place on Monday, October 6th. The store, which is located at 141 Carondelet street, is one of the most beautiful in the country.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON A pretty good and lively trade has been coming this way for the past ten days and a certain amount of snap was added by the somewhat bare condition of supply. All flowers of acceptable quality have been selling well and returning good results to the growers. Indications now point to a rapidly weakening market, however, and the current threatens to overflow and bring on a period of inundation, which will not take long to change the aspect. A long period of foggy weather has softened up the roses, lilies and chrysanthemums and quality is rather on the down grade for the present. Violets are coming in faster than needed and a surplus is probable for some time to come. Carnations have been selling well and they are of good quality as a rule. Not many cattleyas yet, but they are on the way. Chrysanthemums are good and daily improving as well as increasing.

BUFFALO Fall business continues good, although the early part of last week was on the quiet side. Weather conditions were not favorable but at the end of the week things cleaned up quite satisfactorily. Outdoor stock continues to come in and some good gladioli were had, also asters. Chrysanthemums are coming on rapidly and some fine violets are seen and stock in general has increased in quality. Carnations have a good demand and clean up well. Beauties are in good supply and about the only thing on the short side at this time is lilies. Weddings are in evidence and lily of the valley, orchids and white roses are having a good call.

CHICAGO Warmer weather and continued cloudiness have kept down any tendency to an over-supply of good stock, and aside from wedding orders have limited the local demand. Violets, both home-grown singles and Rhinebeck doubles have made their appearance, but after the first arrivals, customers were wary about stocking up with any quantity, and sales were slow on later shipments. The weather is too warm for long transportation and the eastern violets are not arriving in condition to keep long. Chrysanthemums are not up to the demand, and most of the blooms have the appearance of having been picked rather sooner than was desirable. A few small lavender ones made their first appearance, yellow and white still largely predominating. An occasional shipment of asters comes in, though that flower is considered as practically gone. Roses are plentiful and stock is considered good. Medium American Beauties are not sufficient to meet the demand, but this condition is common. Carnations are fast reaching a stage which delights the grower and sales are satisfactory all around. The number of weddings uses up all the lily of the valley, but orchids are hardly as much in demand as growers could wish.

CINCINNATI The past week has given us the best and firmest market we have had for some time. The Jewish holidays, combined with some rather large weddings, are the direct causes. The demand was the same as the previous week, i. e. a fair call that about took up greatly limited receipts. Roses are now the largest factor in the market. Almost every variety is in good supply while the average quality is very high. Beauties have been cleaning up on sight and on a good many occasions run short of the call for them. The supply of all other flowers offered seems to be rather limited. The cut of dahlias has been, up to this time, far below the mark of other years. Lilies are fine and prove good property. Early chrysanthemums are good.

NEW YORK The chrysanthemum inundation has got well under way this week, the big, unwieldy crates blocking up the wholesale stores and crowding everything else into the corners. At the same time the rose crop is on and rapidly mounting upward under the impetus of the warm weather of the past few days. There is a profusion of other things, from dahlias up to lælio-cattleyas, and prices have sagged under the weight of material which, although the retail demand has shown an encouraging activity, is far in excess of the local outlet. Already, in the chrysanthemum array are seen some flowers that would hold their own in an exhibition. In this class we saw at Smith's, Beatrice May and Chrysolora—blooms such as a few years ago we would have believed to be an impossibility for the first week in October. There are some beautiful dahlias coming in, irresistible in their purity of color and jaunty carriage, but they are overwhelmed by the great mass of trashy varieties, badly grown and thrown into the boxes "any old way." Express charges are just the same as they would be on salable goods. Lilies are plentiful. A moderate supply of violets is received and they seem to be in favor again for street wear.

PHILADELPHIA We are pleased to be able to report another week of very good business. Stock went well all along the line and there was very little surplus of any kind. Prices are good for the season and with the excellent clean-up growers ought to be well satisfied with their returns. White flowers of all kinds were probably the leaders. American Beauty roses were a little less plentiful and went up a notch in price. Russell and Johnkheer look fine, but there are not nearly enough of these for the demand. Richmond is improving right along and is in good demand. Killarney leads Maryland now—larger cuts to choose from and better flowers; Radiance also is a prime favorite. Sunburst and Mrs. Aaron Ward are the best among the half dozen yellow varieties. Carnations still very scarce. It is fortunate there are plenty of dahlias else dealers would have difficulty in getting good low-priced stock. The chrysanthemum is more in evidence this week, and of excellent quality. The chief varieties noticed include Polly Rose, Glory of Pacific, October Frost, Golden Glow, Unaka and Chrysolora. Orchids are fairly plentiful and the demand keeps pace. In cattleyas there are a good many small flowers coming in and these bring only about half or third of first size specials. Easter lilies are coming in more freely and have dropped back again to normal figures. This condition is liable to continue for some time.

ST. LOUIS This market is in a fairly good condition, stock of all kinds rather scarce except roses. The retail trade is opening up fine. Prices have gone up a little on fancy stock in everything except roses. Chrysanthemum blooms are only few and sell quickly at a good price. Carnations have been the scarce article. Violets are coming in strong daily, some very good stock being offered. Most of the outdoor truck is about over for this season. Lily of the valley and lilies should have a strong call this week as the social season opens and fall festivities are on.

WASHINGTON Business during the past week picked up somewhat although it is not yet anywhere near the standard. Many dealers are complaining of the dullness and it will take some crisp fall weather to bring about a needed change. Openings have kept the stores busy to some extent and the presentation of corsage bouquets by a local shoe house to its women patrons called for the furnishing of nearly 30,000 roses. Orchids are in better supply, but the demand for them is not at all heavy; violets are not being received in any great quantities and the quality is quite poor. Roses and carnations are better than they have been and the same may be said of chrysanthemums. Dahlias are still to be had in large quantities.

SUCCESSFUL FLORISTS

All over the country are using McCray Refrigerators. The circulation of air is so strong and steady that there can be no stagnation or dampness, so that your stock will always be fresh and fragrant. Furthermore the saving in ice will more than pay for the cost.

McCray Refrigerators

will be a attractiveness to your shop. Beautifully made and finished, they are lined with white enamel, opal glass, tile, mirrors or marble, as you desire. Write today for our catalog No. 73, which will give you ideas how to add to the attractiveness of your establishment.

GARDENIA BUDS DROPPING.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

I am sending you some gardenia buds which are dropping off our plants. Would be pleased if you could let me know the cause. They are two-year-old plants. We are keeping them around 70 degress, night, and so to 85 daytime with sun heat. They have been fed about once a week with cow manure and Clay's, alternately. The plants are in a fairly healthy condition.

Yours sincerely,

N. J. P. E. H.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

Dear Sir—Your favor of the 24th inst to hand with sample buds and letter from P. E. H. We note that his plants are two years old. We prefer to plant new plants every year; we should advise discontinuing manure water and with the coming of cooler weather the trouble with the buds will disappear.

Very truly yours,

F. J. DOLANSKY.

Lynn, Mass.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

The annual floral show of the Brookland Brotherhood was this year a marked success. Some fine stock was shown and the attendance was heavier than ever before. Flower shows of this type are becoming extremely popular around the city and are being fostered by the florists as they increase the love of and the demand for cut flowers. A number of attaches of the Department of Agriculture acted as judges.

Mrs. F. H. Kramer is in New York this week, having gone to that city to meet her husband who, with other members of the band of Minute Men, have returned from a tour of Germany, France and England.

William F. Gude, and a number of other florists aided at the reception tendered by the business organization of Washington to the three newly appointed commissioners of the District of Columbia. In all about 700 merchants and business men were present. The affair was given in the large ball room of the Hotel Willard.

CLIMBING CUT WORM.

"R. R.", Mass., submits specimens of gray colored grubs doing severe damage in his greenhouses. They are the climbing cut worm for which the best medicine is a spray with arsenate of lead. Poisoned bran mash placed at the base of each plant is also an effective help.

Nikotiana
Twelve percent Nicotine
SPRAY AND FUMIGANT

For fumigating, NIKOTIANA can be applied by painting or pouring it on steam pipes, or by vaporizing in small pans over lamps.

Fumigating with liquid prevents filling the house with smoke as do tobacco dust, stems or paper,—which is injurious to foliage and blooms. Fumigating with NIKOTIANA simply emits fumes which destroy the insects.

Compare the relative efficiency and cost of NIKOTIANA with the higher priced nicotines and you will find NIKOTIANA the most economical.

Walter Mott's Notes by the Way

In Georgia.

Idlehour Greenhouses, Macon, Ga., are very busy, for in addition to the extensive local trade several surrounding towns are supplied by them. Americus, a town of 8000, without a greenhouse, looks as though there should be a good location for a live florist who wishes to branch out. Certainly times were never better here than now; with cotton bringing as high as 15c. the farmer has money to spend. Albany is another instance of of a live town of nearly 9,000, yet no florist. The inhabitants are flower lovers, as is shown by the well-kept gardens and tasteful displays. One of the finest sights I have seen is right on the porch of my hotel, which covers an entire block. On the north Wistaria sinensis; facing south, Antigonon leptopus with its lovedy long racemes of pink flowers backed with rich green foliage, Plumbago cœrulea, Jasminum nudiflorum, Lamarque and Marechal Niel roses. Ipomœa imperialis is a glorious picture, while cannas are now in full bloom.

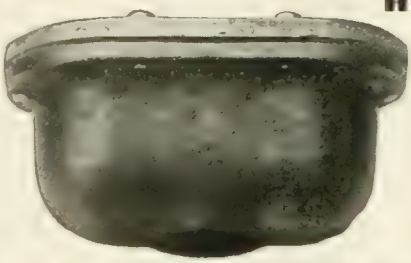
Speaking with Mark W. Johnson, a pioneer seedsman of Atlanta, he remarked that never to his knowledge has there been a better demand for high-class stock. Farmers are doubling their acreage in alfalfa, which has not only yielded a phenomenal seed crop, but with many who are growing it for the first time, four crops have been cut in the year. It is practically immune to the ravages of the bug and adapted to almost every variety of climate.

English or Perennial Rye makes a fine lawn here the first year succeeded by Bermuda grass.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

Oregon State Horticultural Society.—Proceedings of the 27th Annual Meeting held at Portland, Ore., November 20-22, 1912. Devoted mostly to fruit topics, orchard management, etc. Frank W. Power is Secretary.

Illinois Horticultural Society.—Proceedings at first Summer Meeting, Anna, Ill., July 30-31, 1913. The different phases of gardening for utility and for ornament appear to be given due attention in this periodical, which is undoubtedly doing useful work.



Proceedings of the American Association of Nurserymen, 1913. Secretary Hall has come forward with commendable promptness with this excellent record of the convention held June 18, 19 and 20, at Portland, Oregon, jointly with the Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen. Portraits of the president and secretary of each organization appear as a frontispiece.

Bulletin No. 10, "Suggestions on the Preparation and Use of Spray Formulas," has just been issued by the State Board of Entomology of Tennessee. The correspondence coming to the Board continually for information on the simplest and best remedies for the control of insect pests and plant diseases is daily increasing and to facilitate replies this bulletin has been arranged.

It is a publication consisting of 24 pages with nine half-tone cuts. Special attention is given to preventives. While much may be accomplished in the control of insect pests and fungous diseases by the use of fungicides and insecticides, more attention should be given to the prevention of the introduction of crop pests by judicious legislation, to the selection of resistant plants, to the elimination of weeds and worthless plants which harbor pests or act as intermediary hosts and are often of the same family as those under cultivation, to judicious rotation of crops, and to better drainage, cultivation and fertilization.

The formulas are arranged under five heads, those for biting insects, those for piercing insects, combined insecticides and fungicides, fumigating and fungicides. Attention is given to spraying to kill weeds. General suggestions are also given in this bulletin regarding spray chemicals and necessary precautions of their use. From cover to cover it contains valuable information and should be in the hands of all the readers of this paper. Copies may be had by sending 4 cents in stamps to the State Board of Entomology, Knoxville, Tenn.

A Frank Statement

HAVE you ever tried to work in your office when the masons were fixing the ceiling, the carpenters repairing the floors, and your stenographer was pawing over the papers on your desk trying to find a "lost, strayed or stolen" important paper?

If you have, you know exactly what a tremendous handicap our Irvington factory has been working under all this summer. We simply had to double the size of our factory. You growers made us do it because you treated us so liberally with your orders.

To carry on our usual business; take care of this year's increase and have first one department and then another of the factory all torn up or shifted about; has been a problem which makes trying to work in your upset office, look like a circle with the rim knocked off.

Very naturally some of our orders have been a bit delayed. Most of our customers have been mighty nice about it; they recognize that it is not always possible to run on schedule time even in their own business.

From now on, however, things will run along smoothly and deliveries will be made with a promptness that will be particularly pleasing to you all. Send in your orders or have one of our men come to see you. You can't afford not to have L. & B. estimate on any greenhouse job you may have—not alone as to figures but to have the knowledge that behind those figures stands the L. & B. guarantee.

First Prize Table Decoration
By David Boyd, at Newport Show

Devoted to the Florist, Plantsman, Landscape Gardener and Kindred Interests

Published Every Saturday At 11 Hamilton Place, Boston, Mass. Subscription, $1.00

What every Carnation Grower really needs is a True Rose Pink Carnation. The Philadelphia Pink is the one. When we say that is the Ideal Rose Pink Carnation in every respect (color, productiveness, size of bloom, non-splitting calyx, length of stem, etc.), we state the plain, unvarnished truth.

But we do not want you to take our word for it. Investigate for yourself, before you place the order.

WE WANT YOU TO SEE IT GROWING

Come to Detroit at any time during the season, and see for yourself about thirty-five thousand plants, as clean, as vigorous, and as perfect as any you ever had the good fortune to have on your own place.

PHILADELPHIA is a producer superior to many and second to none. Its color is of that shade of rose pink, which sells at sight and which your average lady customer would designate as "Perfectly Lovely."

Place your order early to insure early delivery and remember that you reserve the right to cancel it if upon seeing the Philadelphia growing you conclude it is not up to your expectations.

NOTE — Any Florist Club or individual wishing sample blooms, can have them by addressing a postal to the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, 38 Broadway, Detroit, Mich.

Prices: — $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 2500 at $95.00 per 1000; 5000 at $90.00 per 1000

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Ardisia crenulata

This important and beautiful holiday plant is very often bound to be neglected in the season of the busy rush. All young seedlings should be kept growing right along and any that have filled their pots with roots should have a shift as they may require it. On the way the compost is prepared depends much of success or failure in growing these plants. A compost of fibrous loam three parts, fibrous peat and well rotted cow manure one part each, with some leaf mold and sand will be to their liking. Give them a temperature of about 55 degrees at night. Allow room between the plants and place them where they can have full sun to help color up their fruit. Do not keep them too warm in the day time; anywhere from 65 to 70 degrees will do all right. When kept too warm they are apt to force out a premature growth which is not wanted.

Care of Mignonette

With the rush of other work do not neglect the mignonette beds. We will now be coming into the cool nights which is a great help to this plant. Give the surface of the beds a good dusting of bone meal and this can be followed by a light mulch of well rotted cow manure and loam in equal parts. Do not let the plants fall all over from the want of supports. See that this has attention as soon as they may require it. Give a spraying on all bright mornings and look the beds over to find the dry spots to insure an even state of moisture. Attend to disbudding from time to time and see that the green worm is kept in check by dusting with slug shot. Give plenty of ventilation at all times.

Care of Violets

I suppose that everybody who planted a house of violets last spring for the coming season has been painstaking and thorough in the care of same. However do not think that they are in such good shape that you can afford to neglect them. The spraying overhead should not be overdone; it should not take the form of very heavy syringing now, and from now on should only be done during forenoon hours on bright days, while the wetting down of walks and dampening of approaches should also be done only on sunny days. Violets are air-loving plants, so see that they have plenty of ventilation. Unless you have a demand for very early flowers, it is much better to keep the first early buds pinched off and not let them come into bloom until you have a good demand, and then, too, the first are so inferior in quality that it is a detriment to one's reputation as a first class grower to let such go out from an establishment. Look over and thoroughly clean every crown, to make sure that no larvae of insects or black spot on leaves is carried through the house and look out closely that no aphis of any kind gets a foothold.

Cannas

Cannas should be correctly labeled before lifting. Let them have a moderate freezing, and dig them on a sunny day. Do not shake the soil from the roots. We have never failed to winter canna roots with scarcely any loss by putting them on boards beneath a carnation bench. If the ground is damp and no boards are put down they will start to grow. From this time until time to take them up to start them there should be no need of watering the carnations so copiously that there is any drip. Drip is very injurious to canna roots. That is why a place beneath a plant bench will not do. Shelves in a dry shed with a minimum temperature of 45 to 48 degrees will answer better than any other place. Look them over occasionally during the winter and where they show any signs of decaying remove the diseased roots so it won't spread through the rest.

Lorraine Begonias

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine will just now be starting to send up the growth that will make it such a charming plant at Christmas, and now is a good time to do what tying is necessary. Some use three or four small stakes and surround the plants with a strand of silkaline. Others prefer one stake in the center of the plant and the branches supported by a tie of this material. This should be done soon, so that the plant has time to assume a natural appearance. Some of these are now sufficiently well bloomed to be quite salable. If they have been grown along in a moderately warm house give them one now where a minimum of 50 degrees is kept. Stand them well up to the light. Sunlight will not harm them in the least. It is a good plan to suspend a number over the paths by wire hangers. Use care in watering and give liquid stimulants occasionally. Ventilate carefully as we are running into the shorter and darker days now.

Out Door Roses

From now on and up to the first week in November is a good time to plant outside H. P. roses. Make the soil rich, but do not place the manure so it comes directly in contact with the roots. Do not plant too deep or too shallow as one is as bad as the other. See that the soil is worked well in and around the roots and left in a firm state. On or about the 20th of November give them a liberal coating of course manure around the base of the plant, so it forms a cone of about ten inches high.

Mr Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Azaleas; Callas; Chrysanthemums; Cinerarias; Sweet Peas; Shamrocks for St. Patrick's Day.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Repotting Fruit Trees

This is a job that should now be pushed through. Soon after the leaves assume their autumn tints is the best time to repot or remove fruit trees. There is little danger of buds dropping or any other mishap if they receive ordinary care after being overhauled at this season. Where only a very limited number are grown the job will not occupy much time but where they are numbered by the hundred it is quite a consideration. It always pays to erect a temporary bench close to where the trees are plunged in preference to carrying them into the potting shed where probably head room is limited with doors and other obstacles have to be reckoned with. The less the trees are moved around the better it is for them (and also for those who are responsible for the moving of them). The moving question is often the chief cause of so many trees losing their bottom limbs. After amassing considerable weight they are not the handiest of things to move around and often we find that the bottom branches have been broken. It may be found very awkward to hold up a large tree growing in a pot or tub so that the pot or tub can be removed. This can be overcome by looping a piece of soft rope around the base of the main stem and passing a carrying bar through the other end. Let one end of the bar rest on the bench and if the rope is of proper length, by lifting on the other end of the bar the tree, pot and all, will be suspended in the air and removal will be easy. It will be found that the bar has to be passed through the center of the tree and not on one side of it or a number of branches will surely be broken.

The drainage of either pots or tubs is of the greatest importance. As no great quantity can be used it must be put in the most scientific way to pass all the water. Use broken pots for all drainage where they are to be had. If scarce use one large crock over the hole of the pot and some broken bricks on the top and sides of it. These crocks must be placed so that the hollow side is underneath. It should be understood that all pots used for this work should be sound, clean and dry as if otherwise there will be great difficulty in getting them out next fall.

The soil should be of the best half decayed loam with plenty of lime rubble and charcoal mixed into it to keep it open after being rammed so hard. Let this opening material pass through the inch seive before using. If the soil is any way poor add a little bone meal. Mix this thoroughly and see that the rough material does not go all in the same place but is evenly distributed throughout. Do not rush the trees into large pots or tubs right away but give them only one size larger pot each year or replace them in the same size that they have come out of. This is done by reducing the ball with a hand cultivator. Trees that are a mass of roots will not allow this and must have a shift. Take a little of the old soil off the top of the ball whereever it is possible and also off the sides. These hard-wooded trees cannot be potted too hard if the soil has sufficient open material in it and is fairly dry when being used. Never pot with a soil that is on the wet side. Rammers of all sizes will be needed during the potting according to the size of the shift. They must be narrow enough to pass between the ball and the side of the pot and reach right down to the bottom. Only a small amount of soil can be worked down at a time; if a large amount is attempted the chances are that the bottom will not be reached and a cavity will be left instead of having the soil completely round the ball. After potting is completed remove them to a convenient place with an ash bottom which will help to keep out the worms. A little soot sprinkled over the crocks will prevent worms from coming in for some time. Have the trees watered soon after potting and see that this is a thorough watering for any dryness at the roots from the time they are potted until they are in flower will be disastrous for the flower buds will drop very easily. During bright weather syringe the trees over each morning, say about eleven o'clock. It will be noticed that at this time of year if there is no frost there will be a heavy dew which accounts for leaving the syringing until later. Have all dry about four o'clock.

OUTDOOR FRUIT AND VEGETABLES

"The time has come," the Walrus said, "to talk of many things;
Of ships and shoes and sealing-wax, of cabbages and kings." —Lewis Carroll

Miscellaneous

Among the "many things" is fall spraying of all kinds of fruit trees. Spraying at this season is not given half the consideration that it deserves. It has "got something on" spring spraying in more ways than one. First, inasmuch as the rush of work is not near so pressing as in spring and therefore the job is more likely to be done and to be done more thoroughly. Secondly, because if scale (be it San Jose or oyster shell) be killed now, some of the trees' vitality will be conserved which would else have been used in keeping these parasites alive till spring.

As soon as the leaves are fallen is the time and then give two good sprayings to all fruit trees including the small fruits, such as currants and raspberries if San Jose scale is bad in your vicinity. Use one of the oil sprays or lime-sulphur as convenient, and after that follow with caustic potash which will destroy all nests of caterpillars' eggs or any other insect eggs. This caustic wash is prepared as follows: To make ten gallons of

Nephrolepis Tuberosa Plumosa

A very useful and distinct dwarf-growing fern is shown in the accompanying illustration. It is one of the recent introductions of W. A. Manda, in whose place at South Orange, N. J., the variety first appeared. Nephrolepis tuberosa is naturally a tougher and hardier species than N. exaltata from which most of our well known forms of Nephrolepis have sprung. It is a native of Japan. The form plumosa is very beautiful on account of the light moss-green color of the crests at the tip of the pinnae as contrasted with the very dark green of the rest of the frond. One other good quality is that however dense the plant may grow there is never any mildew or rot at the centre and it may be wet with impunity, without the danger of damping off at the centre as some of the close growing exaltata forms are liable to do.

the wash, dissolve one pound of caustic soda in three gallons of water, then add three-fourths lb. of pearlash (crude carbonate of soda) and to this add three-fourths lb. of dissolved soap. Dilute with water to make ten gallons. Exercise care in handling this as it is liable to burn hands or face. Use rubber gloves and spray only on a still day. I have used this wash for painting the dormant wood of grapevines in treating for mealy-bug and found it very efficacious, killing the bug and its eggs and not harming the vines.

Trenching

In British gardens this is a time-honored winter job in the vegetable garden and it is very desirable that more of it should be done in our American gardens as by this method the growing soil is deepened, its fertility is increased and its drouth-resisting qualities are greatly improved. By trenching more of the soil is exposed to the alternate action of thawing and freezing and is therefore disintegrated at a more rapid rate than would be the case if left to lie in its ordinary position. This, in addition to the deepening, is among the most important benefits gained by trenching. Owing to the severity of the winters here this operation has usually to be done during the months of October or November, so now is the time to get busy. Do not undertake too much, but lay out a piece that you might reasonably expect to finish before hard frost and then proceed with due caution.

This caution is necessary owing to the fact that (unfortunately) there is only six to ten or at the most twelve inches of good soil in the majority of gardens, and care must be taken not to attempt to go too deep at first and bring up too much of the barren subsoil. About eighteen inches will be enough for the first season of drenching, then when you get around to this patch again (in the course of a year or two) you might venture two feet and then two feet six inches, and so on till the desired three feet of good soil is ultimately obtained but this of course is the work of years of patient labor and perseverance.

The operation of trenching is so well known to most gardeners that it seems almost superfluous to describe it, but there may be some beginners who would like a little light on this method of improving garden soils. Commence at one side or end of the plot to be trenched and lay it out in straight lines by placing stakes at either end, 3 feet apart; the second stake from either outside can be set 18 inches from the first one. Then dig out every other three-foot space and lay it on either side in such manner as will best expose it to the action of the weather, digging to such depths as suggested above. Obviously this only does one-half of the plot each year so that it takes two years to trench each plot.

The foregoing is the old-fashioned method in its essential features, but if it is desirable to do the entire piece at once then I would lay it off in three-foot spaces as before and take the entire soil from the first space and wheel or cart it alongside outside of the last three foot space, then shovel the second lot of soil on to space one and set it up in an inverted V-shaped ridge. Next empty space three onto space two and so on till the last space is empty and on this is ridged up the soil taken from the first space. This means the handling of every bit of the soil on the plot. But it is the only way that a piece of ground can be treated so as to deepen its cultivated soil in one year. Doubtless double-digging accomplishes something of the same object but does not expose the soil so thoroughly as this process of ridging.

Time to hustle

Five thousand dollars' worth of exhibition space sold, fifteen hundred dollars' worth of advertising for the souvenir program and over seven thousand dollars pledged on the guarantee list, is a pretty good starter for New York's big flower show for next spring. Somebody has been doing some hustling, evidently, but not much of the hustling appears on the surface and it does seem about time, as was remarked at the last Florists' Club meeting, that more noise should be made regarding this most ambitious project. With unceasing publicity from now on this affair should rival the successful "International" last spring. Enthusiasm all along the line, if it can be aroused, will accomplish much. Over-confidence and depending on a few to do it all is a dangerous habit we are all prone to fall into. Hundreds are vitally interested in this enterprise and every individual can and should do something to help keep the pot boiling for the next few months.

What shows are for

The great "show" season of the year is again with us and HORTICULTURE's news columns will bulge with lists of awards, etc., as of yore, no doubt. While these records of winners and winnings are, naturally, of much interest to the craft, yet it should be borne in mind that the competing for prizes is but a means to an end and that the primary and chief purpose of a public floral exhibition is the promotion of an interest in flowers among the people, to awaken the public appreciation of gardens and to encourage beautifying of the homes of rich and poor alike with the products of horticulture. A show which does not do this is largely a failure. See to it that not all of your efforts as exhibitors are prompted solely by the ambition to excel in prize winning. Devote a share of your material to showing visitors its use and adaptation. The layman, "his sisters and his cousins and his aunts," refuse to be enthused over the little fine points of difference between dozens or half-dozens of specimen blooms which appeal so strongly to the skilled grower, so see to it that a good amount of the premium resources is devoted to demonstration of the art of using flowers and plants as well as to demonstration of skill in producing them.

A profession with a great future

We wish to put on record a word of commendation for the sentiment and tone of the excellent paper on the gardener and his field which Mr. Ebel read before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, last Tuesday evening. The gardener, as distinguished from the commercial florist or seedsman, is a very strong element numerically in the Boston club, more so, we think, than in any other similar organization in this country, and it was to be regretted that a most inclement night kept so many of the young gardeners from hearing Mr. Ebel's remarks as well as those made by Mr. Farquhar and others. Fidelity and forebearance are cardinal virtues in a gardener's attitude towards his employer and these traits are equally to be cultivated by those who are employed in any department of our art. Whether commercial or "private," the same qualities make for success in either. The immediate future of gardening as a profession in this country is pregnant with opportunity, and the young man who will take heed and work faithfully to perfect himself in a broad theoretical and practical knowledge of gardening in all its aspects and bearings, need have nothing to fear as to the outcome, for both honor and adequate emolument await such.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ružička

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Liming the Benches

Where the last of the mulch is seen the benches will require a little lime, especially if the plants have not had a dose of it this season. Use only dry, air-slaked lime, that has been screened to make it free from all lumps. Apply just enough to whiten the benches along the surface. This will be all that will be required for the one dose. Follow with the hose, watering the plants well so that the water runs through the benches fairly good. This will insure proper watering, and will also give every rootlet a chance to secure some of the lime. It is well to have the benches a little on the dry side when the lime is applied, for then the watering which is given afterward will be felt more by the plants and they will "wake up." Do not apply another coat of mulch for at least a week after liming, for lime and manure should never be mixed.

The Temperature at Night

This can still be kept up to 64 degrees F. even though the nights are much cooler. The days are still warm, and the thermometer is bound to run up at mid-day, and too great a difference in the two temperatures is something that is not wanted. Hot water is not required as yet where steam can be used. It is very nice to have both. It is then a very simple matter to turn on a pipe or to take one off as may be needed.

Sulphur on the Pipes

Although it is advisable to apply a little sulphur to the pipes every now and then, there is danger of overdoing it, as is the case with many other greenhouse operations. Be very careful not to apply the sulphur all over the pipes. This would without doubt ruin the plants. Apply a little of it here and there along one of the pipes, about every twenty feet. Then be sure there is not more than ten pounds steam pressure on the pipes when the sulphur is applied. If the pipes are too hot the sulphur will evaporate very rapidly; in many cases it will burn, and then there will be some damage done. It is a good idea to have a little air on the houses that are subjected to this treatment, for the ventilators will carry off any surplus frames and the fumes inside will never become strong enough to do harm. Where only hot water is used for heating, sulphur evaporators will have to be resorted to. There are several of these on the market, but they must never be placed into the hands of an amateur. In fact one of the evaporators bears the inscription, "Place me not in the hands of a lunkhead." This goes to show that manufacturers of these evaporators realize the danger of over-filling the house with the fumes. Whenever using sulphur, remember that the fumes of sulphur are the greatest enemies of plant growth, and if made too strong, will kill the plants quicker than the disease.

The Sod Heaps

Are your sod heaps all put up, and ready for next spring? That is a question often asked here and there, and yet there are so many places where this important matter is left until the very last minute and then the teams, men and all, are rushed around to get the work done on time. Sometimes the sod heap will be put up on one end while the men will be chopping it down, and carrying it into the greenhouses on the other end. This may be a hurry way to do, but it is not the very best for the roses, and where the growers are none too careful the results of this haste will show in the diminished cut of roses, poorer plants, and in more cases than one, plant diseases. Put up your sod heaps in the fall, and avoid a good many troubles.

The Partly Cloudy, and Partly Sunny Days

On such days as these it will be impossible to maintain a steady temperature, and the best thing to do is to reduce the air when the temperature falls below 72 degrees and then put on more air should the houses go above 78. Usually these clouds are accompanied by a heavy wind, and it will be found very convenient to keep a little steam right on hand to turn into the houses, should it become necessary.

Clubs and Societies

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The October meeting of this club happened to strike upon one of the most stormy and disagreeable nights ever experienced at this season. Some sixty or seventy members, however, managed to show up, which was certainly a compliment to M. C. Ebel, of Madison, N. J., who was scheduled to read a paper on "The Real Gardener." Mr. Ebel was on deck all right and accompanied by his fellow-townsman, Chas. H. Totty, who took advantage of the opportunity to show the Boston people some of the beautiful early-blooming chrysanthemums which he is exploiting.

Chairman Downs reported for the committee on landscape gardening class, regretfully stating that owing to the lack of pupils and general indifference to the advantages offered by these classes the committee could not recommend the resumption of the work. Mr. Downs asked to be relieved from the responsibilities which he had carried during the past year, and his request was finally acceded to with reluctance and a standing vote of thanks.

Resolutions on the death of the late J. M. Gleason were read by the secretary.

Mr. Ebel's paper gave much pleasure to the audience. He urged the professional gardener to help clear the field of pretenders and incompetents by application, study and organization and thus elevate his profession to its rightful position before the world. He said that the great problem confronting the profession just now is how to properly bring to the knowledge of people who employ gardeners the ability of the practical gardener, the lack of such knowledge and consequent recognition causing the loss of opportunity to conscientious and capable representatives of the craft. He particularly urged that the gardener endeavor by attire, deportment and patient fidelity to foster closer confidential relationship between his employer and himself. We shall take opportunity to publish some extracts from Mr. Ebel's paper in our next issue.

J. K. M. L. Farquhar followed with some interesting remarks. He said that the only way to advance horticulture is to advance the horticulturist. Elevate the gardener and you elevate the profession. Time, patience and self-denial are needed for the foundation for a successful life work in the field of gardening. Facilities for acquiring a good horticultural education are available now in this country, of which the young men of European countries would gladly avail themselves, but cannot. If the young gardeners do not occupy the great landscape gardening field now open it will be pre-empted by the landscape architects and engineers and their great opportunity will be irrecoverably gone. William Downs talked in similar strain and instanced the indifference displayed towards the landscape gardening classes of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club as showing the fatal mistake the young men are making. Robert Cameron did not agree with the preceding speakers. He admitted that some of the craft are not interested as they should be, but declared that there is no class in existence that are studying like the gardeners and that lots of young men are aiming high, but are not adequately paid for what they do. Mr. Cameron created much hilarity by his piquant remarks on the relationship usually existing between the gardener and his employer as he sees it. Mr. Westwood spoke optimistically of the gardener's future. W. N. Craig described the recent visit of the members to the Farquhar nurseries at Dedham and a rising vote of appreciation and thanks for the invitation and the hospitality so lavishly dispensed by Messrs. Farquhar on that occasion was accorded.

The chrysanthemums exhibited by Mr. Totty were briefly described by him as having originated with J. Nonin, of Paris, France. They are practically a new type and nobody would have believed it possible, a few years ago, that such fine blooms could be produced so early. Mr. Totty having had fifty-one varieties in flower, October 1. The flowers being grown in the open, keep longer than those grown under glass. They are mostly full double and of good medium size, some disbudded specimens being quite large. Mr. Totty said that a batch planted in late July had come into flower ahead of those planted early, but the plants were not as large. Peter Fisher showed large vases of carnations Gorgeous and Alice, the latter being a lovely pink one brighter than Enchantress and several shades deeper than Pink Delight, this being the first time it has been shown.

NASSAU COUNTY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual dahlia show of this society was held at Glen Cove, N. Y., on Oct. 8 and was a great success. Both in number and quality of exhibits displayed this year's exhibit far exceeded that of any previous year. The exhibits of Mrs. E. M. Townsend, Oyster Bay, and Sisson & Thurston, Newport, R. I., were the chief feature of the dahlia exhibits. The collections of vegetables staged by H. C. Smith, Oyster Bay, A. G. Hodenpyle, Locust Valley, and Mrs. H. L. Pratt, Glen Cove, were conceded by many to be the best seen at any of this society's exhibitions. Mrs. B. Stern's special prize of a silver cup for collection of fruit brought out a large competition. John F. Pratt was awarded 1st in this class, exhibiting a fine display of over 50 varieties. Mrs. R. J. Maxwell put up a meritorious exhibit of Helianthus Maximilliana which showed up beautiful in artificial light adding much to the beauty of the show. C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., had on exhibition a table of early-flowering outdoor chrysanthemums which were admired by a great many. The attendance was very good and the committee in charge deserves much credit.

In the evening the regular meeting was held and arrangements gone over for the chrysanthemum show which is to be held on Oct. 28, 29.

THE VINCENT DAHLIA SHOW.

Last week the Seventh Annual Dahlia and Canna Show and Harvest Home Festival was held at the Vincent Farm, Cowenton, Md. It is estimated that fully 10,000 persons attended during the week, coming from all over the country. The register showed visitors from California, New Orleans, and other equally distant points. A detailed account of the exhibition will appear in our next week's issue.

Jas. Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y.—Vick's Garden and Floral Guide, Autumn Edition. Cover shows tulips in colors. Also Vick's Wholesale Bulb Catalogue. Particularly strong on florists' forcing bulbs.

Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., Boston, —"Bulbs, 1913." This catalogue is not confined to bulbs but lists a large variety of plants, trees and garden material generally. A fine cluster of auratum lilies adorns the title page, with Darwin tulips on back.

Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa. —New Floral Guide, Autumn 1913. Cover illustrations in colors. Also Fall Trade List of Roses, Cannas, etc. A fine illustration of "Excelsa" or "Red Dorothy Perkins" rose, is shown. Said to be a good Easter forcer.

A CORRECTION.

We are informed that we were in error in locating the University of Minnesota in St. Paul, when describing the new plant laboratory of the College of Pharmacy of the University in our issue of October 4. This great State University is situated in Minneapolis and not in her sister "twin city" St. Paul.

Adolphus Gude and Fred H. Kramer have returned from abroad and promise to give the Florists' Club of Washington an account of their travels at the next meeting. Mr. Kramer is quite enthusiastic over the way flowers are sold directly out of windows in some of the Continental cities where the stores are practically all of glass. He stated that in most of the places the prices equalled or exceeded those in vogue here with but few exceptions.

The Maule Business.

There has been some speculation as to what was to become of the business of the late Wm. Henry Maule. We are advised that the business is to go on just as it has in the past, minus the directing genius of its founder. The executors of Mr. Maule's will, who are his brother and Edward Dungan, for many years Mr. Maule's confidential man, are going to continue the business, and the offices will soon be removed to the new Maule Building at 21st and Arch streets. While we have no authoritative statement to make, it is generally assumed that Mr. Dungan will be the managing head of the business. As he has been with Mr. Maule for nearly thirty years he will no doubt be able to continue along the same lines which have proven so eminently successful in the past. It is needless to say that our good wishes are extended to the new management.

New Enterprises.

A new seed business is to be started by John Wilk on West 33rd street, not far from the Pennsylvania Terminal, in New York City. Mr. Wilk is a young man, full of ambition and aggressiveness, and no doubt his new venture will prove a success.

The Schenectady Seed Co., successors to C. W. Witbeck, has been incorporated, and is ready for business at the old stand. As Schenectady is a town of over 60,000, it would seem that there is room here for a good, high-class seed house, and it is hoped that the Schenectady Seed Co. will measure up to this requirement.

Among the new seed concerns, which are rapidly forging to the front, is that of the Meyer-Stisser Co., of Baltimore. We hear only good reports of this house. Both Mr. Meyer and Mr. Stisser are comparatively young men and have started in business with the right idea and no doubt they will be heard from in the near future.

Crop Notes.

There is little new that we can say regarding crops. It is pretty well established that peas are generally a fairly abundant crop this year, and nearly all of the leading growers will have some surpluses to dispose of. We are informed that there are quite a number who have, as it were, broken into the business, without either capital or experience. These concerns are offering stocks at comparatively low prices, but would-be purchasers should be careful to ascertain the pedigree of any peas they may buy. No doubt a few of them may have stocks of excellent quality, but beyond question there will be a considerable quantity of inferior stuff offered, which should not be used by any seedsman with a reputation to lose.

MICHELL'S INTERMEDIATE GIANT FLOWERING

Sweet Pea -- Blanche Ferry

A novelty of extraordinary value to the florist. Seed sown in October will commence flowering March 15th and continue through April and May. Three to four extra large blooms are produced on long stems from 16 to 20 inches in length. The culture of this variety is the same as all other Winter Flowering sorts, except that it should be sown during the month of October. Our seed is original greenhouse grown stock. Per oz., $1.00; $3.50 per ¼ lb.; per lb., $12.00.

In Writing Advertisers Kindly Mention HORTICULTURE.

Several English, and one or two New Zealand houses are quoting peas at very low prices. It is well to point out one fact, however, with reference to the New Zealand peas. These are not harvested until about the first of the year, and cannot be delivered in this country until about April, consequently they arrive too late for the current season's trade, and must be carried over until the next season. It may be taken for granted that any peas offered for immediate delivery are of last season's crop.

We recently stated that beans would be a very short crop, basing our statement on information from several of the leading growers. We have recently seen some quotations and estimates from other growers somewhat in conflict with the earlier statements. We still believe, however, that most varieties of seed beans will be short, and the fact that most growers are not willing to quote prices, and that the leading wholesalers will not, indicates quite clearly that our former estimate of the situation is about right. It seems pretty well understood that all varieties of dwarf limas will be short, particularly the Fordhook and the Burpee's Improved. It is doubtful if over 50 per cent. of a crop is realized from the former, and quite possibly it will be under this figure.

We have nothing new to offer in the way of news as to the seed corn crop, but rather inclined to the opinion that the reports of damage by the early frosts of last month were more or less exaggerated. Undoubtedly there will be seed corn enough to meet all reasonable requirements. While prices are likely to rule somewhat higher than last season, they are not going to reach any alarming figures.

Helena, Mont.—The Montana Seed Growers' Association was organized here last week, and the following officers elected: President, F. C. Sumner, Park County; vice-president, Truman Ames, Miles City; directors, L. D. O'Donnell, Billings; P. Carney, Waterloo; Joe Nash, Clyde Park; Charles Wentworth, Lewiston.

NEWS NOTES.

S. J. Reuter & Son, of Westerly, R. I., have sold to Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., one-half interest in their new crimson rose. It is the intention of Messrs. Reuter and Totty to disseminate this novelty in 1915.

The Flower Room which Frank Gaul opened about a year ago on Thirteenth street below Market street, Philadelphia, has not proved a financial success and has been closed. The landlord had the best of it—location and accommodation and all things considered.

Waterbury, Conn.—James Leary, formerly with George T. Ryan, and his brother Daniel, have formed a partnership and will in the next few days open a flower shop at 134 South Main street, opposite Scovill street. Both young men have lived in Waterbury all their lives and have a host of friends who wish them success in their new undertaking. The new concern will be known as Leary the Florist.

Of Interest to Retail Florists

A PHILADELPHIA OPENING.

Charles Henry Fox had an opening at his new store the "Sign of the Rose," in Philadelphia, on Monday evening, October 13. Fully 100 representatives of the trade, growers, commission dealers and retailers were present and enjoyed the hospitality which was bountifully handed out. The establishment is very handsome. In the rear of the spacious store is an up-to-date conservatory filled with plants,. Also a cold storage room, workroom, room for the reception and caring for stock, and a spacious garage where plants, etc., may be loaded on autos and unloaded under cover, the latter opening out on to a back street. The establishment throughout is a credit to Mr. Fox and to the Philadelphia florist trade. After inspection lunch was served, many prominent men in the florist trade being seated at the tables. Music and speeches followed, the keynote being good wishes and compliments for the Sign of the Rose and its enterprising proprietor.

PERSONAL.

R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md., made a hurried visit to New York, Thursday, Oct. 9, returning the same day.

J. Harrison Dick, formerly editor of The Journal of Horticulture, London, has arrived in New York, where, we understand, he is to take a similar position with one of our contemporaries.

Chas. McCrea and Chas. Murphy are the two Cincinnati florists who are running for office this fall. The former is a candidate for the office of commissioner of the city of Newport, while the latter is running for township treasurer of Delhi Township.

David Bisset, son of Peter Bisset, of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, was run down by an automobile last week, sustaining a compound fracture of the left leg which necessitated his removal to the Emergency Hospital. Mr. Bisset, who is but about 22 years of age, is an employee of the plant bureau of the Department.

Cincinnati visitors—Joe Hill, Richmond, Ind., and L. H. Thomas, Troy, Ohio.

Philadelphia visitors—Arthur and J. D. Cockcroft, Northport, N. Y.; John Paul, Cumberland, Md.; W. C. Langbridge, Cambridge, N. Y.; W. A. Sutherland of Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, Ill.; R. T. Brown, Queens, N. Y.; C. L. Roberts and son, Anacostia, D. C.

Boston visitors—Julius Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J.; C. H. Totty and M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J.; L. J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I.; H. Huebner, Groton, Mass.; A. L. Dorward, Newport, R. I.; F. R. S. Balfour, London, England.

CHICAGO NOTES.

Frank Oechslin's first carload of azaleas from Belgium arrived this week. The plants are fine and came in excellent condition.

Paul Blome, North Side florist, has returned from an extended trip to California. He will also spend a portion of the winter in that state. His friends are pleased to learn that he has regained his health.

An important real estate transfer was prominently mentioned in the Sunday Record-Herald of October 12. The property of the Foley Manufacturing Company was acquired by Arthur Gourley, a member of the company, for $146,250, subject to an incumbrance of $55,000. A new organization of the company is expected in the near future.

The opening of new retail stores still continues and this week adds two more. The Rienzi Flower Shop, with G. C. Steffins, proprietor, is on Evanston avenue (now Broadway), corner Diversey Parkway. W. A. Littlewood, 362 North Park avenue, River Forest, being in a neighborhood where stores are excluded, has built a small greenhouse and will engage in the florists' business.

The renaming of many of Chicago's streets, which has just gone into effect, changes the addresses of several florists. Evanston avenue becomes Broadway, Fortieth avenue is now Crawford street, etc. The greatest number of changes are in the numbered "avenues," which run north and south, and have been so easily confused with the east and west numbered "streets." The changes from numbers to names will greatly aid the unacquainted as well as be a help in the prompt delivery of mail, which, by a slight mistake in the address—as avenue for street—or omitting the "north" or "south" has sent mail miles from its destination and caused much delay.

Visitors: J. M. Hoffman, La Porte, Ind.; Paul Palos, Little Rock, Ark.; Mrs. M. Irby, Memphis, Tenn.; Mrs. J. W. Turberville, Memphis, Tenn.; V. A. Cowgill, Salem, Ohio.

The new store of Wm. L. Trumpore, at Stapleton, Staten Island, is already an assured success. Mr. Trumpore was for many years with J. H. Small & Sons, New York.

NEWS NOTES.

South Lyon, Mich.—Walter E. Hastings succeeds George Lunn in the florist trade.

New Britain, Ct.—R. B. Viets has purchased the greenhouse business of Mrs. Elizabeth K. Eggert.

Joseph Kelley, for many years at the head of the landscape department of R. Wallace & Co., Colchester, Eng., and who recently made a short visit to this country, has started in business in Colchester as a landscape gardener and garden expert, on his own behalf.

A CORDIAL INVITATION

Is extended to the trade to visit and inspect our new establishment, Fifth Avenue at 46th Street, New York City.

FLORISTS' CLUB OF WASHINGTON.

See Illustration, page 533.

A flower show of no small magnitude in connection with the October meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington proved a pleasing surprise to those who attended and were treated to a display unequalled here since the last public flower show given by the club.

Included in the exhibit were some twenty-five or more varieties of chrysanthemums, sixteen of which had been sent by C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J. These were of the early outdoor class and were recently imported by him from Paris, France. The varieties Mme. A. Nonin, LaAisne, H. H. Crane and A. Barham were awarded a certificate of merit and the committee presented a resolution thanking Mr. Totty for his kindness in bringing the flowers before the Club and commending their beauty and commercial worth. Many native varieties were also shown and included in the display were roses, violets, orchids, lily of the valley, dahlias, snapdragon, cosmos, etc. Special mention was made of Mrs. George Shawyer, Radiance, Milady, Kaiserin and Mrs. Charles Russell roses. The Radiance roses exhibited by Mr. Gude, as well as his American Beauties, cannot be beaten.

I. Rosnosky, of Philadelphia, and M. C. Ebel, of Madison, N. J., were present and each made a few remarks. Mr. Hammer told of the trip taken by the sixty or more members of the club and their friends to White Marsh, Md., on the occasion of the annual dahlia show of Richard Vincent Jr. & Sons' Company. There were only about two members present during Mr. Hammer's recital who had missed the trip and these looked quite envious. He declared the show to have been one of the most successful he had ever attended and his remarks were concurred in by the others. Deep regret was expressed on the death of Mr. Constant Ponnet which occurred some few weeks ago, and a letter expressing the sympathy of the club was ordered sent to his son.

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

The meeting of the New York Florists' Club on Monday evening, October 13, was a veritable "rouser," 140 members being present. Eleven new names were handed in for membership. Secretary Young made quite a detailed report of progress of the business connected with the approaching spring show, stating that space amounting to over $5000 is already sold and advertising space in the official program placed to the amount of $1500. The guarantee fund subscriptions to date total over $7100. Enthusiastic speeches on behalf of the show were made by many, including President Siebrecht, A. H. Scheider, C. H. Totty, Geo. E. M. Stumpp, Wm. Duckham, M. C. Ebel and W. A. Manda. Resolutions were presented by Patrick O'Mara on the death of Julius Roehrs and by W. F. Sheridan on the death of John B. Nugent, Sr. W. A. Manda invited the members to a field day at South Orange, N. J., and same was accepted for Friday, 17th, train leaving Hoboken at 1.03 P. M. The November meeting will be Ladies' Night. W. A. Manda made a very varied and striking exhibition of new plants, on which the committee reported as follows:

Polypodium Mandaianum, silver medal; Anthericum Mandaianum, highly commended; Nephrolepis tuberosa plumosa, highly commended; Polystichum varicum, hon. mention; Dracaena Rothiana, Manda's golden privet and Adiantum Farleyense Gloriosa, vote of thanks; dahlia Mrs. A. I. DuPont, dahlia No. 5 and dahlia Gertrude, preliminary certificates; dahlia No. 16, dahlia No. 100, dahlia No. 12, vase of Leucanthemum nipponicum and Asparagus elongatus, vote of thanks.

Other exhibitors and awards were as follows:

Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., new French chrysanthemums, Cranford Yellow and Chaldon, highly commended.

Bergenfield Nurseries, Bergenfield, N. J., collection of dahlias and hardy chrysanthemums, highly commended; special mention for collection of exhibition dahlias.

James Bell, vase of Dahlia Delice; A. N. Kinney, unnamed specimen geranium; Chas. W. Weber, seedling dahlias, votes of thanks.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS.

Department of Plant Registration.

Henry Krinke & Son, of St. Paul, Minn., submit for registration, the fern described below. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the Secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Name—"Pteris Krinkeii."

Description—The fern is a 1911 seedling sport from Pteris adiantoides. The fronds are much more divided and longer. It hangs over the pot in the usual size plants and it grows much quicker than the parent kind.

JOHN YOUNG, Secy.

THE LATE JULIUS ROEHRS.

The following resolutions were adopted by a rising vote at the meeting of the New York Florists' Club, October 13, 1913:

WHEREAS, God in His infinite wisdom has taken to Himself our friend and fellow member, Julius Roehrs, and

WHEREAS, Following the rule of custom, and the dictates of hearts strengthened by association with him in life, we take occasion, assembled as the New York Florists' Club, to give expression to the sense of loss which overspreads us, to record in our proceedings the solemn sorrow we feel and to send a united message of sympathy and condolence to his bereaved family.

It is meet and proper that in doing these we should also give testimony to the value of the deceased to us as a fellow member. Wise in council, energetic in action, cheerful in companionship, he endeared himself to us all and in his passing we feel that we have lost one of the staunchest supporters and most valuable members of our organization.

It is but just to his memory also to record that his enterprise was inspiring, his successful culture of the finest in horticulture raised the standard for the benefit of all. He was a tower of strength to us in many ways and the place he occupied in horticulture will, we believe, remain vacant for many a day.

RESOLVED, That we tender to the family of the deceased our deepest sympathy in their loss.

RESOLVED, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and that they be spread in full upon the minutes of this meeting.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Things are not as rosy in this market as would be wished. The weather has been very unpropitious for the retail trade, nearly two weeks of drizzle, fog and downpour with but one or two bright days intervening, having been experienced. Notwithstanding this the receipts of flowers have been mounting up although it cannot be said that quality has kept pace with quantity. Chrysanthemums are rapidly increasing and the influx has hardly begun yet. A depressing effect on other stock is unavoidable and prices have sagged along the line, except in a way on roses, which have remained stationary for the past two weeks. Carnations have weakened considerably, however. Yet it must be admitted that taking into consideration the very large amount of material coming in under very unfavorable conditions the trade has been clearing it up pretty well.

BUFFALO A period of ten days of real hot weather has been broken up by a heavy wind storm and rain and it came on Saturday causing 50 per cent of the Saturday sales to fall off. Saturday was looked forward to by the wholesalers as a clean-up day but such did not materialize. Roses suffered, also other stock, it being an impossibility to keep stock in saleable condition. Shipments, especially of Killarney, Richmond and other roses and dahlias were most affected. The latter were in heavy supply and the market was overloaded. Carnations have come on heavier and the receipts on everything else have increased. Asters and other outdoor stuff are still received and are not worth the handling. Chrysanthemums are coming on more plentiful each day. The trade is looking for cold weather and it will be welcomed when it does come.

CHICAGO The advance of fall makes little change in market conditions, which are fairly satisfactory. No special demand for large quantities of flowers has occurred during the past week but a steady, if not heavy shipping trade and a medium local demand has used up the stock day by day. The chrysanthemum holds the post of honor now and the first varieties are on the wane. October Frost is being succeeded by Yellow Frost, Golden Glow and Smith's Advance will soon be gone, and Chrysalora, Unaka, Touset, Virginia Poehlmann, Pacific Supreme and Monrovia are here. The demand is at all times equal to the supply and not one chrysanthemum goes to waste. Indications are that carnations will not be really abundant till after All Saints' Day, for which growers are now anticipating a good demand. American Beauties are now of excellent quality and the cuts were so large last week that prices did not hold to quotations on the extra lengths. The greatest demand as usual is for the medium lengths. All kinds of roses are coming in quantity and there appears demand enough to use them all. Miscellaneous flowers are narrowing down. Violets are arriving in better condition. Lilies are more plentiful. The new varieties of roses are attracting more attention as the fall advances.

CINCINNATI The demand last week was not up to that of preceding weeks. It was only on Monday and Saturday that there was satisfactory clearances. During the intervening days stock crowded considerably and some finally went to the ash barrel. The unsatisfactory condition of the market is due both to a slower demand and the large final influx of outdoor stock. With heavier receipts the market for the outdoor blooms has eased so considerably that only the best brings a fair figure. Quite a few of the smaller grades of dahlias find but a limited number of sales and those only at ordinary prices. The good ones sell well. Cosmos is selling well but there is entirely too much of it to give the market for it any kind of a firm tone. Some very creditable asters are still coming into town. All roses are in heavy supply and of a general high average of quality. American Beauties are in a strong supply but are not having as good a call as they had the preceding two weeks. The first of the double violets from New York have made their appearance. Single ones from local growers are offered. Lily of the valley and lilies are rather scarce and clean up easily. Chrysanthemums are coming in a little stronger. They have been selling well at good prices. Smilax is still scarce but the supply of other greens is large.

NEW YORK Market conditions are very disheartening to growers and dealers this week. Chrysanthemums are very plentiful, good flowers of such varieties as Monrovia, Unaka Kalb, etc., selling at $1.00 a dozen, the poorer grades being difficult to sell at any price. Some of the high class specimen blooms still bring $3.00 and $4.00 per doz., but buyers at these figures are few. Violets are in great abundance as are also cattleyas. Lily of the valley maintains its popularity and price well. Of roses, Mrs. Shawyer seems to be the best seller, bringing $10.00 per 100 for choice blooms. Beauties are not over plentiful. There is plenty of southern grown asparagus which holds the price on this commodity down.

PHILADELPHIA Monday and Tuesday of last week were pretty fair but the balance was on the "punky" order. The warm weather was favorable to outdoor flowers which aggravated the situation, coming as it did just when roses, carnations and chrysanthemums were becoming more plentiful and of finer quality. There were millions of dahlias and carloads of cosmos. The prayer now is: "Oh for a frost." But for all that—and nevertheless and notwithstanding—the volume of business for the season compares very favorably with other years.

PROVIDENCE The retail market has taken on much activity during the past week, a big jump being reported in all kinds of work. The opening of the fall social season together with the approach of cool weather has been mainly responsible for the sharp demand for flowers of all kinds. Violets are, however, a glut and are moving slowly at ridiculously low figures. Some alarm is felt among the dealers because of the abundance of violets at this time, it being the opinion that the crop will be short and out of season before the holidays. Chrysanthemums are more plentiful and the quality is improving. Carnations are coming better, in greater numbers and the stems are longer. Roses of all kinds are fairly good with a good call.

ST. LOUIS To cover the wholesale market correctly for the past week is a hard task. Stock is coming in in such abundance that the prices had to suffer greatly. Roses were a glut all week and in large lots sold as low as $7.50 per 1,000, and good stock at that. On top of these came large consignments of fancy dahlias. Cosmos and violets went begging and prices had to come down in order to dispose of them. Chrysanthemums are coming in and they are many. Carnations are holding up well as they are not any too many. In greens the market has anything the trade wants and plenty of it except smilax, which is scarce.

WASHINGTON Business still continues quiet although the prospects for better conditions are good. The days have been warm and cloudy, producing considerable mildew, and have been very depressing. Dahlias are now at their best and chrysanthemums are beginning to appear with longer stems and better foliage. Carnations, too, have improved materially and roses are coming in nicely. Asters have moved off the market and their place is being taken by carnations. Cattleyas are quite plentiful and reasonably cheap. The giving of corsage bouquets to all women customers by a local shoe concern proved quite a popular feature. The bouquets contained about five roses each and so great was the demand for these that in all 25,000 flowers were required. Flowers as gifts are becoming very popular here, many of the stores presenting them to both men and women visitors on the occasion of anniversaries, openings, etc.

A PATENT DECISION.

The Quaker Machine Co., J. A. Evans, manager, has secured perpetual injunction prohibiting the manufacture or sale by others than the Quaker Machine Co., of the double-acting ventilator arm on which they have a patent. The text of the decision follows:

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Indiana.

Decree.

John A. Evans, Complainant vs. James E. Jones, Defendant, in Equity No. 11,166.

This cause having come on to be heard, upon the pleadings and proofs filed on behalf of both parties, and after hearing counsel for the complainant and counsel for defendant, it is hereby ordered, adjudged and decreed as follows:

1. That Letters Patent of the United States issued to John A. Evans, of Richmond, Indiana, as the assignee of Newton R. Evans, on the 20th day of March, 1906, and numbered 815,914, for improvements in window Lifters are good and valid in law, particularly as to claims 1, 4, 5 and 6 thereof and that the said John A. Evans, the complainant herein, is the owner of said Letters Patent.

2. That the defendant James E. Jones, has infringed upon the said Letters Patent, and particularly claims 1, 4, 5 and 6 thereof.

3. That the complainant do recover of the defendant the profits, gains and advantages which the said defendant has derived, received or made since March 20, 1906, by reason of said infringement, and that the complainant do recover of the said defendant [illegible] damages which the complainant has sustained since said date, or shall sustain by reason of said infringement by the said defendant.

4. And it is hereby referred to as Master of this Court, who is hereby appointed to take and state the account of said gains, profits and advantages, and assess such damages and to report thereon with all convenient speed; and the defendant, his agents, officers, attorneys, clerks, servants, workmen and all in privity with him are hereby directed and required to attend before said Master from time to time as required, and to produce before him such books, papers, vouchers, and documents, and to submit to such oral examination as the Master may require.

5. That a perpetual injunction issue out of and under the seal of this Court, directed to the said defendant, and his agents, servants, workmen, attorneys, clerks, and any and all persons acting by, through or under the authority of or in privity with, the defendant, enjoining and restraining them, and each of them, from directly or indirectly making or causing to be made, using or causing to be used, or vending to others to be used, in any manner, and devices containing, embodying or employing the invention covered by said Letters Patent and particularly claimed in claims 1, 4, 5 and 6 thereof, or from infringing upon or violating the said Letters Patent in any way whatsoever.

6. That the complainant do recover of the defendant his costs and disbursements of this suit to be taxed and that the question of increase of damages and all other questions be reserved until the coming of the Master's report.

At the meeting of the Southampton (N. Y.) Horticultural Society on October 4, Chas. H. Totty sent specimens of very fine early outdoor chrysanthemums, flowers measuring nearly five inches in diameter and very handsome. John T. Withers is to give a talk this week (Oct. 16). Secy. D. T. Wells says that the July exhibition of this society made a clear profit of about $250.

CAN'T you remember when your grandad used to hold you on his knee and let you look at his watch and listen to its tick?

What a big thick heavy watch it was: So thick that it bulged out his pocket.

As a curiosity those old watches are interesting, but you or I wouldn't think of carrying one.

The watches of to-day are smaller, thinner, and far better time keepers.

U-Bar greenhouse construction with its light graceful enduring frame of all steel U-Bars, taken in comparison with other curved eave constructions, is like comparing this thin finely made Elgin watch of mine, with your grandad's heavy, clumsy one.

Although the U-Bar is by far the lightest of all constructions, none is any more enduring.

If then, you get extreme lightness, unequaled attractiveness and undisputed endurance, you certainly have the ideal house.

Just such a house is the U-Bar.

Send for catalog. Or send for us. Or both.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Azaleas

Instead of plunging the newly arrived azaleas in frames sometimes as closely packed as they were in their cases, as is so often done, they would better be potted up as soon as unpacked and assorted. Leaf mold and friable loam in equal parts, with a little bone meal and sand added is the soil usually employed. The best varieties for early forcing, to be had in bloom easily by Christmas, are Simon Mardner, Apollo, Duetsche Perle, Pauline Mardner and Vervaeneana. Before the azaleas go into their pots a thorough soaking of the root balls is necessary. Even if they should not seem to be overdry, no chances on this score must be taken. The failure of plants to do well may, in nearly all instances be traced to dry roots. The inner core of the ball, once dried out, remains in that condition ever afterward, no matter how regularly and thoroughly the plants are watered. Immersion in a pail or tub of water is the way to reach the spot. The plants after being potted, should not be exposed to sunshine for eight or ten days, nor to frosty weather at any time although a very cool and airy place suits them. All of the later kinds intended for spring sales may be kept for the greater part of winter in a temperature not much below or above 40 degrees.

Callas

Callas will, under anything like proper treatment, assure fair returns to the wholesale cut flower grower. While a rose house temperature is about right for a bench stocked with callas, both crops seldom do well under the same roof. To grow good callas the first importance is direct and strong sunlight. From this time on they will require some fire heat to maintain a temperature of from 58 to 60 degrees at night. When in growth they are moisture loving plants; they want soil and air, well and constantly charged with humidity of the life-giving, non-stagnant kind. When these plants are kept on growing without intermission and with ceaseless pushing of bud and bloom, the foothold a mass of fleshy white roots that will eagerly absorb large quantities of liquid food if dealt out to them regularly twice a week, there will be no let-up in the cutting of fine spotless flowers. Damping down will be necessary at least twice a day and ventilation should be given judiciously whenever possible.

Chrysanthemums

At this date all varieties have set their buds save exceptionally backward lots, and extremely late sorts. A helpful habit that deserves to be cultivated by everybody engaged in mass-cultures of this kind is the jotting down on the pages of a handy memorandum book anything worthy to be remembered of what the present season's experience has taught. Self-acquired knowledge thus preserved in readily accessible form, is of greater value as a guide in the laying of plans for another season than the sayings of others. Chrysanthemums now require close attention to prevent crookedness of stem by careful tying, mutilation by a constant outlook for insects and mildewed upper foliage by properly adjusted temperature and judicious application of air, moisture and feeding. In feeding and syringing it is much easier at this time of the year, and a mistake more often made and more disastrous in its effects on the stock, to do too much than too little.

Cinerarias

It is not easy to discard these beautiful plants, for they are so showy and the strains now offered are grand. These plants will now be making very rapid growth and should have every attention to keep them in full vigor. Seeds sown in August for Easter plants will now be in 2 in. pots and will soon want a 4-in. in which they will pass the winter, and in February be shifted into their flowering pots, 5 in. or 6 in. Give a cool and airy house, where the temperature can be kept from 40 to 45 degrees at night, with a rise of 10 degrees during the day with sun heat. In fact the fullest light and a low temperature and constant fumigation are the three essentials to make stout, healthy cinerarias. Particular care should be taken to ventilate well during warm and dull weather so that the plants will not grow soft. The green aphis is likely to be troublesome from this out so fumigate once a week and thus hold them down. Do not let the plants get pot-bound before giving them a shift, with a compost of two-thirds of chopped sods and one-third of well-decayed cow manure.

Sweet Peas

Sweet peas that were planted the end of July will soon be coming into flower. While the demand for sweet peas is not especially vigorous until after the chrysanthemum season has passed, there are customers who want them the year around and they are now counted among the indispensables in the wholesale markets. As the days grow shorter more and more attention should be paid to the watering of the benches. An overwatering once in a while might not show bad effects, but a continuation of it will ruin the constitution of the stock in a few days. Go over the benches carefully before watering, and if the soil is in need of water give it good and plenty. On the other hand, don't water soil which is not really in need of it. Look over the early plants every five or six days and give them the necessary ties. The night temperature for flowering peas should be kept about 50 degrees and a couple of degrees lower is better as winter progresses. Fire heat is now a necessity, but the plants must have free ventilation. Avoid, however, cold draughts, which may result in an attack of mildew.

Shamrocks for St. Patrick's Day

The last of October and up to the first half of November is a good time to make a liberal sowing of shamrock seeds. Use shallow flats or pans and fill with a compost of soil and leaf mold in equal parts with some sand. Give them a place well up to the glass in a house where the night temperature averages from 48 to 52 degrees. When they are well started a few degrees cooler will do. When they are large enough to handle prick out into other flats and grow on. Sometime after the new year they will be ready for small pots.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Dutch Bulbs for Outside; Ericas; Primulas; Orchids; Winter-Flowering Geraniums; Wintering Fuchsias.

OUTDOOR VEGETABLES AND FRUIT

CONDUCTED BY

Edwin Jenkins

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Jenkins. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Exhibiting Vegetables

Obviously it is useless to spend a great effort in the production of fine exhibition vegetables and then to undo it all by a poor presentation when the crucial time arrives. There has been a marked improvement in many of the fall exhibitions in the past few years in the manner that vegetables are staged for exhibition but many shows, especially the agricultural fairs, are lamentably deficient in this particular. Let us then begin to prepare at least a week before the show.

POTATOES: Wash the potatoes with a sponge carefully, not to scratch them with any grit that may be clinging to them. Use several lots of cold, clean water. Having prepared a liberal amount by washing clean, proceed to select the exhibition specimens. Have an ideal and try to get your tubers as near as possible to your ideal, medium size, shallow eyes, clear skin and perfect freedom from bruises, scab, wormholes or other blemishes. Then every potato should be as nearly uniform with the rest as rigid selection can make them. The specimens having been selected, carefully wrap them in tissue paper and lay away in a dark cool cellar till the day of the show arrives.

BEETS, CARROTS AND PARSNIPS may be washed and selected the same way, perfect form, uniformity and freedom from blemish being the ideal, as well as being as large as possible.

ONIONS: The onions may be selected and rubbed carefully over by the bare hand to remove any rough, loose skin. The tops should be bent over and neatly tied with raffia or string. The ideal here is: size as large as possible, a smooth skin, well ripened and conformity to type. Handle the onions with care as they bruise readily. Common newspaper makes a fine wrapper for them and each bulb should be wrapped separately.

The foregoing having all been cleaned and selected some five days to a week before the show we come now to the more frail kinds. Some of these, such as the MUSHROOMS, are best picked on the morning of the exhibition but the CAULIFLOWER may be cut a couple of days ahead and wrapped in wax paper, but first see that there are no slugs or worms in among the leaf stems. Trim off all the leaves except a few of the youngest which may be left till staging time when they should be trimmed as shown in photo. A good cauliflower for exhibition measures from six to eight inches in diameter, is round, convex, solid and as nearly pure white as possible.

LEEKS should be peeled, cleaned of all rough or dirty skin, then sponged with cold water and wrapped with wax paper till staged.

GLOBE ARTICHOKES may be cut and the stems put in water a day or two prior to the show, if necessary to protect them from the weather. A good specimen of an EGG PLANT should be uniform in color all around, large and good shape and the several specimens shown should match as nearly as possible. Don't show one large one and two or three small ones if you can avoid it. Egg plants may be gathered some days ahead if desired as they keep well.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS should be round, solid and dark green. They will stand picking a little in advance and should be soaked for an hour or two in clear cold water to clean them and fill them with moisture, then lay them out thinly in a flat and cover with paper.

CELERY should be full heart, brittle, crisp and clear of rust or slug marks, as well as perfectly blanched. A good soaking in cold water and sponging will clean it and keep it fresh. Then after pulling off the coarsest outside leaves tie it with a piece of raffia and when staging trim off the roots.

TOMATOES should be as nearly a perfect ball as possible, bright and clear of color, uncracked, firm, medium and uniform size and showing a fresh green stalk attached. Pick not more than a day ahead and wrap them separately in two or three thicknesses of tissue paper.

PEAS should be reasonably full, young, free from mildew and a good variety.

BEANS should be as large as possible so long as they are tender, crisp and young. Every pod should be perfectly straight.

CUCUMBERS for exhibition should be green, straight, uniform in thickness, round and fresh, carrying a good bloom. Wrap carefully in wax paper and handle the fruit as carefully as you would a bunch of grapes.

LETTUCE should be large, fresh and solid, having the outer leaves all in perfect condition. Soak well in water

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Tying.

Do not neglect tying at this time of the year, for the plants will need all the air and light that they stand show to get. Bunched up and poorly tied roses will usually get a good dose of spot to start with, and by the time that gets through with them the season is well over and the cut flowers are cheap once more. Never try to run a hospital at the time of the year when the prices are away up. Begin with good plants and keep them healthy, by treating them right. With the Beauties it is especially necessary to see that they are tied up all the time and not allowed to lie all over the benches. All shoots and growths that are thus allowed to lie around will usually go blind, and then they are worse than useless for they are a hindrance to new growth. Some growers will use these blind shoots to propagate from but we call that a very poor policy. Beauties are hard to set at times and using the blind wood for propagation will not improve them in the least. As for tying material that rests with the growers; some prefer this, others that. We find the rough burlap string the best and cheapest to use. Raffia does not hold the growths to the wires properly, and allows them to slip around a good deal while the plants are being syringed. This is a nuisance, for the plants thus bunched will be hard to keep clean from spider and the other enemies of the rose. Do not tie the plants too tight, so that the strings do not cut the growths. At the same time they should not be tied too loosely for that would be equally as bad. Here again the string mentioned comes to the rescue for it has all the necessary give, and as the shoot expands the string makes room for it.

Other Plants in the Rose Houses.

With the frost hanging right around, we are often tempted to crowd a lot of plants underneath the benches of the rose houses, at the ends wherever a little place is to be had. Our experience is such that we will never allow other plants of any kind to enter the rose houses. Keep the roses by themselves, and you will not have to fight half a dozen tribes of insects that are usually brought in with such plants.

Temperature for Cloudy Days.

Do not allow the houses to become too warm on the cloudy days. Sixty-six degrees is as warm as they should be allowed to get. A crack of air will suffice. If the houses are too warm the plants will become very soft and mildew will no doubt set in as a result. After several cloudy days when the weather suddenly clears, do not allow the houses to run up to their standard temperature. Keep them down to 72 for the first day and then bring them up to their regular temperature the next day. If the houses were brought up the very first day, after standing at 66 for two or three days, the change would be too great, and harm will result, for the plants will usually wilt badly, and develop but little on such days. It is also well to put off syringing until the next day if possible. Of course if the danger from spider is great then syringe by all means, but if it is not absolutely necessary, then let it go until the next day, when the plants will be in better shape to take it. Remember that the plants are very sensitive, and any sudden changes of any kind will be felt by them much more than most of us would imagine.

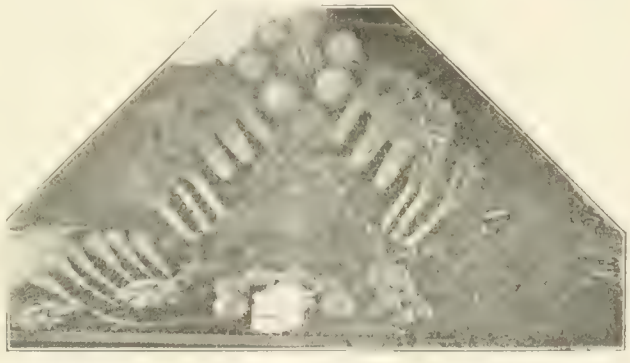
and after shaking out the excessive water wrap in wax paper but be sure you don't bruise the leaves, as this will show up later if you do, and generally about the time the judges are around.



Asparagus will naturally be forced at this season of the year and it is much more attractive where grown in full light having green tips and pink stems. Asparagus will keep for several days if the ends are stood in water. Straight, thick stems as long as possible are the standard.

Parsley is the best green for garnishing and should be soaked in cold water so that it will keep fresh as long as possible.

There are quite a lot of other vegetables which may be exhibited but the general principles of well grown specimens, clean fresh and uniform will be a good guide for all of them.

Arrangement

Artistic arrangement enhances the value of every display of vegetables not only in the eyes of the judges but the public also are attracted by it and it should be the aim of every exhibitor to make his exhibit a work of art. The arrangement of a collection of 12, 18 or 24 kinds offers endless scope for various displays of taste but no hard and fast rules can be laid down for every man's guidance. The accompanying photographs are not intended to be an infallible guide but are merely suggestive. These collections had run the gauntlet of two or three days handling by spectators and were in a very ragged condition when the photographer got in his work.

A good time to buy

The present is a most opportune time for [illegible] greenhouse trade to stock up [illegible] material as they may need during the coming season and can possibly make immediate room for. The large wholesale plant establishments are, at this season of the year, invariably overcrowded with stock and all plant material for growing on for Christmas or Easter or for normal winter sales may be bought now at figures that will leave a big profit as compared with the prices which will be demanded later on when cost of housing and care and expense of packing and risks of transportation in cold weather must all be covered. Azaleas, poinsettias, cyclamen, begonias, ferns, palms and a score of other staples that every florist must have can be purchased just now from the wholesale dealers advertising in this paper on most favorable terms. Write to a few of them and tell them we told you so.

Entertainment and publicity

The Park and Recreation Department of the City of Boston made a display of its resources and attractions in the great Columbus Day parade which was not only extremely attractive and creditable in every feature but as an example of publicity cleverness was certainly a masterly conception. The spectators were given to realize that Boston's park system is very much more than simply a series of well-groomed lawns, meadows, thickets and boulevards. The splendid floats, decked with evergreens and oak branches, giving practical demonstrations of the various recreation departments, children's games, bathing, life-saving corps, base ball, bowling on the green, groups of instructors, nurses, etc., etc., gave convincing evidence that the primary reason for the existence of a park department—its service for the health and rational enjoyment of all the people, old and young, rich and poor, is being well discharged. After such an eloquent exposition of efficiency it should not be difficult for the park and recreation commission to get anything it asks for from the citizens of Boston to carry forward its splendid work. It is easily the most popular of all the city departments.

Rochester's hat in the ring

We took occasion, recently, to comment regretfully on the reported abandonment of the plans for a show at Rochester this year, and so now that it has been definitely decided that the show will be given, we are glad to give equal publicity to that fact. We attach especial importance to this particular exhibition because, as before stated, of the advanced position taken by its management as to manner of staging and arrangement, on lines which we believe are destined to prevail in exhibitions generally in the not far distant future, where public appreciation and support is sought. As an exponent of progressive ideas concerning the purpose and character of public floral exhibitions Rochester has taken the initiative in a most commendable manner and we trust that her enterprise will be richly rewarded.

The following extract from a letter just received from Charles H. Vick is quite to the point:

> I noticed an editorial in the HORTICULTURE of Oct. 11th, on the Rochester Flower Show. It is the intention of the Rochester Florists' Association to hold their regular exhibition November 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8. For a time there was some discussion as to the advisability of holding a show this year, but it was finally decided to continue the good work, and we are preparing to give a larger and better show than ever. The private growers are responding nobly and we have promised up to date five to six large private places that heretofore have never exhibited. Our plan of arrangement will be a complete change from anything we have ever made before.

The Rochester Association is to be congratulated on having at its disposal the energy and initiative of a manager of the calibre of Charlie Vick. Of course the show will be a success, and all the more pronounced because of the temporary hesitation which has served to stir up the fighting blood of Rochester's Old Guard.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Root Pruning.

Root pruning automatically follows repotting fruit trees if this phrase is permissible in our business. The one should always precede the other because the trees plunged in the open air feel the benefit of the cool or frosty nights sooner than those growing under glass even though they may be standing wide open right along. Not all trees will need root pruning, only those that are not cropping satisfactorily or are making wood excessively. This latter trait is mostly to be found in young trees making their first or second year's growth. After this time has elapsed it is usually an easy matter to take the rankness out of them by cropping heavy, providing a set is obtained. Young trees planted last fall or winter in new borders will generally grow wood that is not conducive to producing the surest crop and a like state of things would exist next fall if this is not rectified now. Great strong wood is not the best to have in a tree for if it has a fair percentage of flower buds it will be noticed that they are very much harder to set here than on wood with less strength, and after this stage has been passed there is that other critical time—stoning—that has to be gone through and if there is any trouble around the fruit set on strong heavy wood will be the first to feel it. Wood of moderate strength will always give the best results. I say moderate because one might think I was in favor of a very weak growth. You will notice this is the wood that carries the most flower buds—those bunches of threes with two flower buds and a growth bud in the center every time. This then is the object of root pruning, to stop rank growth and produce wood that will carry the best crops.

Although the details of the work to follow will be for trees growing under glass the system can be used on trees growing in the open with the same beneficial results. Do not be afraid to root prune; two great points are essential for success, viz., do it at the right time and do not allow the roots to become dry before the trees are started into growth again. Have the soil in the border in a workable state, i. e., not too wet nor the reverse; the one is as bad as the other. This means that the date of commencing operations must be figured out some little time before hand and the border given a watering so that it will have time to partly dry before a start is made. Mark a semi-circle on the soil around the base of the tree at a reasonable distance and dig down to the drainage, throwing the soil well out of the way. Any roots that are encountered at this distance can be cut off near the outside of the trench. Now loosen the soil from the ball with a small digging fork, throwing it out of the trench at the bottom. When once a trench has been made around a tree the spade or shovel should not be used on the ball; do all this work with the fork leaving the shovel to get it out of the way from the base. When the ball has been reduced sufficiently to allow of tunneling underneath it do one side at a time and then replace the soil before the other side is attempted, otherwise the ball will break. Real bad trees must be got thoroughly underneath as there is a likelihood of strong roots going straight down. To make this test complete push a few yellow leaves underneath the ball from the first side done and dig on under the second side until the leaves are recovered; in this way it is an impossibility to miss any. Roots will now be visible in plenty and also be cause of trouble if not looped up to the trunk of the tree while the base is being filled in properly. Ram this soil underneath just as firm as it will go and add enough in the trench so that no roots can be laid in anything but a horizontal position. The actual pruning is easy; use a sharp knife and make an oblique cut upward. The growth the tree has made must determine how much to reduce them; let the strongest ones receive the most attention. All broken ends should be cut clean as they heal so much quicker. Be careful when replacing the roots; do not bunch them up but rather spread them over the largest amount of space possible and also remember they are found at varying depths, but try to get them nearer the surface than the drainage. Great amount of damage can be done by carelessly throwing the soil on the roots. It seems a simple thing but try it out. Having several roots laid out ready to be covered throw the soil on the first any old way, then take the second lot and gently spread on some fine soil, working the shovel from the ball to the end of the roots. In this way the roots will be kept straight by the course the soil is taking while in the former way the course of the soil may be across them all and thrown quickly it will take all the roots with it into a bunch. See that the trees have a good soaking soon after the job is completed.

Lettuce

Plants growing in the cold frames have made a quantity of very soft growth during the last three weeks, the weather here being exceptionally mild with plenty of rains. While we all appreciate a quick fall growth of these subjects there is such a thing as having too much of a good thing, a fact that may be very noticeable should the cold weather set in suddenly. Keep the plants as cool as possible until frost does come which will make them harder and in better shape to stand the cold. Cold winds will do more damage than a cooler steady temperature. From now on whenever water is needed apply it to the plants during the early morning so that they have time to dry before night. Later plants coming along in the vegetable house must not be coddled or there will be trouble ahead.

PHALAENOPSIS LUEDDEMANNIANA.

Our cover illustration this week shows a pretty specimen plant of this bright little stove orchid, a native of the Philippine Islands and which should be included in every collection of orchids. It flowers in February and March. The blooms are beautifully marked with cinnamon, amethyst and yellow on a white ground, two to three inches across and as shown in the picture, borne gracefully on procumbent scapes. This species has been the parent of a number of fine hybrids. The plant illustrated was grown and photographed by M. J. Pope, Naugatuck, Conn.

Clubs and Societies

LENOX HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The monthly meeting of the above society was held in the Town Hall, Lenox, Mass., on Saturday evening, Oct. 4th. A diploma was awarded to Chas. H. Totty of Madison, N. J., for a collection of outside early flowering chrysanthemums, the most conspicuous being H. H. Crane, A. Barnham, Chaldon, Hector, Mignon, Provence and Carrie. A. J. Loveless gave an interesting account of his recent trip to Newfoundland and Nova Scotia and of the landscape in general, and special mention might be made of the sweet peas, which Mr. Loveless said were the finest he had ever seen. A. H. Wingett, inspector for the State Board of Agriculture, also gave a very interesting talk of his visit to Worcester (Mass.) Agricultural Fair. It was also voted to affiliate with the Chrysanthemum Society of America. The coming Fall Exhibition, on Oct 23rd and 24th, was freely discussed and the following named gentlement have accepted the invitation to officiate as judges: R. Tyson, Convent, N. J.; H. B. Vyse, Morristown, N. J.; Jas. Ballantyne, Ridgefield, Conn., and J. W. Everitt, Glen Cove, N. Y. In addition to the society's prizes the following prizes have been generously donated:

A. H. Hews & Co., for specimen kentia; Giraud Foster's silver cup, for group of orchids; Julius Roehrs, special prize for orchids; Pierson 1 Bar Co. for 24 blooms, distinct varieties; Lord & Burnham Co., for 24 blooms; Scott Bros., for 12 blooms disseminated in 1913; C. H. Totty, for 6 Ursula Griswold; Wells Pockett, medals for 2 flowers Clara Bangbert, Elmer D. Smith, for 6 Elberon; W. Kleinheinz, for vase of W. Kleinheinz, Chrysanthemum Society of America, cup for 10 blooms, one variety; Hitchings & Co., for 18 American Beauty roses; A. T. Boddington, for table of orchids; W. E. Marshall & Co., for 10 varieties potatoes; Frank Howard, for vegetables; Peter Henderson & Co., for vegetables; H. F. Michell Co., for the most meritorious exhibit; R. & J. Farquhar & Co., for collection of salads; Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., silver and bronze medal for exhibitor winning the greatest number of prizes; H. A. Dreer, silver cup for exhibitor winning the greatest number of first prizes; Jos. Breck & Son, silver cup for collection of vegetables; Ann Arbor Chemical Co., for outdoor fruit.

PITTSBURGH FLORISTS' AND GARDENERS' CLUB.

Fine weather and the interesting subject, "Dahlias," brought out a good attendance at the monthly meeting of this club, held in the Fort Pitt Hotel, Pittsburgh, the evening of October 7. There was a large and fine display of dahlias, and almost the entire evening was spent in examining, and commenting on the blooms.

Carl Becherer, gardener for the Dixmont Hospital, Dixmont, Pa., was awarded a cultural certificate for seedling dahlias. Mr. Becherer said the seed had been procured partly from a local seedsman, and partly imported direct from Germany. The beauty of these unnamed singles and half doubles was very marked and none of the exhibits attracted more attention. Arthur Chandler, gardener for Mrs. J. D. Lyon, Sewickley Heights, Pa., showed a small collection of very fine, large well-grown blooms. One of his varieties, Robert Le Diable, had the largest blooms of any dahlia exhibited, and for this variety he was awarded a certificate of merit and honorable mention for his other varieties. R. Vincent, Jr. & Sons, White Marsh, Md., showed an unusually well-grown exhibit. The judging committee awarded a certificate of merit. H. C. Knauff of East street, Pittsburgh, North Side, received honorable mention for roses, outdoor-grown, and dahlias. G. Wessenauer, of Sewickley, Pa., showed a good collection of tuberous rooted begonias and Randolph & McClements, Pittsburgh, showed a collection of commercial ferns.

Jno. W. Jones, foreman Phipps Conservatories, Schenley Park, staged blooms of the century plant, and a very large chrysanthemum, Artistic Queen, an early variety. Henry Dreer showed a large collection, mostly of cactus dahlias, of good commercial value. Certificate of merit was awarded. Max Schreiber, McDonald, Pa., received honorable mention for dahlias. Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., received a certificate of merit for a collection of early-blooming chrysanthemums. Through some mistake they had been forwarded nearly ten days before the meeting, but the blooms showed no signs of age, proving that they are good keepers.

W. A. Clarke gave an interesting account of a trip made through the Yellowstone Park and Colorado.

H. P. JOSLIN, Secy.

ST. LOUIS FLORIST CLUB.

This club held a largely attended and interesting meeting on Thursday, October 9th, at 2 o'clock. The meeting was featured by a lecture on Decorative Ferns by W. S. Wells. He showed cut fern fronds of all varieties and gave blackboard illustrations in discribing them and their care.

A. Jaenicke spoke on Publicity and a spring flower show which after his interesting talk was fully discussed. A final vote on the spring flower show will be taken at the November meeting. Joseph Hauser of Webster exhibited a grand bunch of his new single red dahlia which was greatly admired and a committee was appointed to look up the merits of this dahlia as it grows in the field. The question on profits on cut carnations brought out a lengthy discussion. This topic will be continued at the next meeting.

MASSACHUSETTS HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The big Chrysanthemum Show which annually attracts a good attendance of trade visitors to Boston will be held in Horticultural Hall, on Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 30 to Nov. 2 inclusive. The prizes are ample to bring out a fine showing of chrysanthemums but the tendency of late years is to introduce exhibits of orchids, decorative foliage plants, etc., as well as chrysanthemums and this occasion will undoubtedly see a representative horticultural exhibition for this season of the year.

FLORISTS' HAIL ASSOCIATION.

The change to a rate of 15 cts. per hundred sq. ft. on single-thick glass by the Florists' Hail Association will take effect on Nov. 1st, 1913.

The rate on double-thick glass remains the same for the ensuing year.

Department of Plant Registration.

R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., of White Marsh, Md., submit for registration the cannas described below. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed names, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objections to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Jessica—A beautiful shade of rose carmine, flowers large, trusses enormous, freely produced throughout the entire season; dark, bronzy green foliage; height about 3 1-2 feet. Seedling of Wm. Saunders.

Benivolia—A brilliant shade of Lincoln red, flowers beautifully formed, and borne in great profusion, dark, rich green foliage showing a tinge of bronze; dwarf grower. Seedling of Wm. Saunders.

Horatio—Large waxy flowers of beautifully formed petals. Brilliant crimson scarlet, edged with golden yellow throat, spotted red; foliage dwarf, robust, of good texture, deep green. Seedling of Wm. Saunders.

Lafew—Medium to large flowers in large trusses, which are profusely produced. Foliage very dark medium green, overlaid with a bronze sheen; dwarf, sturdy grower, orange scarlet. Seedling of Wm. Saunders.

Gonzabo—Brilliant carmine, large flowers of waxy petals, enormous trusses, luxuriant, dark, bronzy green foliage; grows about 3 1-2 feet high. Seedling of Wm. Saunders.

Mercutio—Intense vermillion scarlet shading to pink at the base of petals, golden yellow at edge. The foliage is clear green; about three feet high; an early and continual bloomer. Seedling of Wm. Saunders.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec.

NEW JERSEY FLORICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The October meeting of the above society was the last meeting to be held in the Lindsley building, as the society has rented a new hall at the corner of Main and Park streets, Orange. It is known as the Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall and is a much larger and better building for show purposes. The new building will be opened with a chrysanthemum and vegetable show on Nov. 3rd. Schedules may be had from the Secretary, G. W. Strange, 216 Main street, Orange, N. J.

Awards.

Competitive—W. Barr, Cattleya labiata, 87 points; Mrs. Charles Hathaway, carnations 68, violets 65, cut flowers 65; S. & M. Colgate, roses 85, carnations 75, roses 80 (Lord & Burnham prize); A. C. Van Gaasbeck, roses 82.

Non-competitive—Mrs. H. Graves, seedling dahlias, certificate of merit; A. C. Van Gaasbeck, display of dahlias, special mention. Vote of thanks to the following: Joseph A. Manda, for Cattleya aurea and Laelio-Cattleya; Mrs. Chas. Hathaway, chrysanthemum Mrs. Geo. Burke; A. C. Van Gaasbeck, peony-flowered dahlias; Essex County Country Club, dahlias Dreer's White and Cuban Giant, display of dahlias and gladioli.

A NEW ROSE.

A new rose registered by George Burton of Wyndmoor, Phila., Pa., is filed with the American Rose Society. It is a very distinct sport from My Maryland, first discovered in 1910 and now filed for the first time.

THE WESTCHESTER AND FAIRFIELD HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the October meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society, at Greenwich, Conn., the fall show committee reported everything arranged. It will be held in the Armory, Stamford, Conn., Nov. 7th-8th. A very attractive schedule has been got together with classes for all. The prizes for dahlias, offered by Thos. Head of Bergenfield, N. J., brought out some extensive exhibits of wonderful colors and size, notably that staged by P. W. Popp, whose collection was a show in itself. Following are the prize winners:

P. W. Popp, 1st for Collerettes, with 14 varieties; for Decoratives with 40 var.; for Cactus with 62 var. A Whitelaw, 2nd for Cactus. Alex. Marshall, 2nd for Decoratives. Dehn & Bertolf, honorable mention for collection of shrubs, trees and ornamental grasses. P. W. Popp, honorable mention for chrysanthemum White Gloria; Thos. W. Head, Bergenfield, N. J., honorable mention for display of dahlias, for 1914 introduction. Dehn & Bertolf, honorable mention for everbearing raspberry St. Regis. Thos. Regan, vote of thanks for carnation, California Giant. J. B. Andrew, vote of thanks for Arctotis grandis. J. B. Roy, honorable mention for Nephrolepis exaltata Whitmanii. C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., honorable mention for collection of hardy chrysanthemums. J. Guermonspreg, highly commended for collection of cactus dahlias. A. Breschkki, vote of thanks for plants of French hydrangeas.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

We are informed that the negotiations towards an amalgamation of interests by the Chicago Florists' Club and the Cook County Florists' Club have been dropped for the present.

The 82nd annual exhibition of the American Institute of New York will be held in the Engineering Building, 25 to 33 West Thirty-ninth street, New York, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, November 5th, 6th and 7th.

The florists of St. Paul have organized a local club to be known as the St. Paul Florists' Club. The work of organization was completed at a meeting held at the office of Eckhardt & Co., wholesale florists, on the evening of October 15, when a constitution and by-laws was drawn up and signed by 43 members. Officers elected were: Frank Gustafson, president; O. D. Eckhardt, vice-president; Chas. R. Fuhlbruegger, secretary; M. C. Hanson, treasurer. Monthly meetings will be held.

Owing to an apparent lack of public interest members of the New London Horticultural Society decided at a meeting last Monday evening to abandon the annual fruit and flower show. The society was enthusiastic enough over the project but it was deemed manifestly impossible to make the affair a success without the co-operation of outsiders. Several days ago announcement was made of Monday night's meeting. The fact that no interest was visible resulted in the giving up of the event.

The session of the Southampton Horticultural Society, Thursday evening, October 16th was given over to a stereopticon lecture on Horticulture and Floriculture, by John T. Withers, landscape architect. Our secretary said in his introductory address, "if we do not grow and go forward we miss the purpose for which we are placed here. Our society is trying to lead forward and upward in its sphere; that is the purpose of the speaker of the evening." Mr. Withers began his address with views of some of the familiar shrubs. He showed views of the different stages of the methods of filling cavities in tree trunks and interesting pictures of the large trees of California, followed by scenes in many foreign lands gathered while on a trip around the world in 1910. Mr. Withers is thoroughly versed in his subjects, and an instructive and interesting speaker. Any society that is fortunate enough to procure him to lecture will certainly be elevated and carried forward in horticultural lines.

A HORTICULTURAL PROJECT IN BOSTON.

The outlook for a permanent horticultural building in the Back Bay Fens of Boston looks bright. Certain street improvements and the development of the Fens in the vicinity of the Museum of Fine Arts are urged by the Park and Recreation Commissioners and have the cordial support of Mayor Fitzgerald, who is at all times an advocate of anything tending to horticultural advancement or the expanding of the park facilities for the benefit of the people. Should the contemplated improvements be favored and prompt action taken, as we hope, the city of Boston will have something unique to show to the S. A. F. Convention visitors next August.

Wholesale Seedsmen's League.

The executive committee of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League met at the Hardware Club in New York city on Thursday, October 16. Among those in attendance were W. Atlee Burpee, Philadelphia. Burnet Landreth, secretary of the league, Bristol, Pa., S. F. Willard of Comstock, Ferre & Co., Weathersfield, Conn., T. W. Wood, Richmond, Va., Lemuel Bowen, of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, and Mr. Hunt, of Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y. W. C. Langbridge, of Cambridge, N. Y., and Burnet Landreth, Jr., were other seed trade visitors in New York at the time of the meeting.

Resolutions in reference to the death of William Henry Maule were adopted, as follows:

It is with sorrow that we record the sudden death on September 3, 1913, of Wm. Henry Maule. Doing exclusively a business with planters, Mr. Maule's firm was not a member of the Wholesale Seedmen's League. Mr. Maule was, however, one of the original members of the American Seedsmen's Protective Association, out of which this League was formed. He was always active in co-operation with the League's efforts for the betterment of the seed trade. It is fitting, therefore, that we should adopt the following resolution:

RESOLVED, That by the sudden death of Wm. Henry Maule, the seed trade has lost one of its most progressive, useful and distinguished members. The Wholesale Seedsmen's League have lost the sound counsel and hearty co-operation of one with whom it was ever a pleasure to consult.

Wm. Henry Maule was a big-hearted, whole-souled man, and as a faithful, loyal friend he will be greatly missed by a wide circle.

It is our earnest hope and belief that the splendid seed business which he built up may long continue under his name in the fine new building he had just completed and remain an enduring memorial to his ability and integrity of character.

RESOLVED, That a copy of these minutes be sent to his family with expression of our deepest sympathy.

New Zealand Peas.

HORTICULTURE:

Gentlemen: We would like to make a correction regarding the "Crop Notes" in your issue Oct. 18th, which are incorrect and misleading so far as New Zealand peas are concerned. Your correspondent states that peas in New Zealand are harvested about the first of the year, which is not correct. They are harvested during April and March, which correspond in New Zealand—being situated in the Southern Hemisphere—with our months October and November, and are cleaned and prepared for shipment in June.

As shipments from New Zealand to New York take about two months the new crop reaches the United States about August. The surpluses offered now are of crop 1913. They are harvested about six months before the American or European crops, but cannot be called "last year's" and their vitality is at least as good as that of American or European-grown stock.

Truly yours,
F. COOPER, Ltd.
Wellington, N. Z.
Loechner & Co., New York, Agents.

Crop Reports From Denmark.

Hjalmar Hartmann & Co., Copenhagen, report that all the crops of the Danish specialties, as cabbage, cauliflower, sprouts, carrots, garden beets and garden turnips, as well as parsley, radish, spinach, turnips and mangels, and carrots for cattle feeding, are splendid.

The plants had favorable weather during the entire season, particularly during the month of September, which was the finest one in many years. The seeds had ample time for their development, are well ripened and look healthy and plump.

Notes.

Roland Bolgiano has retired from partnership in the firm of J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md., and the business will be continued without interruption by Charles J. Bolgiano for his individual account under the old firm name.

Honeoye Falls, N. Y.—The E. F. Dibble Seed Company has just completed a large addition to its seed warehouse, which will double the available floor space. The building is of concrete blocks, 40 x 50 feet, and one story. This will give a shipping floor 130 feet long.

Covington, Ky.—A. R. Miller, of the Covington Seed Co., for the past 17 years conducting the seed business in this city, announces a disposition sale to Goode & Dunkie, who will continue the business as in the past. Mr. Miller will give his entire time in the future to the seed and floral business as the W. R. Miller Sons.

Co-Partnership Notice

RETIREMENT OF PARTNER

Notice is hereby given that Roland Bolgiano has this day retired and ceased to be a partner in the co-partnership of J. Bolgiano & Son.

(Signed) ROLAND BOLGIANO,
CHARLES J. BOLGIANO.

NEWS NOTES.

Petaluma, Cal.—W. J. Hickey has purchased the seed and flower business of M. Vonsen.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa—C. H. Chandler has purchased 234 acres, near Muscatine, and will establish a nursery.

Providence, R. I.—The Miltonia Conservatory is the name of a new company formed for the purpose of importing and growing orchids.

Findlay, Ohio—George Palmer is now sole owner of the establishment of J. J. Waaland & Company. Mr. Palmer had been associated with the firm for some time.

Kansas City, Mo.—John Stevens, former manager of the Sawvel Floral Company, is now one of the firm of Stevens & Hepting, 58th street and Bennington avenue.

Plant and bulb auction sales in the New York auction rooms are exceedingly slow this fall. As soon as colder weather is on tap, and garden flowers frozen up, greater activity is looked for and it is not believed that there will be any surplus in the bulb line.

THE VINCENT DAHLIA SHOW.

This interesting annual event, which took place week before last at the nurseries of R. Vincent, Jr. & Sons Co., Cowenton, Md., was briefly mentioned in our last issue. Visitors came from far and near and were treated to a most imposing spectacle. Forty-five acres of dahlias were spread out as a carpet and this magnificent scene was supplemented by 55 acres of cannas in dazzling array. All the varieties were marked with their names on prominent labels and a splendid opportunity was thus afforded, which many made the most of, to select such kinds as appealed to their fancy for planting next season. One patch in particular seemed to attract all visitors—where certain of the giant-flowering sorts had been given special care in tying them up to stakes, disbudding to single stems and mulching.

After the visitors had inspected the outside exhibition and entered the immense packing shed, which had been temporarily turned into an exhibition hall, they saw one of the largest exhibitions of cut dahlias ever put up by an individual firm, 20,000 being used to carry out one scheme of decorations alone,—the south wall, 100 feet in length by 66 inches in height completely covered with short-stem flowers in a bed of moss slanting from the front edge of the table to the ceiling This was first covered with pompons or very small dahlias in blocks four feet wide and reaching to the top, the varieties so arranged that the colors blended. Then in a circle in the centers of these blocks were featured a large flowering variety in contrasting size and color to the ground work. Sixteen of such blocks were worked out and at either end of this bank was an immense cornucopia of a light color arranged on a dark background. Golden West and Delice in one, and Master Carl and Jack Rose in the other. In the center of the bank was worked out a design in small yellow and white dahlias. Along the north wall was a similar bank, 80 feet long, in the center of which was a six-foot block of Wm. Agnew, a bright scarlet, as a relief for a large wreath filled with white dahlias loosely arranged and encircling a lyre of small pink dahlias. The remaining part of this bank was filled with solid blocks about two feet square of 88 individual varieties in all classes, Cactus, Decorative, Show, Pompon, Collerette, Century and Peony-Flowered.

In the center of the hall covering what is usually wide tables with a shelf above, but what was now completely concealed, were blocks four feet wide and reaching to the ceiling. Here long-stemmed dahlias were set up in buckets of water and loosely arranged with oak leaves for a back ground, the buckets being also completely covered with the foliage, thus making a very attractive and striking effect. To the left of the main entrance was staged, on the steps leading to the upper floor, a bank of about 1,000 of the Mrs. Chas. Seybold dahlia, a variety of the firm's own introduction of a few years ago.

In the dining room tables were set to accommodate 100 guests, and often they were crowded. A special feature and one worthy of consideration was the neighborhood farm produce exhibit, in which the farmers of this vicinity joined, making up an exhibit worthy of any community.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON The salient points about this market at present writing are the increasing quantities of chrysanthemums and the scarcity of violets. The former is easily understood but the latter is somewhat of a mystery as the weather has not been unfavorable for their blooming as we understand their requirements to be. The chrysanthemums, although very abundant, are far from being up to exhibition stature yet and the best offered are but medium commercial quality as compared with what are on sale in New York, for instance, this week. But they are really more salable for general use than are the top-notchers. Lilies are scarce and bring full value. Lily of the valley good and selling satisfactorily. Carnations getting plentiful, quality improving and sales quite brisk. In roses there is a little overstock on white sorts. The improved Killarneys, also the novelties such as Mrs. Russell and Hadley and the red Cardinal hold the leadership, Cardinal seeming to oust Richmond from its position as the most desirable red. American Beauty is holding its own nicely. Cattleyas are in good supply and excellent quality. Trade, as a general thing is fairly good in this market and little fault-finding is heard on any side.

BUFFALO The receipts have been heavy throughout the whole week. On Saturday the long looked for clean-up day, a heavy rain set in and continued for the first of this week. Dahlias and cosmos were still coming in heavy and there were a lot of chrysanthemums of all grades and colors of the early varieties of which sales were not of the best. Some choice Halliday and a few large varieties touched the 25c. mark. There is an oversupply of roses and also violets, considerable lily of the valley and orchids and everything along the line is in large supply. Lilies have again shortened, though there is no special demand.

CHICAGO The market for the last week has been fairly active. Roses have continued in large supply. In the early part of last week stock was accumulating a little faster than was comfortable for the wholesale market, but with colder weather prevailing towards the close of the week the surplus was disposed of at fair prices. Roses of all kinds are improving in quality and are now nearly up to winter standard. Both pink and white Killarney are abundant, the former being of excellent color. Richmond is not quite as plentiful as it has been but there are enough of all grades to meet requirements. Sunburst and Ward are coming in quite freely and prove good sellers. The quality is excellent for the newer sorts. A limited quantity can be had of such varieties as Shawyer, Mrs. Taft, Milady and Russell, the latter appearing to be well off crop at present, however. Beauties are less abundant than they were a week ago. Most of the stock on the market consists of the extreme long-stemmed grade. The shorter length are scarce. Carnations continue extremely scarce and the market is unable to supply the demand. Quality and length of stem are rapidly improving. Chrysanthemums are much more plentiful but the better grades sell readily at good prices. On the other hand, there is a large offering of smaller and inferior stock which can be had at very low figures. Lilies are fairly abundant and so is lily of the valley; both items are in good demand. A few fairly good callars are noted. Violets (Eastern) are arriving in increasing numbers but the quality leaves much to be desired.

CINCINNATI This week the weather man opened with miserable, rainy weather and followed with cold weather that up to the time of this writing was down almost to the freezing point at night. This combination of circumstances probably puts an end to the dahlias and cosmos for the year and will give the heavy shipments of chrysanthemums that are coming in, as well as large quantities of other stock, a chance to sell at a fair price. The heavy inrush of chrysanthemums started towards the close of last week and prices on this flower dropped proportionately at once. The rose supply is still very large and more than able to take care of all requirements. The same is true of long American Beauties. Short and medium Beauties are not very plentiful and have been cleaning up nicely. The carnations are getting better right along and the cut is adequate for present requirements. Both lily of the valley and orchids are proving good property. Giganteum lilies are on the short side of the market but because of the large supply of other flowers, especially chrysanthemums, they enjoy no particular demand. New boxwood has been added to the green goods supply.

NEW YORK At least once in every fall season there comes a period of surfeit in this market, when all circumstances of weather and production seem to conspire with fiendish unanimity to deluge and dumfound—when growers and wholesalers simply throw up their hands in dispair. This week is that time for 1913. As usual it came with precipitate suddenness and as usual the chrysanthemum plays a leading part in the wanton performance. It is not often, however, that the dahlias and other outside products can strike such an overwhelming alliance with the chrysanthemums and the first big flush of other greenhouse material as they have this year. Just how long it will last no one can foretell. News of wintry weather in the west and headed eastward furnishes a basis of hope for the more optimistic but we can't see how any possible weather vagaries can materially affect the situation just now. There is not much going on in the retail line either but whatever of business the retailer does gather in is mighty profitable, for he can get the material for a song and in the prevailing abundance of everything he need not assume any risk in carrying stock. Quality appears good on all lines, much more so than the recent sunless and damp weather would seem to warrant; but much of what is now coming on can hardly fail to be soft of texture and short-lived.

PHILADELPHIA Conditions last week were about the same as the week previous; probably there was not quite as much outdoor stock as the preceding week but there was entirely too much to make good flower conditions. Dahlias were probably not quite as plentiful and the demand less. Not only the store people but the public in general seem to be getting rather tired of dahlias, especially as chrysanthemums are getting more plentiful. Chrysanthemums have been in a tremendous oversupply of the poorer qualities, particularly pinks. Good specimen flowers have been rather scarce, not enough for the demand. There is a market for a good white that would come in about the same time as Chrysolora. Pompons are starting to come in and are selling right well although not any large variety so far. Beauties, still plentiful, demand fair. Mrs. Russell rose is coming in rather stronger and the demand is very good. This is a novelty rose that is a splendid success and from present indications it will be a good commercial rose for the future. In the Killarneys the White Killarney sells probably about as well as any. Other roses are selling fairly well and the supply is more than equal to the demand. Carnations are a little more plentiful than they were but are still on the scarce side and prices hold fairly stiff. Lilies are considerably in excess of the demand. Orchids—mainly cattleyas coming in—are selling fairly well, particularly considering the quantity received but at moderate prices. Gardenia supply light and demand fairly good. Lily of the valley plentiful, some days moving well, other days not as good. Taken as a whole the tone of the market is better and an improvement over the preceding week and indications are that it will continue to get better.

ST. LOUIS All that can be said of the local cut flower market for the last week is that every thing was plentiful—in fact a glut. The commission man says that the retailers bought quite heavily some days, but hardly enough to make an impression.

The mild weather has a great deal to do with this. The great quantities of fancy dahlias and increasing shipments of chrysanthemums detracted from the roses and carnations causing the commission man a great deal of worry, and compelling greatly reduced prices which caused a lot of bargain sales among the florists down-town.

FUNGINE

An Infallible remedy for mildew on roses, chrysanthemum and carnation rust, bench rot and various other blights which affect flowers, fruits and vegetables.

It is applied by spraying the foliage. Fungine being readily soluble in water, contains no sediment and unlike Bordeaux and lime and sulphur, will not stain but cleanses the foliage.

Fungine is an excellent fungicide for greenhouse plants.

THE GARDENER AND HIS FIELD.

(Extracts from a paper read by M. C. Ebel, before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston.)

A Misnomer.

"The title, 'Private Gardener,' to my mind is a misnomer; and the sooner the professional gardener rids himself of it the sooner I believe he will come into the rank to which he is rightfully entitled. The dictionary defines 'private' as meaning 'peculiar to, belonging to, or concerning an individual only,' and 'professional' as meaning, 'pertaining to, or appropriate to a profession or calling.' So does it not appeal to you that the title, 'Professional Gardener,' is the more dignified of the two and one which distinguishes him as one of a profession?

Recognition Needed.

"A great problem confronting the profession just now is how to properly bring to the knowledge of people who employ gardeners, the ability of the practical gardener. By this I mean, the one who is thorough in his profession, and what such a gardener can accomplish if given a fair opportunity to exercise his ability. Possibly I should modify this statement and say—again bring to their attention—for I disclose nothing new to those familiar with the experience of many estate owners who have become disgusted with the profession as a whole over rascalities practiced in the management of their establishments—or mismanagement—by men not truly representative of the profession and through which many excellent opportunities have been lost to conscientious gardeners, and honest men made to suffer.

Two Essentials.

"There are two vital essentials lacking between the average estate owner and his gardener,—and one is the failure of the owner to encourage his gardener in the good work he may be doing. Many of them are inwardly pleased, but will never openly manifest it in the presence of the gardener and we all know that a little merited praise is appreciated by all men. The other is the hesitancy on the part of most gardeners to take the initiative to do things. You may have a close employer, not disposed to spend money, but if you will accomplish something for nothing to arouse his interest, the chances are that if he has means to do so he will eventually open up to permit you to accomplish more for him. And some may have a liberal employer who would spend more freely if you took the initiative to instruct him how he can spend to advantage.

The Other Side.

"You must not overlook the fact, however, that this country has for several years past been encumbered with poor milionaires, men whose resources are tied up in non-productive securities. To some of you your employer may appear to have had a change of heart and to have become possessed of a hoarding spirit, but I think you will find them to be the same liberal spenders when their income flows more freely again. Remember, also, that a gentleman's estate is a luxury which is apt to seem awfully luxurious to him when he finds it difficult for lack of resources to properly maintain it, and at such times you must not expect him to spend money when he can get along without doing so. Under such circumstances just shift from nature studying to studying a little human nature and then do the best you can to please under conditions as they exist. In most instances you will find it will be appreciated when times do not seem so hard.

Mistakes.

"I am aware that all owners of private establishments, who require the services of professional gardeners, are not alike and that many are unreasonable in their demands and expect much more than they are entitled to for the compensation the gardener receives, and where, no matter how much a man may strive, appreciation is never manifested. Where a gardener comes in contact with such a character, let him do the best he can while he serves him, await his opportunity where his services may be more appreciated and when it comes, grasp it.

"Study the disposition of those you serve and cater to their fads and fancies. If called on to transform a beautiful front lawn into a cabbage patch, or to turn it into a pasture for cattle grazing, proceed with as much good grace as possible, realizing that while

FALL SPRAYING

Fruit trees, ornamental trees, evergreens, and all hardy stock susceptible to scale and other insects should be thoroughly sprayed before freezing weather sets in.

SCALINE will cleanse your trees and shrubs of San Jose, Oyster Shell and other hard scale, red spider, larvae of the aphis, grub of the locust borer, and other insect pests which secrete themselves in the crevices of the bark during the dormant season.

SCALINE is composed of a high grade of petroleum and the properties of the well known fungicide, FUNGINE; mixes readily without agitation; is used at a strength of one part to twenty parts water; containing no sediment can be applied through the finest spray nozzle, and requires no drenching of the plants, but simply misting them, to get effective results.

Gallon, $1.50; 10 gallons, $10; 50 gallons $37.50.

Personal Appearance.

"I may become a little personal by venturing on personal appearance as it effects the gardener, but it is solely in his interest. I come in contact with many gardeners while they are engaged in their work and what I am about to refer to I admit is the exception rather than the rule, but I allude to it as an essential to professional progressiveness. In my travels I, at times, find gardeners quite efficient in their profession, but who lack in their own general appearance, and are quite thoughtless as to some of their habits while occupied in their vocation. Now appearances count for much in this world, and personal appearance, not gaudiness but neatness, makes a favorable impression wherever practiced. The gardener with a 'good front' is likely to come into closer personal contact with his people than the gardener who lacks it. Only a few days ago I was told of a family returning recently from abroad where it had been visiting some of the extensive private estates found on the other side and probably enthused with some of the old country ideas, which informed its gardener that it would prefer to have him engage additional labor to do the plodding so that he could clothe himself more fittingly and be presentable to the guests in future and at the expense of the family. But the old man, long with the family, begged that he be permitted to continue to plod, that he could not accustom himself to fine clothes. His request was granted, but you can count on it, not getting what they want it is only a question of time before these people will become dissatisfied.

The Young Gardener and His Future.

"I cannot refrain from saying a word to the young and ambitious men in the profession. So much has been heralded in the near past respecting the essentials requisite to make one a real gardener that I shall not dwell on it long. But of the practical gardener of the future much will be demanded. He must possess executive power, knowledge of every phase of floriculture, horticulture and agriculture, must have ability to handle men, and in general be a good business manager. This means that he must be possessed of theoretical knowledge as well as practical experience, and he must count on having to contest with the young men favored with college opportunities. I, however, am a firm believer that our real gardeners of the future, as of the past, will be the self-made, those with ambition to seize every chance to learn by practical experience during the day, gaining their theoretical knowledge by study of books at night and during the spare hours, constantly on the alert to advance, and thus by combining practice and theory will become thoroughly efficient in their profession. There are, however, on the other hand, many young men who have taken up gardening imbued with the idea that a year of apprenticeship, another year as an assistant—and then a full-fledged gardener. They will have gained just a sufficient smattering of what gardening constitutes to spoil what they may undertake if they obtain a head gardener's position, and some of them occasionally manage to with the result that they do not make good."

OBITUARY.

Edward L. Pierce.

Edward Leroy Pierce, president and general manager of A. H. Hews & Co., Inc., pottery manufacturers, of Cambridge, Mass., died on Friday morning October 17, aged 35 years, after a long period of failing health. Mr. Pierce was born in Barre, Mass., Jan. 10, 1878. For the past thirteen years he has been employed in the Hews establishment having started as a bookkeeper with the late A. H. Hews. After the death of Mr. Hews when the business was incorporated, 1904, he became vice-president of the company and in 1910 he succeeded to the presidency. During his association with the establishment he made a most excellent record as a progressive business man and executive officer. He was greatly beloved by the employees

The Relation of Light to Greenhouse Culture

Being extracts from a series of experiments made by the Mass. Agricultural Experiment Station.

IN July, The Mass. Agricultural Experiment Station published a Bulletin making for the first time public — the results of a series of exhaustive experiments conducted by them for the past few years.
Many of the results are so intensely vital to greenhouse owners and prospective builders, that we have made selections here and there from the text and are giving them below.

1. Lack of light is responsible for many greenhouse diseases.

2. The old type of greenhouse was crude in construction, especially as regards light. The modern tendency is to build larger houses; to use stronger material, casting less shade; and to use larger and better quality glass.

3. Large houses can be constructed relatively more cheaply and managed more easily because there is a less rapid change of atmospheric conditions, etc. This helps to eliminate many greenhouse troubles.

4. Morning light is more intense than afternoon light, our experiments showing a difference of 10 per cent, and ranging as high as 30 per cent for some houses.

5. The location of a house as regards points of the compass has a bearing on the practice of syringing plants, the yield of the crop, and to a certain extent on fungus infection.

6. To obtain the best results in a house running East and West, the house should be from 15 to 30 degrees North of East. This enables the plant to take advantage of the more intense morning light and the crop can be syringed with less danger from infection.

7. There appear to be no important differences in the light in a greenhouse at different distances from the glass, practically the same light being obtained at 5 feet as at 30 feet.

The Experiment Station Bulletin contains over forty pages devoted to the subject. You should read it from cover to cover.
The Experiment Station has just written us that they will be very glad to mail copies of the Bulletin to all who may write for them.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Dutch Bulbs for Outside

It is safe to say that no florist who does a retail trade can dispense with what are commonly termed Dutch bulbs, outdoor planted. It pays to grow an assortment of hardy bulbs for cutting, entirely apart from such as may be used for bedding. These directly follow the indoor crop. All Dutch bulbs like a well worked, friable soil, in which old, well decayed manure has been mixed. The hyacinth should be set six inches deep and the bulbs the same distance apart. Tulips should be covered four to six inches according to size. As to the planting time, from the end of October to the middle of November is a good period. Among the May flowering or Cottage tulips, good yellows are: Gesneriana Lutea, Golden Crown, T. Retroflexa, Bouton d'Or and Leghorn Bonnet. Among whites La Candeur is good. In scarlets, Gesneriana Spathulata and Inglescombe Scarlet. In pink, Inglescombe Pink. For hyacinths, singles are far preferable to doubles for bedding. Baroness van Tuyll and Grandeur a Merveille, white; Gigantea and Gertrude, pink; Robert Steiger, crimson; Queen of the Blues, sky blue; King of the Blues, dark blue, and Golden Yellow will be found excellent inexpensive varieties.

Ericas

Unfavorable climatic conditions, with unusually slow growth and the need of great care in treatment are some of the reasons why heaths are not cultivated here as extensively as they deserve to be. We are now at a time of year when many of the heaths are slowly coming to bloom, or are nearing final development. It is just at this stage, and in giving perfect finish, when growers experience the greatest difficulty and often fail at the very last moment, when up to that point all had gone smoothly and promised well. When they show buds they can stand more fire heat, even to the extent of being slowly forced into bloom, but 45 degrees should be considered the normal. There must be no spraying of foliage, wetting of walks or stagings from now on. A thorough drying out of the soil at any time is followed by as fatal results as would over-watering. So pay attention to watering at the roots for they like an even amount of moisture in the soil. Watch out for mildew and give flowers of sulphur, blown through the foliage when first noticed.

Primulas

Whatever little benefit primulas may get by leaving them in outdoor frames after this week is hardly worth the extra labor involved from now on. An almost daily opening, closing and perhaps covering of the frames will soon become necessary, and the attendant must be on a constant outlook for the danger signals of approaching winter. There is always a considerable sale for these pretty little plants during the early winter months. Where they are found pot-bound, apply a light dose of liquid cow manure from time to time. The plants now want all the sun there is and a light airy bench. A carnation house is just the thing. It depends from now on, entirely, how much light, air and sun they get, as to their blooming. The plants for early blooming should be well set with buds now, and if a good number of them have stems one-half inch long, so much the better. A rather high bench, or a shelf near the glass, with plenty of room between the plants will now be of advantage.

Orchids

Cypripedium insigne will soon be coming into flower. They should be placed where they can have a night temperature of about 58 degrees and regular ventilation is essential at all times. From now on all shading can be entirely dispensed with. With proper care the flowers will keep in good condition for a month and over. All cattleyas that have passed out of flower such as Harrissoniæ, Eldorado, Leopolodii, Loddigesii, Granulosa, Gaskelliana, etc., and have had a good rest can now be given an overhauling and repotting. When you see the new roots just peeping is the best time to do this work. A good many growers use just the clear osmunda fiber for their cattleyas and they are producing fine flowers with the same so it will be well to give this a trial. Use plenty of clean crocks for drainage.

Winter-Flowering Geraniums

Have you ever tried growing a batch of nice doubles and singles in 5-inch or 6-inch pots for winter blooming? Keep the flower trusses picked off until the chrysanthemum season is partially over. For Thanksgiving or Christmas sales they are very attractive, for about everybody feels that he or she can manage a geranium. Narrow, light shelves, on the sides of a carnation house, where the atmosphere is fairly dry suits them admirably. Where a crop of flowers is wanted from Thanksgiving to Christmas, no more pinching of the geranium buds should be done after the first week in this month. Feeding should be given regularly after the pots are well filled with roots. It is better not to use liquid cow manure or sheep manure too freely, as the result would be rank growing plants, soft in growth, which would flower disappointingly. Instead, use fine bone or Clay's fertilizer in the form of top-dressing. This will encourage surface roots and at the same time build up short-jointed, stocky wood, which will flower most profusely during the winter.

Wintering Fuchsias

See that all your stock plants of fuchsias are taken care of from this out. All those that were given a rest can be shortened back to good, firm wood and placed in a house that stands no lower than 55 degrees at night. By giving them a daily syringing they will soon break into new growth which in a little while will make fine stock for propagation later on. To root them well they like the propagating sand at about 70 degrees and the atmosphere at 55 degrees. When potting them up give them two parts loam, one part rotten manure and one part of leaf mold.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Antirrhinums; Liliums giganteum and multiflorum; Shrubs for Greenhouse Culture; Spiraeas (Astilbes); Tulips; Lifting Coreopsis for Forcing.

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Pruning Vines

There remains just one month before we shall be starting the early vineries into growth again. This is hard to realize, for at the time of writing there are very little signs of the leaves falling, the continued mild weather here this fall being very much against vines finishing up as early as we would like to have them, particularly the early ones. Here is one of the many things that we cannot govern or influence in any way; we have to wait for nature to do her part, after which we can have a say with the assurance of success. To those who have not studied nature and learned that she only allows us to go so far with our persuasive powers and after that her natural conditions have to be conceded, it is a great wonder that we cannot produce more than one crop of fruit in a year. They forget that the vine has to have a rest the same as other trees and human beings, too, and the longer and more complete that rest is, the better the vines will be for it. Get them to rest as early as you can and keep them so until they are needed. The first thing after the leaves have fallen is the pruning. It will not hurt to prune before all the leaves are down providing they are showing their autumn tints and a few are already down. This early pruning of the early vinery is an absolute necessity, as no doubt all will agree, for it holds up all the other work to follow in the shape of cleaning, etc., but not only the early vinery should be pruned at the very earliest date possible, but all the succeeding ones, for there is nothing to be gained by delaying the job, but on the contrary there is a greater risk from bleeding when they are started up again. Late-pruned vines are always more liable to bleed than those pruned early. It is obvious to all that bleeding in the spring or at the time a vine is started must be a detriment to it. In the bud that is to furnish the lateral is stored up the essentials to make that lateral, and as the vine starts to answer to the warmer treatment by action of the roots and later the bursting of the bud, and so on until several leaves are expanded, any waste energy is an undue taxation of the vine and certainly is not giving it a fair chance to give us all that it is capable of doing. Prevent bleeding if you want the best crops. It is much easier to prevent bleeding than it is to stop it when once started. If it has ever been your luck to try to stop a bleeding vine by all the known remedies and several of your own that never have been tried before to your knowledge and then still have to gaze on the continual drip, drip, you will know of what I write. I believe there are times that nothing will stop a vine bleeding when once it has commenced, but if the caution of preventing it is taken at the right time it will be unknown. The greatest preventive is early pruning followed by a complete covering of "Styptic," a preparation that can be bought at any seed store. There are two systems of pruning, known as the long-spur and the short-spur systems. The former I would not recommend except in the case of its being the last year that it is intended to fruit a vine. Instead of pruning hard back as is the case in short-spur pruning, the best bud on the lateral is selected to furnish the lateral in the coming year and only the growth beyond it is cut away. See what a shape and network of old and useless vine would accumulate in a few years of this treatment. By using the short-spur system for years, only a compact spur will steadily grow, taking up a minimum of room. Prune the lateral back to two good eyes. Some take the chance with one. It is all that is required, but there is many a time that that one left meets with an accident and there is not another to take its place. It is a mighty hard job to renew a spur when once lost. Leave two eyes at the time of pruning and if the two should grow away in the spring select the stronger and discard the weaker one. In the event of both being equal retain the one nearest the rod. There is nothing to beat a sharp knife for pruning grape vines.

The Heating Pipes in Cold Houses

Vines, peach and nectarine trees that are to be forced early will be benefited by the frost that we get during this month (providing no zero weather is experienced). While it takes a hard and continued frost to freeze up heating pipes, especially if the return pipe is left open, it is the easiest and also the safest way to let the water out of the pipes in these houses. When building, this provision ought to be made by having a valve on both the flow and return pipes with a plug inserted on the underneath side of each so that the water can be drained out without any trouble, and when the time comes to fill them up again all that is necessary is to screw in the plugs. By doing this the house is sure to be kept at the lowest temperature possible.

Sorbaria arborea

This new shrub, a portrait of which appears as the cover illustration for this issue, is one of the Arnold Arboretum's introductions from western China through Mr. E. H. Wilson. It is a strong growing, much branched, late-summer flowering plant, perfectly hardy in New England. It is very free blooming and prefers a moist, cool situation. Under these conditions it grows ten to twelve feet tall and produces broad panicles twelve to eighteen inches long, of pure white, Spiræa-like flowers. The arching branches are clothed with dark green, pinnate leaves and each shoot terminates in a truss of flowers. This new Sorbaria is a splendid plant to grow in association with Buddleia Davidii and its varieties. It is readily propagated by seeds, cuttings, or by the suckers which are abundantly produced from the rootstock.

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

The Propagating House and Sand

If your propagating house has not been cleaned out, lose no time in having this work done, for not only do the benches suffer but it is none too good for the cuttings that will be put there later on. There is such a thing as starving the old fungus by giving it no place to remain, and there is no better way of doing this than by allowing the benches to dry up well during the summer months. Where the house is situated so that chrysanthemums can be crowded in in the fall, this is usually done, and then the soil removed and the house cleaned. If this is the case with your place then lose no time cleaning the old soil out of the benches as soon as the chrysanthemums are out of the way, and wash them at once and then give them a good coat of whitewash to which a little bluestone (copper sulphate) has been added. This will help do away with many of the germs that are in the habit of loafing around in the cracks and crevices, ready to spring out and damage the young cuttings or the roots of the same, as soon as they are formed. If you have to go any distance for sand, now is the time to have it hauled and stored where it will be handy to get at in the winter when it is wanted. We would not advise putting it right in the benches, as it is best to do this just before the cuttings are to be put in. This insures clean sand for the start and there is a good deal in that. If you have no place under a roof, heap the sand and cover with straw, upon which can be placed leaves or any coarser material that may be had. The object of using the straw is that there is nothing cleaner, and the sand must be kept clean. Good sharp sand that is not too fine nor too coarse will be the best for the purpose. River sand will usually contain plenty of very fine mud which should be washed out, by watering it thoroughly after it is placed in the benches. If there is good drainage this water will carry away all the mud, and if the sand is so treated two or three times it will be almost as clean as the natural sand that is found here and there in strata.

The Flower Shows

Do not be satisfied after visiting the shows to say, "We have something just as good at home." Go out into the fight and let other people know it if you can. It will help your business, and help the trade as well. There is much more joy in winning when competition is close, so do not stay home because of that. Select your blooms with the greatest care, letting them remain on the plants to develop as large as possible, and then put them into the ice box for a while. Do not attempt to exhibit stuff that has been kept too long, for it will go back on you, and the chances of winning will be much smaller. Do not try to exhibit in the big classes if you have only a few plants. The growers who have many thousand to select from will take care of that, unless of course your stock is very well grown. It is surprising how many flaws you can find when you come to look for a perfect bud. One bloom will be perfect but for some leaves that have been bruised while syringing. Another will have a bud that lacks the finish that goes with a perfect rose. Look over your blooms very carefully and you can then know how good your blooms really are. Be sure to clean the foliage by rubbing it very gently with the softest of the wax papers, being very careful not to bruise it. Never lay the exhibition stock down, unless there is paper there first, and clean paper at that. In shipping, wrap the buds in fine paper, and place tissue wax and newspaper between the layers, so that the thorns of the one do not have any chance to run into the foliage of the lower layer and tear it. Always take at least two extra blooms along, so that if for any reason you should have to discard one you will have another to take its place. Observe well the rules governing the show, and see that they are not violated in any respect. In exhibiting roses in quantity make sure that you have the required number, no more, no less. Often it happens that roses that are really better do not get the credit, for they may have a coating of lime on the foliage, as they came out of the rose house. Or there may be a few pieces of string still clinging to them. Now this is no way to exhibit roses, and the grower that is as careless as this, deserves to be beaten.

Covering the Soil for Use in Winter.

Now that the autumn leaves are falling it is a good idea to rake up a lot of them and cover over the soil heaps that are to be used in the winter for potting purposes. Do not put this off, for you will have a good chance to regret it when the winter is here and the men will waste any amount of time digging up the frozen earth and bringing it into the potting sheds to thaw and dry, in order that it may be used. Of course it is very nice, and far cheaper in the long run to have a shed where soil can be stored but there are many florists who have no such luxury, if you choose to call it that. We would rather call it a necessity and would not do business without it very long. To go on, turn the soil over many times as may be necessary so that it is about ready to use. It can be done much quicker and better now than later in the winter. Then make a nice square heap of it and pile the leaves on. They can hardly be put on too quick, for the frost will at times go through two feet of the leaves. If you can, pile some old shutters or something over the leaves so that all the water that falls will not go down into them. This is a good way to keep the frost out, for the drier the leaves are the less chance will the frost have of getting down into them, and through them into the soil. Where bog hay is plentiful and cheap this can be used along with the leaves and the results will be much better.

Notes in General

With the competition keener than ever and many new and very good indeed roses, this coming season will be a busy one for the growers. Like farming, which had always been looked upon as no business at all, rose growing is certainly a business, and the place that is not run on business principles will soon be torn down or sold to someone who can run it so. Those happy-go-lucky days are gone. With the continual rise in the wages and the cost of other necessities which are required commercial rose growing is certainly no play.

Making common cause

We read in Mr. Herr's interesting [illegible] the doings of the Lancaster [illegible] Club that Lancaster County, [illegible] lucky in having very few bad spots of sto[illegible] Last year there were more but club information and visitations are going to help keep these bad spots from spreading." We believe this statement to be true and Mr. Herr's point well taken. Altruism does not appeal to all natures, however, and it is quite possible, even in these days of "all for one and one for all," to find people who would strenuously object on purely selfish grounds to participate in any policy tending to show their neighbor how he may become more proficient and improve the quality of his product. We have had, from time to time, accounts of these little neighborhood tours of the Lancaster florists and they have always inspired the wish that many other communities might do likewise, for, while it is very nice and complacent to feel that one is turning out better goods than all the rest, yet it should, also, be a matter of pride for any business man to know that he has been a co-partner in helping to bring to a high average standard the entire product of the section in which he is located.

Pernicious reformers

The florists of Northampton, Mass., and other towns contiguous to Smith College have had a rather disagreeable situation forced upon them, according to the N. Y. Evening Post, by a reform movement inaugurated by the Students' Council against the sending or wearing of flowers among the girls attending the college. It is stated that the custom of sending each other flowers on every possible occasion had become such a burden of extravagance that it became necessary to call a halt and take measures to create public opinion "against this lavish sending of flowers." If this be true, it is a pity. Of all the expenditures, outside of those for the very necessaries of life, flower buying should be among the last to be molested. It has been repeatedly asserted by those who have had opportunity to see and know, that the use of flowers in this country is insignificant as compared with what prevails in all European countries, and yet every little while some agitator who can't rest without "reforming" something has to take a wallop at the using of flowers for one purpose or the other. From what we know of the Northampton florists, we don't believe any of them are yet rolling in wealth as a result of the lavish extravagance of the girls in flower buying.

Helpful reading

We frequently receive inquiries at this office for information as to the best books available for the florist or gardener, on general topics or on special subjects. For the man who wishes to become well informed on botanical or other scientific lines there are plenty of good books, but as to really up-to-date matter that will be practically useful to one who must earn his living by growing plants and flowers, very little can be suggested. In these progressive times it does not take long for a book of that sort to get thoroughly out of date. Bailey's Encyclopedia, the best book published thus far for American conditions, is already well along on a new edition, made a necessity by the rapid advancement in floriculture within the few years since it was first published. The plain truth is that no book can keep pace with a periodical such as HORTICULTURE is, in value as an exponent of the latest facts and practice in the culture of plants and flowers and kindred topics and as a safe guide to the man who is ambitious to keep in the front rank in his profession. Yet hardly a day passes that someone does not exclaim, "Oh, I never open a trade paper. I subscribe for them all, of course, but that's as far as I go." If all such could only be reached and induced to just look carefully through the columns of this or any other issue of HORTICULTURE, he will be forcibly impressed with the variety and quality, the wide range of subjects of immediate importance which are covered—not in a superficial or merely theoretical manner, but by writers who are "making good" themselves and are able and willing to tell truthfully what they have learned by experience for the benefit of their fellow horticulturists.

The Lilac Question

People interested these days, make annual pilgrimages to the Lilac Shrines such as those of the Arnold Arboretum and the Highland Park, Rochester, collections, and the interest grows amazingly year by year as judged by the attendance and the number of inquiries concerning lilacs by those interested, who choose these when they have space for little besides, as in small gardens.

The question of hardiness is not raised. We have yet to learn of lilacs being winterkilled at the tops or buds injured by frost in winter proper. They are occasionally hurt in spring by late frosts after the shoots have developed, in common with most other flowering shrubs, even native ones that are indigenous to the location.

Lilacs thrive in all soils alike, from a sandy loam to heavy clay, provided there is nourishment provided and moisture in summer, the latter being perhaps the most important especially during times of drouth as in the past season, this being a mere detail to the cultivator.

It is reasoned that all is well with the lilacs until the buyer appears and finds that from an exceedingly abbreviated list of kinds, it is only possible to obtain plants grafted on the roots of the privet, and unfortunately, this is usually the so-called California species. This system of propagation has been approved by good authorities in certain sections, but from personal experience and observation elsewhere in this locality, the privet stock is worse than valueless. In the spring of 1912, as complete a set of lilacs as possible was made, with due regard to the colors. These grew well during summer and were set out permanently, we thought, this spring. All were moved with care, and leaved out nicely, but about half of the lot proceeded to die, and an investigation proved that the privet rootstock had died during the winter, which was not a severe one as cultivators understand it. Above the graft, the lilac proper was still alive for weeks, in fact until midsummer, but no growth was made. Recently attention was called to another lot that had grown to be valuable shrubs, had flowered for years and were much valued, but knowing the symptoms, the diagnosis was easily made. It was the same trouble, the death of the stock before roots had been formed at the union.

It is a well recognized principle that grafting is practised for the purpose of propagation—especially with difficult subjects—but there are many who do not know this, and most people think it is done to get added vigor. In some instances as with fruit trees it is to restrict vigor and produce fruitfulness, but with the instance under consideration it is just a matter of getting up stock quickly to sell. After this there is no appeal in the way of a guarantee, and the buyer is the loser.

During a recent eastern trip, it was noted that lilacs are now being rooted freely from cuttings taken late in summer and put in frames outside. Doubtless they could be so managed in a glass house, but the point is that own-root lilac plants are possible though it takes longer to get a salable plant as large as those raised by grafting, but even if the price was doubled, and the danger of winter killing, to say nothing of the tendency of the privet to sucker from the root, and a sprinkling of borers thrown in for good measure, just to cover the whole year of worries for the gardener—if these were eliminated—the price would seem to be a secondary consideration to lilac lovers.

Another suggestion is, that if grafted lilacs must be made, let the vendor state so clearly in his catalogue, with instructions for deep planting, protection at the root for the first few winters until own roots are formed and, at the end of these a disclaimer would fit in well. Our own losses are trivial, but the trouble is widespread and is blamed to the plants, when it rightfully belongs to the method of propagation.

TWO FINE HYDRANGEAS.

The accompanying illustrations show a pair of unusually fine specimens of Hydrangea Otaksa on the grounds of Wm. A. Congdon of New Bedford, at Siasconset, Nantucket, Mass. One of these plants is 9 feet in diameter and 5 feet high. The other is 8 feet in diameter and 5½ feet high.

Th great size and floriferousness of the plants is attributed to the fact that pipes lead from the laundry and they are constantly kept watered in summer by the waste water.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

LANCASTER COUNTY AND CITY FLORISTS' CLUB.

October 16th was the first official visiting day for the club and a trip to the growers in the western end of the city was the programme. At the establishment of H. A. Schroyer we found carnations and chrysanthemums better than ever before grown at this place. At The Wheatland Co. the best crop of Chrysolora were seen that it has ever been the pleasure of this set of florists to lay eyes upon, stems 12 feet long and size and quality unsurpassed. At. B. F. Barr Co.'s, carnations, the newer roses and a fine lot of chrysanthemums were in evidence and at A. M. Herr's a house of very good carnations in full crop and the healthy condition of the geraniums, both in the stock houses and the cutting houses was commented upon, as well as a very fine strain of pink snapdragons grown for cuttings. At Rudolph Nagle's a complete assortment of chrysanthemums was seen, almost every one of which was of top-notch quality. Here are also grown quite a fine lot of geraniums and some miscellaneous stock. Taken as a whole, the west end is lucky in having very few bad spots of stock this season. Last year there were more but club information and visitations are going to help keep these bad spots from spreading.

At 7.45 P. M. the club meeting was in full progress with the usual good percentage of members in attendance and a mixed programme. J. H. Lankey, of Mountville, told us what the club had done for him as did several others. J. F. Siebold, of Lancaster, told us how to grow snapdragons, among other things mentioning that they would not stand tobacco smoke. In the discussion following, this seemed to be the general experience, although the writer has grown them for a number of years in a small way in carnation houses that are smoked heavily twice a week, spring and fall, and once a week during winter without ever having had any noticeable bad effects. L. S. Landis, our secretary, gave us some pointers on the growing of greens for cutting.

The Committee on Ladies' Night have arranged for that event, Thursday, November 6th. The Committee on Co-operative Buying are getting together on one or two things as a trial and it is hoped that this will work out all right. S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia, was a visitor and made some very good suggestions along the lines of co-operative buying and the good to be had out of a club of this sort.

ROSE TEST GARDENS.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society held its meeting for October, and following out the instructions of the regular meeting of the society held at Minneapolis relative to the adoption of plans and rules for Test Rose Gardens at Washington, D. C., Ithaca, N. Y., Minneapolis and New Brunswick, N. J., took up the correspondence and plans pertaining to this work. Theodore Wirth, president-elect of the S. A. F., sent on a carefully drawn layout or plan. John Cook of Baltimore, Dr. C. A. Beal of Cornell University and M. A. Blake, horticulturist, Agricultural Station of New Jersey, submitted suggestions as to what they could do toward starting and caring for the Test Rose Garden. These matters were carefully gone over. President W. R. Pierson submitted a set of rules for the practical working of the Test Garden and these were considered section by section and submitted for suggestion or amendment.

The proposed extension of membership and affiliation with local societies was reported to be receiving commendation. The effort to obtain an accurate list of all roses originated in America is being taken up with interest—reports have come from California, Canada and widely separated sections. Premium list for the Spring Exhibition, which is to be held in New York City the last of March, 1914, will be taken up and issued without delay.

Mrs. C. E. Critchell,
President Ladies' Society of American Florists.

The National Rose Society of England in its Annual Report gives recognition to the members of the American Rose Society who were present at its exhibition. Ex-President Adolph Farenwald and E. G. Hill are finely photographed therein. More members have paid in the membership fee for 1913 than has been received in any one year before—this is what we need. "Come with us and we will do thee good."

The Annual Bulletin for 1913 will be an interesting volume.

Benjamin Hammond,
Beacon, N. Y. Secretary.

CONNECTICUT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The second October meeting of the society was well attended on the evening of October 24th. The evening was given up to the consideration of vegetables and fruits. President Huss in his opening remarks stated that it was the first time that the society had ever given an exhibition entirely of vegetables since its inauguration. It took the three large centre tables and two extra end tables, the full length of the hall, to hold the magnificent display and number of varieties and the size of the specimens could not be surpassed at any exhibition in the country. President Huss appointed C. H. Sierman, G. H. Hollister, and Warren S. Mason as judges, and they awarded prizes as follows:

John F. Huss, exhibit of vegetables, a first-class certificate.
Alfred Cebelius, cultural certificate.
Louis Chauvy, cultural certificate; also a first-class certificate for exhibit of grapes.
C. D. Wisner, South Manchester, display of apples, cultural certificate
Francis Roulier, chrysanthemums and orchids, first-class certificate.

G. H. Hollister read a paper on raising vegetables in hot beds, which covered minutely the preparation of the bed and the methods of cultivation to maturity of lettuce, radish, asparagus, etc. President Huss mentioned the fact that he had just received a paper from Geneva, announcing some new varieties of vegetables, also stating that Europeans are more fond of vegetables than are Americans.

Secretary Alfred Dixon states that the next meeting will be held on Thursday night, November 6th, one week and one day earlier than usual.

GARDENERS' CONVENTION.

All arrangements have been completed for the annual convention of the National Association of Gardeners, which, as the guest of the Horticultural Society of New York, will hold its business session and election of officers for the ensuing year, at the American Museum of National History, New York City, on Monday afternoon, November 3d, at 2 o'clock. The annual banquet at the Hotel Endicott will follow immediately after the business meeting.

Entries for meritorious exhibits or novelties for the association's award—certificates of merit—to be exhibited at the flower show of the Horticultural Society of New York which occurs at the Museum during the convention, must be filed with the secretary of the N. A. G. not later than November 1st.

Many out of town members have already signified their intention of attending both the convention and the banquet. M. C. Ebel, Secretary.

Exhibited at Chicago, Ill., Oct. 25, by Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., R. B. Burge, white, large flowered single, com. scale, 89 points; Gladys Duckham, white, large flowered single, com. scale, 82 points; Stanley Veu, lavender, large flowered single, com. scale, 86 points.

The committee will have a special session at the Chicago exhibition, November 5, 6 and 7 to pass on any seedlings submitted to them at that time.

CHAS. W. JOHNSON, Sec.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The Lancaster Florist Club will hold a ladies' night in the Breneman Building, Lancaster, Pa., November 6th.

The ladies of Cleveland, Ohio, interested in the florist trade, contemplate the organization of a women's florist club for social intercourse. It is their intention to entertain the wives of the visiting florists during the coming flower show, and the convention of the American Carnation Society in January.

The New Hampshire Horticultural Society has elected the following officers for the coming year: C. W. Barker, Exeter, president; J. T. Harvey, Pittsfield, vice-president; Stanley K. Lovell, Goffstown, secretary and treasurer. Executive committee, J. H. Gourley, Durham; E. B. Parker, Wilton, and F. A. Badger, Belmont.

The Rochester, N. Y., Florists' Association will hold their annual flower show November 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8. They wish to extend through HORTICULTURE an invitation to all florists of Western New York to meet at the flower show, Friday afternoon, November 7th, not only to see and enjoy the flowers, but to meet one another and become better acquainted. Chas. H. Vick is chairman of the general committee.

THE PHILADELPHIA SHOW.

Arrangements for the annual Fall Show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society are now complete. The chrysanthemums promise well and there will be a number of new features, among which will be an aquarium display in the main hall. Many rare specimens will be exhibited, some of them of almost fabulous value. The show opens to the public Tuesday evening, Nov. 4, at 6 P. M. All exhibits for competition must be staged by noon Tuesday. The fruits and vegetables are an exception. These will be staged Wednesday. The decorations of the hall have been placed in the hands of William Graham which insures good work. The Stroud prizes for hardy chrysanthemums will be awarded to the best exhibits by the 800 boys and girls who were presented by Mr. Stroud with a plant each last season. Louis Burk will be on hand with a fine display of orchids. The exhibition closes Friday night at 10 P. M.

BOSTON FLOWER EXCHANGE.

On Saturday evening, October 25th, occurred the 21st annual meeting and dinner of the Boston Flower Exchange at the New American House. Some hundred and fifty gentlemen were present. The chief business of the meeting centered in the election of directors for the corporation. The choice fell upon W. C. Stickel (president), Wm. Nicholson, Alex. Montgomery, George Cartwright, A. S. Parker, A. Christenson, Lester W. Mann, S. J. Goddard and Eber Holmes. With the exception of Mr. Holmes the gentlemen elected were on the old board and the large and decisive vote received by them is regarded as a victory for the conservative wing. During the counting of the ballots by the tellers speeches were made by several members and invited guests. The auditor's report showed a very prosperous financial situation. The menu was excellent. Next year it is proposed to invite the ladies to be present.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA. CUP.

PANAMA-CALIFORNIA EXPOSITION FREIGHT RATES ON EXHIBITS.

All exhibits destined to the Panama-California Exposition, to be held in San Diego from January 1st to December 31st, 1913, forwarded from points in the territories covered by the Pacific Freight Tariff Bureau, the Trans-Continental Freight Bureau, the New England Freight Association, the Trunk Line Association (including points in Canada located east of Toronto, Ontario,) and the Central Freight Association (including points in Canada, Toronto, Ontario and west thereof) on which full tariff rates are paid coming to the Exposition will be returned carriage free, except race horses and vehicles (including automobiles for racing purposes exhibited at this Exposition), goods to be returned by the routes that originally carried and offered for return transportation ninety days after the close of the Exposition.

Special rates have been granted on articles intended for exhibit, which owing to their nature it may not be the desire to return, such as agricultural products; building materials not intended for construction; horticultural products; educational exhibits, loaned, sold or donated by schools, colleges and educational institutions; floricultural products; forest products; specimens (anthropological, botanical, fossil, historical and mineral; cereals and grass; maps; statistics; drawings and photographs.

In addition to freight charges on all exhibits, a very reasonable charge has been announced to cover the cost of handling freight from the freight houses, team tracks and wharves of the railroad and steamship companies, located within the city of San Diego, to the buildings located within the Exposition grounds.

Pacific Coast Steamship Company, Pacific Navigation Company, and other coastwise steamers have issued special rates governing the movements of exhibits from points north of San Diego.

The interested Southeastern lines undoubtedly will concur with all the railroads who have announced special rates for exposition purposes, giving the Panama-California Exposition special rates from every point in the United States and Canada.

Rates and terminal charges may be had on application to any freight agent in the United States and Canada.

THE CHICAGO EXHIBITION.

Eleven special prizes are offered in the premium list of the Annual Exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America in conjunction with the Horticultural Society of Chicago and the Chicago Florists' Club, to be held at the Art Institute, Chicago, Nov. 5, 6 and 7, 1913. This exhibition will bring together the big growers of the entire country and the exhibits of gardeners from Lake Geneva, Wis., Lake Forest, Ill., and other suburban towns will give added interest to the local competition. Premium lists may be had by addressing R. J. Haight, 536 So. Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

The Boston Morning Herald for Sunday, October 26th, contained pictures of the interior of Thomas Roland's two mammoth greenhouses at Revere, Mass.

PROPAGATING ROSES GROWN OUTSIDE.

MR. RUZICKA.

Dear Sir: I would like to ask you the best plan to propagate Wm. R. Smith, the Cochets and K. A. Victoria which have been grown out in the open all summer for cut flowers. We want to take them up and heel them in but want to use the wood for propagating. They have had two or three frosts. I am very much interested in your articles in HORTICULTURE. Respectfully,

J. S. L.

Hartford City, Ind.

In reply to query from Mr. L., would state that we find the wood from roses growing outside for summer flowering too hard as a rule to propagate well and root freely. We would prefer to lift the plants and plant them in a bench in the rose house if none of the varieties that are wanted are grown inside. Should there be no rose houses on the place, it will be much cheaper to buy the required number of plants, unless a very large number are wanted, for to propagate roses successfully one has to have very little of other things to attend to. If the roses mentioned have been watered frequently, and the wood is not too hard then we would proceed the same as we would with the regular greenhouse types. As Mr. L. mentions that the roses in question have had one or two frosts we are afraid the wood is too hard to root readily, and a much better plan will be as suggested. These plants do not have to be allowed to flower, and will produce far more wood if all the buds are pinched. Cuttings taken before the first day of the year will form very nice plants for planting out in the spring. Should the first two have plenty of long shoots, these can be cut up into regular cuttings, heeled in, or better still buried in ground that is well drained, and set out next spring. If however the ground where these are set cannot be irrigated, they will not do very well, and cannot be relied on to produce the necessary plants for the coming year.

A. RUZICKA.

THE WATER REQUIREMENT OF PLANTS.

A review of the literature on the water requirement of plants, Bulletin 285 of the Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, in its 96 pages, supplies an extended bibliography of the subject and presents the results of the leading experiments.

Among the topics considered are the effect of soil moisture content, soil type, cultivation, soil mass, fertilizers, previous crops, soil temperature, air temperatures, shade, air humidity, carbon dioxide content of the air, parasites, the relative leaf area, frequent cutting, defoliation, amount of growth or number of plants per unit of soil mass, and the bearing of the age of the plant on its water requirement.

In addition, there is a consideration of the water requirement of different kinds of plants, and the determination of water requirement of crops under field conditions.

The bulletin is the work of Dr. Lyman J. Briggs, Biophysicist, and Dr. H. L. Shantz, Plant Physiologist, Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

CHRYSANTHEMUM OCONTO.

This is one of Elmer D. Smith & Co.'s seedling novelties which was certificated at Cincinnati on October 18th. Oconto is a white Japanese Incurved of large size with strong ridged stem and perfect foliage like Donatello. This will be a companion for Chrysolora, coming into perfection October 15th. Height 4 ft.; best bud August 30th.

NEW HAMPSHIRE TOILS AND PASTIMES.

The following letter just received from Vernon T. Sherwood, formerly of Boston, but now located at Charlestown, N. H., will, we think, interest and entertain many of our readers and so not wishing to appear selfish we pass it around without even asking Mr. Sherwood's permission:

Friend Stewart:—

Just a few notes for old time sake. During a drive from here to Claremont eight miles north of here I called upon Stevens the only florist who runs about 10000 feet of glass. He was enlarging a recently built greenhouse, trying to keep up with the demand for flowers which increases very rapidly. Carnations are the leading feature and he had a nice block of chrysanthemums just coming into flower.

Claremont is a rapidly growing New England town; the Sullivan Machine Company are doubling their facilities and it is the shopping center for miles around.

Bellows Falls, on the Vermont side of the Connecticut river, has Geo. Halliday, the florist. This young man although established just more than a decade is thoroughly up to date in every way. He has a modern greenhouse, iron-frame construction erected last year as an addition to his older houses at present filled with carnations and chrysanthemums, lilies and Primula obconica. The land is planted to choice fruits, peaches and apple trees chiefly, low headed and well kept. Mr. Halliday has taken first prizes for his fruit in Boston and is well known for miles around as a first class fruit grower. Naturally Mr. Halliday believes in spraying, in contrast to a cider maker who owns a large orchard and says it does not pay to spray, although he does burn out the tent caterpillar. There are some who maintain that the russet apple makes the best cider, and perhaps it does, but the russet has less juice than many, and therefore it takes more to make a gallon.

Lovers of Omar and followers of Isaac Walton would do well to sojourn here for a few days near this cider mill, for there is a pond teeming with perch and hornpout and last year's cider as clear as crystal, is a thing for city folks to dwell upon; to paraphrase Omar "a jug of cider, a loaf of bread, and with thee I could be happy for ever."

What think you of cypress bars forty years old and still sound except for the ends on the wall plate? We pulled down our grapery this autumn and rebuilt, putting in 16 x 24 glass; pulled out an old flue and reheated with a Hitchings boiler in another house; repainted everything—residence, farm buildings, greenhouses and fences.

Now for a coon hunt, during the still hours of the night, climbing up a nearby tree and shooting the coon; then the most infernal racket, as the dog grabs the coon, or the coon grabs the dog, in which case it sometimes becomes advisable to club the coon to death.

Well, friend, I have rambled a little, but it is the nearest approach to a talk across the table at Locke's, and I hope that you will get as much pleasure out of it as I do.

FALL PLANTING.

When one is setting out a tree or a plant, it is assumed that the planter wishes to have it attain size and as perfect a development as possible the first summer. In the fall, previous to the last of November, when the ground is just warm and moist enough, and in the spring previous to the drying winds and usual hot sun of the last of June, a plant will at once start a root growth after being moved. It the spring it promptly begins sending out leaves, while in the fall only the roots act. Hardy plants transplanted in the fall before severe cold weather sets in will, therefore, even before the following winter become more or less well established, and naturally will be in a position to make a stronger growth the following summer than would those disturbed in the spring, and particularly late in the spring.

It may further be said in favor of fall planting, that more time and effort can be spared for the work than could in the spring. All plants are now fully dormant and in the best condition for moving, while many, such as the Forsythias, for example, the Bleeding Hearts and Peonies, start into growth with the first warm day, and necessarily must receive a check if transplanted then. A peony planted in the fall will be strong enough to produce well-developed flowers the following season, while if planted in the spring it cannot bloom until the following year. Herbaceous perennials and flowering shrubs if planted in the fall will produce a strong and vigorous growth and be much more beautiful than such that have been moved and checked just as they are starting into growth in the spring. Plants transplanted in the fall will suffer less from the hot sun of July and general dry weather of summer than when moved in the spring.

It is safe to plant hardy trees and plants until about December 1st, as it is a well established fact that plants make a root action on all warm days, even during December and after the ground has even frozen to the depth of three or four inches. From October 15th to November 15th is perhaps the ideal time in the year for planting, as the weather is not cold enough to injure the roots while they are exposed, the ground in the most excellent condition to be worked and the plants perfectly dormant. Plants, when packed to travel a distance, are easily kept moist and do not suffer during transportation so readily as in the spring, when often a soft growth has started before they are dug from the nursery and shipped.

CLEVELAND FLOWER SHOW PREPARATIONS.

We present a view herewith, showing some of the publicity work which is being done in Cleveland to boom the big flower show. The picture shows an empty lot in front of the exhibition hall which has been planted with shrubbery, etc., to make the environment and approaches attractive. Entries for the show are coming in strong.

BRITISH HORTICULTURE.

Early Chrysanthemums.

The first show of the season, organized by the National Chrysanthemum Society, took place at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, on Oct. 1 and 2. This fixture affords ample evidence of the advances which have been made in raising early varieties, and their adaptability for decorative purposes. Cragg, Harrison & Cragg, who are amongst the largest growers for market, had a very attractive group. Among the best were Yellow Moneymaker (a sport from a popular market white) which gained a first class certificate; J. W. Streater, yellow; Juliet, rosy cinnamon; Cranfordia, yellow; Almirante, red bronze; Cranford Yellow, Betty Spark and Pink Princess. Wells & Co., Ltd., had a meritorious display. This firm's new introductions this season include: Popsie, an outdoor single, creamy white, with a yellow disc; Olive, Japanese outdoor variety, chestnut red, with gold reverse; Susie, outdoor single, salmon buff; Golden Firebrand, a bright yellow sport from the early-flowering single Firebrand. Mrs. Richard Hamilton, shown by Lowe & Shawyer, is a useful addition to the market varieties; it is a rich golden yellow, with incurved florets. Golden Diana, from F. Todd & Co., is a golden yellow sport from Crimson Diana. The society's chief show is to take place on Nov. 5 and two following days. This is to be followed by the annual dinner later in the month; a conference is to take place on Dec. 10, when papers on outdoor chrysanthemums are to be read by Norman Davis and T. Bevan, who was the society's delegate at the International Horticultural Congress at Ghent.

WALTER MOTT'S NOTES BY THE WAY.

Gainesville, Fla.

The Experiment Station in connection with the State University, although located here less than a decade, has done excellent work and promises much for the future. Prof. Rolfs, who has charge of the department, was out of the city and I was handed over to the superintendent of gardens, Jonathan Schnabel, who proved a very versatile guide. One of the most extensive subjects is grasses, every known species being tried out to test its adaptability to this southern climate. Three kinds are highly promising, they are Panicum tomentosum for hay, Anthrophora hermaphordita for pasture, and Tricholaena Wightii a grass from Natal, of vigorous growth and beautiful color, a most decided improvement upon the old species.

Here one sees Cornus florida with fruit of such intense color rarely if ever seen in the north. The native cherry laurel is a vast improvement on the sweet bay. It is a rapid grower, can be trimmed into any shape, and its glossy bright green foliage more attractive. It is claimed to be fully as hardy north, with protection in winter, and is not subject to the insect pests as is Laurus nobilis. I saw some fine standards that were just perfect. Antigonon leptopos is the brightest thing among climbers, of a delicate shade of pink and certainly the most profuse bloomer. Propagated from cuttings it flowers the first year. It forms a tuber so that when cut by an early frost it can be boxed up and stored. Two great roses are Louis Phillipe and Tausendschoen which grow like weeds and bloom all the season.

One of the greatest pests here is the eelworm and Mr. Schnabel is of the opinion the only cure is suffocation, for the insect must have air. Where he finds the soil infected outside he mulches heavily and invariably has success. He is of the opinion that the same method should be adopted under glass where soil cannot be sterilized. By the way, Mr. Schnabel was once grower for Dailledouze Bros. and takes great interest in his northern fellow-craftsman.

Washington, D. C.

The Queen of Autumn reigns supreme in the Capital City but the demand for the grand blooms on exhibition at the various stores is not what it should be, and undoubtedly would be, were the weather colder and more brisk. Fine displays are seen in the store windows. What was formerly quite a trip is now a short pleasant run. I made it in the Gude Bros.' car to Anacostia where are located the plants of Kramer, Gude and Alex. B. Gardner, all within a stone's throw of each other. I missed Fred. Kramer, who recently returned from Europe with many new things. His stock is heavy and various, supplying two stores and a handsome stand in Center Market.

At Gude Bros., Adolphus was right on the job cutting from a house of Col. Appleton, which is a sight in itself. Chrysanthemums in all stages and practically every variety worth growing. There will be immense crops of roses for the holidays as the bulk of the crop now coming is picked early before maturing, throwing the growth back into the wood for a later crop. W. F. Gude showed me the cold storage city plant where the several shipments made during the day are stored which enables them to fill any order at prompt notice.

Evidence of the popularity of the Nephrolepis family is seen in a fine stock of plants in pans and pots of all sizes. I also noted some houses of cyclamens and Begonia Glory of Cincinnati that promise to be prize winners around the holidays. This is the first season for this kind of stock and it certainly is a success.

APPLE TREE ANTHRACNOSE SHOULD BE TREATED NOW.

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, Oregon. Apple tree anthracnose should be treated as soon after the fruit is picked as possible by spraying the trees with Bordeau mixture, 6-6-50 solution, and where the disease is very serious it is advisable to spray before picking the fruit, according to the recommendations of Professor H. S. Jackson, Plant Pathologist of the Oregon Agricultural College.

"Growers should begin to make preparations for the annual fall spraying for apple tree anthracnose," said Professor Jackson. "The disease seems to have increased during the last season, especially in orchards that were not sprayed. It is important that the spray be put on early, and in case of young orchards not bearing it may be applied at once. Where the disease is very abundant and causing serious damage, two sprayings should be put on, about three weeks apart. All these sprayings are more effective if application is made before the fall rains.

"If possible all the more seriously infected branches should be pruned out before spraying, but the spraying is more important and should be given the preference. Pruning may then follow the spraying, and all branches which are cut out should be immediately removed from the orchard and burned.

"Where cankers are formed it is best to clear out the old bark, and if wounds are large, cover the exposed wood with grafting wax or paint. The dead bark in cankers is a source of infection for three years, besides which it offers protection to various insects, especially the wooly aphis.

"As supplementary to spraying, cankers that are detected on very young trees in the winter may be prevented from developing by shaving off the thin outer layer of bark."

REGISTRATION AT THE MASSACHUSETTS AGRICULTURE COLLEGE.

Figures just received from the office of President Butterfield of the Massachusetts Agriculture College show very strikingly the remarkable growth of the college in the past fifteen and in the last five years, especially. From 132 students in 1898, the number has increased to 604 at the present time. Of these, 98 are seniors, 105 juniors, 140 sophomores, 200 freshmen, 38 post graduate students and 23 specials or unclassified. This is an increase of 357.6 per cent in fifteen years. Since 1908, five years ago, the number has increased from 278 to 604, an increase of 117.3 per cent. From a graduating class of 11 in 1898, this has increased to 90 in the class of 1913. These figures give a fair idea of the growth of the Agricultural College so far as resident students are concerned, but take no account of the establishment and remarkable growth of the Extension Service of the Experiment Station. These two divisions of the College, which come into such direct contact with the farmers of the State, must be considered, if a true conception of the growth of the College is to be secured.

THE GARDENER'S PLACE.

Your notes in issue of September 18th on Mr. Ebel's paper read at the October meeting of the Boston Florists' Club certainly prove that Mr. Ebel knows what he is talking about when he advises that the gardener endeavor by attire, deportment and patient fidelity to foster closer confidential relationship between his employer and himself. Although it appears on the surface that many gardeners get along well with their employer, in reality they do not get along; they merely drag along for the reason that they are entirely out of harmony with their employer and are much like Mr. Ebel's critics, fifty years behind the times as far as private gardening is concerned. Their training in Europe makes them better fitted for commercial work, and if they could secure reasonable remuneration for the work done, very few of them would be on a private estate. When we hear that same old cry, "educate the gardener," he "ought to study more," etc., etc., it is sufficient to make a Missouri mule laugh. As our friend, Mr. Cameron, states, there is no class of workmen who study more along their chosen line of work than the gardener. He is at it all the time. The fact is, he studies too much gardening. If his make-up consisted of three parts of what Mr. Ebel stated and one part gardener he would be better qualified and more in harmony with his employer. He is too practical. He depends entirely on results to satisfy his employer. If we examine the horticultural make-up of most employers we find they are ignorant and many of them extremely so; consequently, the practical gardener and the ignorant employer are as far apart as the earth and the moon. It looks to me that the problem to be solved is not so much how to become a capable landscaper or a plant grower as it is how to harmonize these two.

St. Louis, Mo. D. MILLER.

Fixing Values.

At the meeting of the wholesale Seedsmen's League on the 16th inst., to consider the fixing of values on the 1913 seed crop, prices agreed on show a marked decline from those adopted a year ago, according to information which has reached us. We make this statement advisedly as we have no really official information to go by, the meetings being secret. There are two lines which are an exception to the general rule—beans and corn, and particularly the former. We learn that there is to be another meeting sometime next month to put the finishing touches to the making of prices and these will doubtless be printed in the wholesale lists of the members of the League. It is understood, however, that members are at liberty to quote or print any prices they see fit, those adopted by the directors being merely suggestive.

Seed Beans.

From reliable information at hand we do not think that the trade yet appreciates the very great shortage in seed beans, as early estimates from the growers were quite optimistic. Each successive report reduces the previous estimate and it begins to look as if the wax-podded varieties at any rate will be extremely scarce and high priced. We believe also that the Late Refugee will also be very scarce and high. Referring to the Bush Limas, the conviction is becoming general that actual deliveries will fall a little short of even the most recent estimates, and it will not be surprising if the Fordhook Bush should reach as high figures as a year ago. We assume that it is quite generally known that a very serious mix-up occurred last winter and spring on the Dreer's Bush Limas. According to information which we have received, it seems that many hundreds of bushels were shipped from California to dealers in the east, which proved to be the pole variety. Some of these beans were shipped back to California as seed stock, the result being a general disappointment to both the growers and seedsmen, and a great shortage in the Dreer's Bush of this year's crop.

Some Surpluses.

The trade is generally well stocked on most standard varieties. There are fewer shortages than for a number of years past. There seems to be a surplus of the leading biennials, such as garden beets, mangels, turnips, etc., and if these surpluses continue to pile up there will no doubt be another drop in prices before the end of the year. Very great shortages in the past few years has stimulated the growing of these items in this country on a much more extended scale than in many former years, leading to the inevitable result of an over-production. In time this surplus will be absorbed and the trade will adapt itself to the new situation.

Onions and Potatoes.

Owing to the very high prices at which onions are now selling, there is every indication of a heavy demand for onion seed the coming season. It looks as though some recent prices may require toning up before January 1.. Although seed potatoes generally are a little shorter crop than a year ago, Maine is the exception to the rule, it being generally conceded that the crop in that state is the largest ever produced, and as Maine furnishes the bulk of the seed potatoes used throughout the eastern, central and southern states, it is fortunate for those who are heavy dealers in this item.

NOTES.

Bridgeport, Ct.—Frank G. Bogart, who succeeded Levi Currier in the seed store at 97 Wall street, has gone out of business.

Toledo, O.—Henry Hirsch has leased a building at 152 South Erie street and will start in the wholesale and retail seed business about Nov. 1st. He was formerly located at Archbold, Ohio.

C. Keur & Sons, Hillegom, Holland, had many thousands of bulbs and plants on S. S. "Volturno," which was destroyed by fire on the Atlantic recently with an appalling loss of life.

In consequence of storage location, the Laughlin Seed Co. are moving their main office from San José, Cal., to Nappanee, Ind., notwithstanding that they have materially increased their onion seed acreage in California.

The Santa Barbara Daily News and Independent devoted two columns of its issue of October 17th to a description of the W. Atlee Burpee & Co. seed farm at Lompoc, Cal., and the excellent work being done there under the management of Edwin Lonsdale.

The Leonard Seed Co., of Chicago, are offering this season a limited quantity of a new type of sweet corn, which has been named Narrow Grained Evergreen. They have been working on this type for several years. It is a particularly desirable corn for canning purposes.

The new seed store opened by John Wilk at 155 West 33rd street, New York, is a neat little place, admirably located for a healthy growth, being situated nearly opposite the Pennsylvania Railroad Terminal and very accessible for gardeners and others going to and from New Jersey and Long Island.

HOME MERCHANT SHOULD NEVER HAVE DULL TIMES.

Nothing wins so well as constant work. Often we hear a merchant complaining about dull times. Perhaps his neighbor is doing a rushing business, for the simple reason that his neighbor keeps busy. If customers are not coming in so rapidly as he might wish the busy man takes time to get busier and devises some new scheme to bring trade to the store.

Perhaps he busies himself in rearranging his goods in attractive manner on the shelves and in the showcases. If he finds some of the clerks who are complaining of its being dull he immediately gets those clerks busy getting out old goods and arranging them in a manner that he can carry on a cleaning up sale to advantage.

There is always lots of work to do. How many times do we find merchants who complain of dullness sitting inside and vainly endeavoring to look through windows covered with dust and dirt? How many times do we find the man who says there is nothing to do looking at a display of dirty goods?

Don't you forget it—if you have any business to look after you have something to keep you busy all the time. Nothing like keeping busy about the store. It is sure to pay in the end. Even the novice can keep busy reading some good trade paper and posting up on commercial ideas and make a winning thereby.—Grand Island Independent.

ST. LOUIS CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The Apple Growers' Congress will hold its annual meeting here November 12..

The Engelman Botanical Club will resume its meetings this month, the first will be held with the opening of the chrysanthemum show at the Missouri Botanical Garden. All meetings this winter will be held in the afternoon.

The Florist Club Publicity Committee held its meeting on Oct. 21st, at Windler's wholesale house and mapped out plans for publicity this winter. Officers elected were: R. J. Windler, chairman; W. S. Wells, secretary, and Carl Beyer, treasurer. A full report of this meeting will be made to the Florist Club at its meeting November 13th.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

Among the European tourists who have just returned is Mrs. J. L. Loose, who has been spending the summer in France.

J. A. Philipps, of Fourteenth street, Northwest, is now in Los Angeles, Cal., where he will remain for some time.

Miss Elanore Carpenter, who for the past four years or more has presided over the office of the Washington Florists' Company, is receiving congratulation upon her marriage to Mr. Jenkins, of the Bureau of Chemistry, of the Department of Agriculture.

W. P. Richards, assessor for the District of Columbia, announces that those merchants in the various lines, including the florists, who wish to continue doing business, if they have not already renewed their licenses, should do so at once. Nineteen thirteen licenses expired on October 31.

The division of entomology of the Canadian Department of Agriculture and the board of agriculture of Scotland will hereafter inspect, certify and seal all plant shipments destined for the United States in compliance with the inspection and certification requirements of the Department of Agriculture of this country under the plant quarantine act.

The Florists' Club of Washington will tender to Fred H. Kramer and Adolph Gude and the other Minute Men of America who recently participated in the maneuvers of the German Army, and to Theodore Diedrich, who recently returned from an extended visit in Germany, a reception and oyster roast at the Elks' Hall, on Tuesday, November 4. The committee in charge have also arranged for suitable entertainments and a number of surprises may be looked for. Edward S. Schmid is chairman and George Dalglish and Elmer Mayberry, members.

Among the visitors the past week were Henry M. Robinson, of Boston, Mass.; Charles E. Meehan, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Small of New York.

St. Albans, Vt.—The florist business of George Cooke, South Main street, has been sold to Charles Kennedy, a former employee, and Dennis Ledoux.

CHICAGO NOTES.

L. Nielsen has opened up a new store on Chicago avenue near California avenue.

H. E. Philpott has donated a fine cup to the Cook Co. Florists' Association to be given to the member making the highest individual score for the season in bowling.

Members of the Cook County Florists' Association are wearing a new gold button of a very neat design. It has a hand—enameled pansy in the center in delicate shade of purple and a band of blue enamel with the lettering in gold, "Cook County Florists' Association," and the motto "Unity."

Fleischman Floral Co. are having their fourteenth anniversary sale this week which is announced in a full page ad. in the Chicago Tribune of Oct. 28th. The publicity campaign adopted by this firm together with the high grade of stock they send out shows for itself in the amount of business done.

Chicago retail florists received a great many orders for the funeral of the late Adolphus Busch of St. Louis, Mo. Geo. Weinhoeber and two assistants from Fleischman's and Wm. Wolf from A. Lange's went down with their orders to see that everything was delivered in good condition. They report the quantity of flowers was the largest ever seen at any funeral in the west and represented every conceivable sort of design and emblem.

Last year Captain Herman Schuenemann and his Christmas tree ship, the Rouse Simmons, went down in the November gales on Lake Michigan with all on board and nothing was ever heard or found of the captain or crew, as told in HORTICULTURE at the time. This year the captain's widow is in the woods of northern Michigan superintending the getting out of a shipload of Christmas trees and greens for the Chicago market, while her 20-year-old daughter, Elsie, is looking after the business part of the transaction in Chicago. HORTICULTURE sincerely wishes them success in their undertaking.

Visitors—Mr. Fox, Jr., of J. M. Fox & Son, Milwaukee, Wis.; A. Schutz, Hammond, Ind.

Pittsfield, Mass.—Max Engelmann, who has been with T. I. Drake for the last fifteen years, succeeds him. The business will be known as the Drake Greenhouses.

NEWS NOTES.

Paterson, N. J.—James Smith, formerly of Stoutenborough & Smith, has started in business for himself at 113 Market street.

Weldon, Pa.—J. F. Birmington of Switchville, has purchased the greenhouses and stock of the late Ed. D. Drown, and will continue the business.

Des Moines, Ia.—A hail storm on Oct. 10th, damaged the greenhouses of the J. S. Wilson Floral Company and the Iowa Seed Company to the extent of about $1,000 each.

Woburn, Mass.—C. B. Johnson, who purchased the estate and greenhouses of Arthur Griffin, is making preparations to soon add another house about 65x200 ft. Mr. Johnson is watching the behavior of several promising carnation sports—among them a white Pink Wonder.

S. E. Spencer, the gladiolus grower, finds Woburn soil ideal for his favorite specialty. The bulbs which he is sending out this fall are extra fine. Mrs. Pendleton, L. Merton Gage's masterpiece, has been glorious this year.

Washington, D. C.—The thirteenth annual Government Chrysanthemum show will open under the auspices of the Department of Agriculture on Wednesday morning, October 29, at 9 o'clock in the Government gardens, 14th and B streets, N. W. The exhibition will be open to the public without ticket from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M. daily, and will continue for about two weeks.

In addition to the standard varieties and novelties there will be shown some unusual Department seedlings which as yet have not been named.

North Cambridge, Mass.—John McKenzie, the prosperous plant grower, is greatly taken with Nephrolepis Roosevelt. Its broad fronds and wavy-edged pinnae are extremely handsome and we agree with Mr. McKenzie that it far excels the old Bostoniensis. Seven thousand azaleas arrived this week. If all the Belgian azaleas are as good this year as the Mme. Petricks we saw Mr. McKenzie unpacking, then the buyers have cause to rejoice. Chrysanthemums are being rapidly harvested and their place is snapped up for ardisias, poinsettias and azaleas without any delay.

PERSONAL.

Azel Harvey Gregory and Mary Ella Marcy, proprietor of the Miles City Greenhouses, Miles City, Mont., were married on Oct. 12th.

Prof. E. K. Thomas, of the Rhode Island State College, Kingston, was married to Miss Alice E. Beale last week at the bride's home in Sandwich, Mass.

Miss Gertrude A. Norton, eldest daughter of M. H. Norton, ex-president of the S. A. F., was married on Wednesday evening, October 29th, to Fred W. Carter, at Dorchester, Mass.

John Dunbar, assistant superintendent of Rochester (N. Y.) Parks, while visiting Boston this week was called home by a telegram to the effect that Superintendent C. C. Laney had been taken suddenly ill and removed to a hospital for an operation.

St. Louis visitors: Sam Seligman, New York; Guy Reyburn, representing A. Henderson & Co., Chicago.

Philadelphia visitors: Charles A. Dards, New York City; J. H. Pierce, Baltimore, Md.; Mr. Hobbs, of Mann & Brown, Richmond, Va.; Mr. Saltford, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Mr. Whipple, Jacksonville, Fla.; Frank Johnson, A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, Ill.; Antoine Leuthy, Roslindale, Mass.; Walter Mott, Beacon, N. Y.; John Low, representing Peter Henderson & Co., New York City; Miss Semler, Milwaukee, Wis.; Miss Baumgarten of Baumgarten Floral Co., Milwaukee, Wis.

Germantown, Pa.—The widow and son of the late Robert Kinkaid will continue his florist business on West Rittenhouse street.

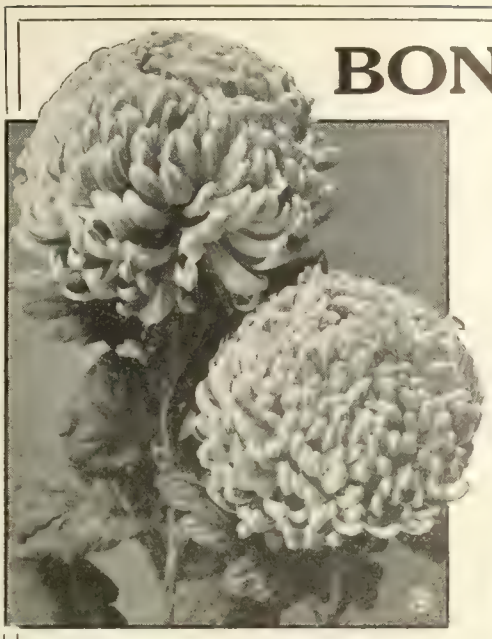
Flower Market Reports



BOSTON Trade is very quiet this week. Chrysanthemums loom up strong in long ranks on the tables of wholesalers and market dealers and all other flowers seem to have been crowded out of notice for the time being. Large chrysanthemums of the exhibition type do not figure noticeably in this market; medium flowers are the rule among the commercial growers and the excessively large blooms are seen only on the exhibition boards, where they do not attract the attention which they formerly did. Roses are plentiful and cheap. Carnations are rapidly accumulating, many being sold at cut rates after a sojourn in the wholesaler's ice boxes waiting in vain for a buyer. All told there is plenty of everything and no scarcity in sight so long as chrysanthemum rules.

BUFFALO There has been very little change in market condition. Roses continue to come in heavy and chrysanthemums has been in good supply. Pompons are coming on and have taken well. The receipts have been heavy on everything except carnations which, have been on the short side. Dahlias and cosmos continue to come in but there is very little sale for these. Violets are good, but the demand lacks. Lilies are coming in more plentiful and good sales have been had. Some callas, also which sold readily. Lily of the valley is in good supply. Orchids are not moving well. Asparagus and other greens are in normal supply. It cannot be said that trade is quiet though some dull days were had last week.

CHICAGO The chrysanthemum is now occupying the center of the stage. Offerings of the popular fall flower are increasing daily. The old favorite mid-season sorts such as Ivory—both pink and white—Bonnaffon, and a few Appletons have made their appearance, together with a host of the newer varieties too numerous to mention. So far the influx of stock can't be called a glut, the market being able to take care of the daily arrivals, but prices have somewhat weakened all along the line. Pompons are not over plenty as yet, and meet with fair demand. Roses are about equal to the demand, except the shorter lengths in white, which are rather short in supply. Carnations still are the scarcest article on the market and the growers hold out small hopes for an increase in the output for several weeks to come. Lily of the valley is enjoying an excellent demand and so are lilies. Violets, on the other hand, are moving rather slowly, particularly the double of which larger quantities are received than the market can absorb, and although the quality is improving still the stock is far from being up to standard.

CINCINNATI The demand for the early All Saint's and All Soul's Day decorations was the only redeeming feature of last week's market. This, naturally, was only on Friday and Saturday. On those days nearly everything that sold at a cheap or reasonable price, considering the crowded market, was cleaned up nicely. During the balance of the week average sales were ordinary and the price medium. For carnations the demand has been sufficient to take up all good receipts and maintain a price that was fair, taking into consideration the falling prices in other lines. Chrysanthemums enjoy a fair demand but there are so many of them that the returns do not up to this time reach a high point. Some varieties sell at about one-half the figure they sold at in other years. Roses continue in good supply. The receipts include a fine crop of fine Richmonds. The

NEW YORK Beauty cut is adequate. The lily supply is not very large but enough to take care of all calls. Lily of the valley sell well. A few snapdragons are offered. Orchids have been proving good property.

The high water mark of the chrysanthemum inundation is now pretty near and the usual effect of the overwhelming influx of blooms is plainly seen in the wholesale markets where one finds little room in which to move about on account of the stacks of crates, some of them big enough to hold a man. Sales are large but at low figures and the situation is well reflected in the indifferent attitude of the buyers, who realize that everything is in their favor. Roses have never been so cheap as they are now. On the other hand it is interesting to note the good demand for carnations at full values and this at a time when the chrysanthemum is so insatiate a competitor. Cattleyas are selling very low notwithstanding high quality and violets are scarcely in the running as a factor in the market. How long these conditions will last nobody can predict but it is generally conceded that the chrysanthemums must recede before anything else gets much of a chance.

PHILADELPHIA The long-looked-for frost came last week and dahlias and other outside stock that have befogged the market have disappeared to a large extent. Chrysanthemums are of course, supreme now. There are rather too many of the lower grades and the warm dark weather has been against the substance and keeping qualities of some of the choicer stock. American Beauty roses are plentiful and demand rather sluggish. The new roses Mrs. Russell and Jonkheer are in brisk demand; the local trade are grabbing most of these in sight and leaving very few for outside shipping. The orchid market has a much improved tone; demand has been excellent and there are plenty of good flowers and in considerable variety. Gardenias are still on the scarce side. Violets are improving in quality, especially the singles. Doubles are not as good as they might be.

ST. LOUIS The market last week was about as much loaded up with stock as was reported the week previous and only for the great demand the latter part of the week for the Adolphus Busch funeral the situation would have been much worse. Every florist had something for this event and the commission men cleaned up their surplus last three days of the week although at moderate prices. The horse show which opened this week, should create some further demand for extra fine stock.

WASHINGTON Business is beginning to pick up and it is about time for things have certainly been dull for the past few months. The heavy frost of last week caused the demise of the dahlia crop. There are plenty of all flowers to be had with few exceptions, among the latter being cattleyas, of which the supply is just about equal to a small demand, and gardenias are very scarce. Carnations are much better than they have been and are meeting with ready sale. Spray orchids of exceptionally fine quality are to be seen at a number of the stores. The chrysanthemum crop is very heavy and among the leading varieties are White Touset, Pacific Supreme, Chrysolora, and Polly Rose. The demand for lily of the valley should be quite heavy during the next few weeks due to the number of weddings scheduled to take place. At present it is fairly plentiful.

BOSTON CO-OPERATIVE FLOWER MARKET.

The annual dinner of the stockholders and stallholders of The Boston Co-operative Flower Market, will be held at the Quincy House, Boston, Saturday evening, November 1st, at 6.30 o'clock sharp. Ladies are invited and a delightful social occasion is anticipated.

CINCINNATI NOTES.

Reports from Newport are to the effect that Chas. McCrea, of Hardestz & Co., is sure to be one of the four winners at the polls in the race for Commissioners of the city of Newport.

Miss Laura Murphy, daughter of Wm. Murphy, has gone south for the fall and winter.

Visitors: E. E. Schaefer, Dayton, O.; N. H. Moses, Petoskey, Mich.; W. E. Hamilton, Greensburg, Ind.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Commercial Gardening: A Practical and Scientific Treatise for Market Gardeners, Market Growers, Fruit, Flower and Vegetable Growers, Nurserymen, etc. By Many Practical Specialists, under the Editorship of John Weathers. This is an English work which is being brought out in this country in a 4-volume edition by The Macmillan Company, New York. The price is $15.00 net. The work covers a wide range of topics, treated primarily and chiefly from the commercial point of view, with the aim to show how to make gardening pay and meet the needs of the grower who has to make a livelihood by selling garden and greenhouse produce.

Volume I deals with the principles of plant physiology. It contains a vast amount of information that every reader can profit by. The general aspects of commercial gardening are naturally considered from a British view point and vary more or less widely from what experience has taught us in this country, but the chapters on the science of plant growing, for which John Fraser appears to be largely responsible, are comprehensive and valuable. The science of the soil, manures, insect pests, fungicides and insecticides, are gone into with elaborate detail and contain an answer to about every question, however minute, which might confront the grower.

In justice to our readers, however, it becomes our duty to review a work of this character, solely from the standpoint of American conditions and we must say that the chapters on greenhouse building and heating are far from being applicable to this country. Again in Vol. II, in the chapters devoted to Hardy and Half-Hardy Herbaceous Plants, Bulbs and Flowers, the American reader will get something of a shock in finding calendulas, China asters, Cobæa scandens, castor oil plant and amaranthus so classified and, in the section which treats of Stove and Greenhouse Plants, to find alternantheras, balsams and petunias included under this heading. In the list of commercial Acacias he will miss three of our best favorites in this country, viz., Bayleyana, pubescens and longifolia; under Begonias he will look in vain for Glory of Cincinnati, and the chapters on Carnations and Roses, while they may be just right for British growers, can hardly appeal to their American cousins. A splendid chapter on the Life History of Ferns is contributed by Chas. T. Druery, and also a most excellent one on Cyclamen Growing by John May.

Vol. III treats mainly on commercial fruit growing in England, Scotland and Ireland, and while there is here much useful information, especially in regard to insects and diseases, the varieties recommended are not those familiar to the American fruit market. Our two leading pears, for instance, Bartlett (Williams' Bon Cretien) and Seckel, do not appear in this list. There are several good chapters on garden surveying, levelling and mensuration and on methods of keeping market garden accounts.

In Vol. IV, trees, shrubs and woody climbers occupy one section. The lists as given would need to be changed considerably for our climate, especially in the chapter devoted to conifers and taxads. Vegetable growing for market takes up the larger part of this volume, and here, as in Vol. I, is found much information of general application.

The volumes are beautifully bound and there is a wealth of high-class illustrations, many of them presented in natural colors. A number of old-fashioned wood cuts have, however, been inserted, which add nothing.

Poland of Today and Yesterday. A Review of Its History Past and Present and the Causes Which Resulted in Its Partition, together with a Survey of Its Social, Political and Economic Conditions Today. By Nevin O. Winter.

The number of books upon Poland available for the English reader is not very large. The author of this volume has done his work well. The book is one of a series by Mr. Winter of similar scope, treating on Mexico, Brazil, The Russian Empire of Today and Yesterday, etc., all of which have been very favorably received. The author traces the downfall of Poland to the excessive development of individualism among the privileged classes and the subjugation of the great majority of the population to their will and selfish whims. When conflict with other nations came to pass Poland was totally unprepared and a realization of the hopeless situation came too late. The book is intended to convey an instructive lesson to the Anglo-Saxon of today. Many Poles are seeking our shores to make a home with us. Their influence upon our future and the composite American type that will in time be evolved, whether for good or evil may be in some degree estimated after carefully reading this authentic story of their past as a people, their religion, literature and art. The book is a thoughtful, sympathetic work, much more than a mere compilation of facts, and written in an interesting style that holds the close attention of the reader. There are 49 superb full-page illustrations. The publishers are L. C. Page & Co., Boston. Price $3.00 net.

John O'Partletts', A Tale of Strife and Courage, by Jean Edgerton Hovey. This book will take high rank among recent works of fiction. It shows talent of more than ordinary calibre. Few first books by a new writer appeal to the heart and fill the thoughts as this masterly portrayal of character woven into a simple, straightforward plot. It is a story that cannot fail to command attention and popularity and we predict for it a big sale. Published by L. C. Page & Co., Boston. Price, $1.25 net.

Hawk: The Young Osage. This is another new book just issued by L. C. Page & Co. The author is C. H. Robinson. It is a story of Indian life and customs and of adventure in the early years of American civilization. Not much plot but it will be liked especially by boy readers. The illustrations are by The Avery Studio. Price, $1.25 net.

The Martie Twins. By Alice E. Allen. A book for children, requiring no extended comment. Price $1.25 net. Published by L. C. Page & Co., Boston.

A Vital Point Ignored

IN figuring the cost of a greenhouse, too many growers put too much emphasis on what the materials cost and too little on what the erection costs.

In fact, some simply don't know what it actually costs to erect their houses. They put them up during the slack season when their men can work at it at odd times. No careful record is kept of the time the men really are working on it.

Whether it's slack time or busy times, your men have to be paid just the same, and you can't dodge erection costs that way.

It has been proven over and over again that the best Iron Frame house we build, can be put up by either your men or our men, in less time than it takes to erect either an all cypress or Half Iron Frame house.

Your glass costs you the same no matter what construction you buy. So does your masonry. Your painting. Your benching. Your heating. Your ventilating apparatus.

Then why not put the cost of all those things into a Hitchings house of everlasting lastingness? This comparative cost of construction is a thing we would like to sit right down and talk over with you from a to z. We have some facts and figures that will prove mighty interesting. Lets get together, we two.

Bricks without Straw

YOU remember that one of the little unpleasantnesses between the biblical Children of Israel and the ancient Egyptian King Pharaoh, was due to his demanding that they make bricks without straw.

The bricks of those days were crude, hand moulded affairs, baked in the sun.

Straw was mixed with the clay from the Nile, to hold it t[o] [h]er better; quite as hair is today put in wall plaster.

[W]ithout straw, looked like other bricks, but they [h]ad strength—they crumbled.

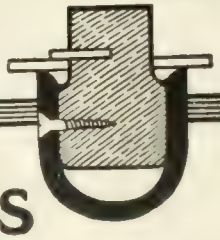
Jumping over a gap of 5,000 years, we come down to the U-Bar greenhouse and its original curved eave construction.

Other constructions may look like the U-Bar, but, like the strawless brick, it is only in the looks—the stability and durability is not there.

If it isn't made with U-Bars, it isn't a U-Bar curved eave house.

From ridge to sill, the U-Bar bars are one continuous piece of galvanized steel, no splicing—no reinforcing.

The chemically treated cypress core bars bear no weight—their only office is to form satisfactory glazing seat for putty and glass.



The U-Bar house is the only house built with U-Bars.

When you buy your greenhouse—be sure it's not a case of bricks without straw. Looks is one thing. Durability quite another.

Send for catalog. Send for us. Or both.

BABY GRAND

Cases of Horseshoe Brand Giganteum are just the thing for the retail florist, who wants just a few lilies every month. These neat little boxes are packed carefully in Japan with bulbs from the very best fields — bulbs from plants that have not been allowed to flower in the field. This strengthens them, so they will stand the Cold Storage strain better. Absolutely the very best obtainable. The cases contain 100 bulbs each, and prices including storage, are as follows:

Sizes 7-9 inches $8.50 per case. Sizes 8-10 inches $11.00 per case
Larger cases 7-9 $20 per 300, 8-10 $25 per 250

Terms 60 days after shipment, or 5% for cash with order. Shipment made any time you say. Order now, so we may reserve them for you for 1914 delivery.

Antirrhinums

Many of the chrysanthemums are now gone, and few crops pay better than snapdragons as a succession crop, provided always that the selling colors are grown and a generous soil is provided for them. You can use your chrysanthemum soil by adding a good layer of cow manure over the top and mix it all through, then plant the snapdragons a foot apart each way. If big, strong spikes are wanted, allow only three to five shoots to a plant. If smaller ones are preferred double or treble the number may be allowed to grow. A winter temperature of 48 to 50 degrees will grow good snapdragons. Finer spikes may be had at 45 degrees, but this low temperature brings them on rather slowly in midwinter. When they throw up their spikes, pinch out the side shoots, which will be quite numerous. This will improve both the flowers and spikes. As they become well established they will take a liberal amount of liquid manure once or twice a week.

Lilium Giganteum and Multiflorum

Do not lose any time in getting lily bulbs potted up as they will need all their time to come right for Easter. They like a rich compost, say about two-thirds of well-decayed sod and one-third well-rotted barnyard manure. Place them beneath a bench in a cool house where they will not get much drip, as that is sure to sodden and sour the soil and promote rot. Lilies want very little water until they have made some good roots. When they have filled their pots with roots they will want an abundance. They should have good roots with a top growth of two or three inches before they are brought into heat; otherwise they will be a failure. Give them a temperature of 50 degrees for the first three or four weeks, when they can be raised gradually until you have them at 70 degrees.

Shrubs for Greenhouse Culture

Hardy, half-hardy and tender shrubs are now forced in great numbers for a trade that is growing from year to year. The greatest part of florists' forcing stock is grown in Europe. The hardy shrubs will soon be here. In unpacking the cases that have come through by direct shipment, we find that the difference in plants of the same variety and size is great enough to warrant a judicious re-assorting of the entire lot. This should be done before the stock is potted up or stored away. All evergreens and most of the half-hardy varieties should be potted as soon as possible. Lilacs, cydonias, viburnums and other hard shrubs of this class, not wanted for early forcing, may be plunged in outdoor frames for the present. A little freezing will ensure entire maturity of the wood and will fit them all the better for forcing.

Spiraeas (Astilbe)

Any one of the half-dozen or more varieties of Astilbe, usually shipped here every fall, is worthy of being included in florists' Easter and spring stock. If, when they are unpacked, they have compact and firmly matted balls of roots, which is the rule, immediate potting will not be necessary. They can be heeled in frames, and a covering with straw or manure will keep the ground so that removal at any time during midwinter will be an easy matter. No forcing of spiraeas should be attempted before the holidays and after that the time to bring them in depends on how soon in the spring they are wanted. The later the forcing begins, the less heat will be required and the finer will be the plants in bloom. In about a 55 degrees temperature it will take pretty close to three months to bring into perfection such varieties as Astilbe japonica, floribunda and multiflora, while superba, Gladstone and Blondin want a week or two more. In a heat five or ten degrees higher, it will not take so long, but the plants will be better at a lower temperature.

Tulips

All tulips succeed well in a mixture of two-thirds of well-decayed fibrous loam to one-third of very old cow manure, or as a substitute you can use hotbed or mushroom manure, and along with this it always pays to tone it up with a fair addition of leaf mold and some sand, thoroughly mixed. After the bulbs are planted, see that the flats are given a good soaking of water and place in a bulb pit, but where you have not this they can be placed outside and covered with soil to the depth of six inches. When the weather has become cold enough to form a good crust on top, cover with coarse manure in order to keep out hard frost. When these flats have filled up with roots they are ready to be forced.

Lifting Coreopsis for Forcing

These plants are very serviceable around Easter and Memorial Day. Strong clumps for this use should now be lifted and firmly potted in turfy loam three parts, well-rotted manure one part. A place just clear of heavy frost will do to keep these plants until wanted. Those required for Easter can be brought into a cool house with about 45 degrees at night, some time during early January.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Begonia Gloire de Lorraine; Care of Allamandas; Freesias; Rhododendrons; Paper Whites and Roman Hyacinths; Protecting the Hardy Border

Cleaning the Early Vinery

After the vines have been pruned lose no time in pushing through the cleaning of the house, following this up with the cleaning of the vines and general renovation of the borders. There's a time limit on this job if you mean to start up on December 1st and not only should this be an incentive to have the work completed at the earliest possible date, but the vines will be benefited by being allowed to stand awhile after the overhauling before they are started up. Have the house thoroughly washed down from stem to stern, woodwork, glass, walls, etc.; every nook and corner should yield up all the live stock (in many varied forms) and all dust and dirt accumulated during the past season. This will be time well spent for to start up a house that is not clean is surely seeking trouble.

Next comes the cleaning of the vines and here let me say it may be a job that will take very little time and work or be one that needs considerable attention—one of the elastic sort. The scraping of the vine does it absolutely no good. It is not to benefit the vine that it is practised but to make the pests that are now infesting them more accessible and to leave no hiding and breeding places for them to harbor in through next season. With this in mind it follows that the state of the vines now should regulate the amount of cleaning to be done. If your vines have been clean and free from pests during the past season or seasons it is reasonable to expect with the same amount of care they will come through in the same good condition in the seasons to come. Such vines as these only need the rough and loose bark rubbed off with the hand. Now for the other extreme and the go-betweens can be gauged. Mealy bug (does the name give you a shiver?) and the much abused red spider are the two pests that are continually forcing their acquaintance upon us and were it not for these much of this work would be eliminated. By removing all the loose bark from the main rod and particularly from around the spurs most of the hiding places of these intruders will be exposed, making it easy for the washings of insecticides to do their work. When mealy bug has once got firmly established they will not be eliminated in one season. After all the work of cleaning and washing it is a hundred-to-one chance on a few finding a way out of it all and if these are not cared for all the winter work will be wasted. Where they come from is a mystery but facts are stubborn things and the fact is they come. Winter washes for vines are very numerous, most growers having some preparation that they think supercedes all others; they range from almost mud to neat insecticide. The former preparations are used with the idea of filling up the cracks and crevices so that the bug has no place for seclusion. My experience has shown that this is all right for a time but when the hot sun comes it will crack anyhow. Better to use some insecticide that you know will kill bug, using it very strong, painting the vine completely over with it two or three times, excepting the eyes. A fumigation with cyanide of potassium while the vines are dormant will also be an additional germ killer.

The border will be the next to receive attention. It is wise to remove all the loose bark, etc., before this is touched but if the rods are to have more than one washing it is not necessary to wait until this is completed before starting on the border. Young vineries may need additions, others are to have a thorough overhauling and some a top dressing only. Whatever it is have the soil on the dry side when working it. Mix in some coarse bone meal with the soil for top dressing.

Protecting the Soil From Freezing

Mention of having the soil in a workable condition in the foregoing note reminds us of the soil heaps not protected from frost. For ordinary potting purposes many places have a shed or some kind of a building where a sufficient quantity can be stored until spring where it will not freeze up or become wet. Where a quantity is needed for the fruit houses this is impossible so we have to protect it outside so that it can be used in the worst weather. There will be lots of leaves to remove from the lawns, etc., yet, and these will make a fine protection for the soil heaps. Cover the heap over to a sufficient depth to keep out frost and then cover the whole with long-straw manure to prevent the leaves from blowing away. If any kind of a temporary roof can be put on before any of the protective material it will help to keep the soil much dryer, a fact that cannot be over-estimated.

Asparagus and Rhubarb for Forcing

These are two of the most valued roots for forcing. They will start much easier if they have felt the effects of a little frost. The first batch or two can be lifted and placed in an exposed position with only enough loose straw around the roots to prevent them from drying. In this position they will feel the early frosts more than if they were in the soil at their natural depth. Look them over occasionally as the roots should not be allowed to become real dry.

Christmas Melons

To be right on time these melons should be set about now and kept going right along. Soon after the last flower has been fertilized give them some feed or they may get starved out; the soil they are growing in may be getting weaker and one of the secrets of getting good melons is to get them started good. Reduce the crop to two fruits to a plant. Warm them up well and with sun heat in the afternoons, thoroughly damping down at the time. Syringing must be kept up every bright morning or the plants will be eaten up with spider, but it will not be wise to practice it in the afternoons as the plants will not dry up by night time. Wet plants as night comes on are trouble seekers. If there are roots showing on the surface, top-dress them lightly with rich soil and keep this up while the fruit is swelling and the roots becoming through.

Ventilation on Windy Days

With the wind blowing a gale, and quite cold, it often becomes a problem to ventilate the houses properly, and yet avoid the danger of the wind doing harm. Where the houses are equipped with ventilators on both sides of the ridge, it simplifies matters somewhat, as the air can then be put on from the opposite side and the wind cannot blow into the houses as with the one-ventilator house. Plants that are hardy and have been growing in well ventilated houses will suffer very little from an occasional draft of air. Quite different, however, with the weak, overwatered and grown-too-warm plants. These will show signs of mildew at the slightest little change of temperature. It is a good idea at any rate to keep close watch on the thermometers, and see that there is not a too varied difference in the temperatures. The houses should never go below 70 in the daytime on a clear day, especially if they had been up to 78 or even 80 only a short time before. Keep a steam on the boiler, for clouds are very likely to appear, and there may be a snow squall. Where there is no steam better have a good fire in the boilers lying in readiness for any emergency. Also have the hot water slowly circulating, so that there will not be too long a time for it to get all around. As soon as the squall arrives do not shut the ventilators down tight, as is the custom in many places. Merely reduce the air down to a crack and then give the houses enough heat to keep up the necessary temperature. With hot water many will make a mistake and turn on every pipe in the house when they find the temperature dropping fast. This is very impractical, for it fills the boilers with very cold water, and thus delays the heat. A much better way is to leave the only pipes that were turned on and then stir up the boilers. Another fault of turning on all the pipes is that after the heat does get around the houses will usually run away up, and it will take a long time for them to come down. This variation of temperature is not going to do the plants any good, even though there is no visible harm done.

Fumigation

This should never be neglected. Keep right after the bugs and give them no chance to gain a foothold. It is much better to fumigate while it is raining, for then all the crevices that are in the roof and sides of the houses will be filled with water, and there will be very little if any chance for the fumes to escape. Fumigating on a dry and very windy day rarely has the desired effect, and it should be avoided if at all possible. Be sure to have the plants in good condition as to watering, for if the plants are dry the fumes may burn them here and there, or else burn the points out of the buds if not strong enough to do other harm. Buds without the points will not command the price that perfect flowers will, and it pays to be very careful. This applies to all the different forms of fumigation; it matters but little whether cyanide is used or tobacco in some form. Needless to say the houses should be fumigated at night, or the last thing before quitting at night. Then the temperature will vary but little, if the thermometer outside does not drop.

Syringing After Fumigating

Whenever it is possible to do so, arrange the program so that the plants will receive a good syringing directly after they have received a dose of smoke. This is true of spraying, too, and where spraying is resorted to altogether, it is well to spray right after the plants are syringed, for then there are countless numbers of insects that are open to attack, and if the spray can get them before they hide in the nooks and corners, it will be so many off the list. There is only one objection to spraying, and that is that it must positively be done regularly to keep the plants absolutely clean. If they are neglected only for a short time, it will take a great war to put the enemies down where they belong. With fumigation it is different, for it is not so difficult to reach all the corners with the smoke. Tobacco stems should not be used now that the plants are flowering. They are too strong, or rather contain too much waste matter which turns into noxious gases when ignited. It is much safer to use some of the tobacco and nicotine papers or extracts advertised elsewhere in the columns of HORTICULTURE.

Shaking the Plants After Syringing

After the plants have received their syringing, be sure to go over the benches very carefully, and shake the plants well, so that they will be sure to be dry by the time sundown comes. It is a very poor policy to have the plants wet at night, as they do not like it. There are many diseases that are likely to spring up if this is neglected, and the little time it takes to do it will be repaid well by the healthy growth that will result. Do not neglect the lime either, for this helps wonderfully in drying out the air around the plants.

Artemisia lactiflora

This plant which forms our cover illustration this week is a strong growing herbaceous perennial, perfectly hardy in Massachusetts, and now quite well known in gardens, being one of E. H. Wilson's early introductions from China. It grows four to five feet tall, with stems densely clothed with elegantly divided chrysanthemum-like foliage, each stem terminating in a wide pyramidal panicle two feet or more long, composed of hundreds of small, milk-white, delightfully fragrant flowers that are well adapted for use as cut flowers. This plant blooms in August and for best results should be planted in good garden soil in a situation where it will not suffer from drought. It is an excellent subject for the side of a pond or an ornamental stream, or for the wild garden. It is easily increased by divisions of the rootstock.

Cater to the public

It is interesting, and should be profitable to exhibition managers, to note the particular exhibits or classes of exhibits which receive the greatest amount of attention from the visiting public. It will be found that the classes regarded as the most interesting by the horticultural profession are not always the ones that the general public crowd about. Floral baskets, tables, mantels and decorative work for specific occasions, such as weddings, etc., are always a strong magnet for the throng. As to the various flowers which enter largely into promiscuous exhibitions it will appear almost invariably that the rose displays and orchid groups lead very decidedly in popular interest. In advertising a show or in making up press notices, such then are the points to emphasize and in preparing prize schedules for pay exhibitions, especially, it is well to keep them in mind and make as liberal provision as possible for those features that are likely to be the most potent attractions for the paying visitors.

Distribution

President Totty, in his address to the Chrysanthemum Society of America, makes a number of good suggestions worthy of general consideration. When he says that "the growing questions are being solved; the marketing questions are the ones that we have to solve," he states what is plainly evident to every observer of flower market conditions in practically all the large centres of production. The one great all-important problem for the flower trade now is how to get the product into the hands of consumers. Distribution as effected at the present time is little more than a farce. The flower trade has now reached such proportions and commercial importance, and the capital invested in it is so large, that methods which were serviceable twenty or even ten years ago are no longer adequate and the utter inefficiency of the outlet becomes more and more evident each year as the production increases. The solution of a problem so serious surely demands the best thought of our most capable business men.

A New York success

That was certainly a most remarkable demonstration for New York last Sunday afternoon when 97,000 people filed in to the Museum of Natural History within a space of less than four hours, attracted mainly by the exhibition of the New York Horticultural Society. The fact that the show was free does not seriously detract from the impressiveness of the great turnout which was largely composed of the most refined people of the city, for there was no music or sensational advertising or other special effort to draw a crowd. It showed plainly that there exists a widespread interest in flowers and a readiness to support floral exhibitions even in this gay metropolis surfeited day and night with diversions and amusement of every conceivable kind. No better evidence is needed to assure the friends of the New York Horticultural Society that a big horticultural building, rightly located in New York City, would be an investment second to none in its financial stability. Naturally, it should be the finest structure of its kind in this country, if not in the world. We hope it will not be longer deferred.

THE EXHIBITIONS

THE BOSTON SHOW.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society put up a very creditable exhibition, opening Oct. 31st and closing Nov. 2, and well worthy by reason of extent and quality, of a big public patronage, but for some unexplainable reason the attendance was quite disappointing, gate receipts showing a very decided falling off from last year's record. There was fine music each afternoon and evening. Sunday afternoon saw a fine crowd but the other days were bad. School children were admitted free on Saturday forenoon.

The park department of the City of Boston contributed a gigantic group of decorative plants that towered 25 feet and produced a fine effect. W. W. Edgar's 300 sq. ft. group of foliage and flowering plants which took 1st prize was also good as was one of foliage plants and chrysanthemums by Ed. MacMulkin and one by A. Leuthy. Mrs. J. L. Gardner, gard. W. Thatcher, had a stately 150 sq. ft. group which won 1st. Competition in orchids was very keen. The winning tables, in order of prizes, were by Mrs. Gardner, F. J. Dolansky and Mrs. C. G. Weld, but J. T. Butterworth also had a table full of gems. Dolansky had the best specimen cattleya, Mrs. Gardner the best cypripedium, Wm. Whitman the best kentias and arecas, and E. A. Clark, gard. Alex McKay, and A. F. Estabrook were 1st in the begonia classes.

Coming to the chrysanthemums it must be acknowledged that, in the main, they did not size up—either the trained plants or the cut blooms—with those shown here in former years. The prizes for the 300 ft. groups of chrysanthemums with palms and ferns were awarded to Thos. E. Proctor, gard. J. Marlborough; Walter Hunnewell, gard. T. D. Hatfield, and W. H. Elliott. N. F. Comley won 1st on specimen yellow and J. S. Bailey captured the rest. W. H. Elliott took everything on commercial size plants and his exhibits were excellent as to quality. Thos. E. Proctor won out on 6-stem plants. The Appleton silver medal for best chrysanthemum plant on exhibition was awarded to J. S. Bailey.

In the cutflower section H. E. Converse, gard. D. F. Roy, was 1st in the great class for 25 blooms, 25 varieties; Ernest Townsend 2nd. James Nicol won both the Mrs. Jerome Jones prizes as usual and also beat everything in sight with his vases of Miriam Hankey and Merza. E. A. Clark's Leslie Morrison being equally fine. The other cutflower classes were only sparsely filled, A. D. Jordan, H. E. Converse and E. K. Butler holding winning hands. The vegetable exhibits were excellent.

Among the special awards were the following: Thos. E. Proctor, certificate of merit for Adiantum Farleyense Gloriosa, a remarkable specimen; Mrs. J. L. Gardner, honorable mention for Begonia elatior; Breck-Robinson Co. honorable mention for group of hardy shrubs and trees; Norris F. Comley, silver medal for a very rich group of new hardy yellow chrysanthemum Terrace Hall arranged with oak foliage; Peter Fisher, certificate of merit for new carnation Alice; N. F. Comley, honorable mention for new cucumber Lexington (marked White Spine × Telephone); Penn, the Florist, bronze medal for bud bouquets, baskets, etc., tastefully displayed on purple velvet. Other worthy exhibits were a long table of fruiting shrubs from Arnold Arboretum; Gardenia Veitchii from F. J. Dolansky; white seedling carnation, No. 235, from Peter Fisher; seedling carnation Eleanor from H. A. Stevens; group of Erica regerminans ovata from Knight & Struck Co.; Yellow Prince carnation from S. J. Goddard; display of single chrysanthemums gracefully displayed in vases, the whole a model of neatness and fine labeling from F. P. Putnam; handsome specimen oncidiums from J. T. Butterworth.

THE PHILADELPHIA SHOW.

The exhibition is one of the best ever. The big chrysanthemum plants are fine and the cut flower section is beyond criticism. A grander display of foliage and ornamental plants has never been seen. Louis Burk's orchid display and "Stag-Horn Fern" specimen were leading features. Wm. Graham was all right on the decoration. E. A. Stroud surpassed himself in his Japanese garden display. This was so artistically designed and executed, that it caught the instant attention of all beholders. Its great merit was its simplicity and absence of overcrowding. The acme of all art is not to overdo. All the gardeners have always overcrowded their groups except John Dodds. John always explained that he could have done better if they had only given him a little more glass. That's a joke of course. One thing is sure: the real artist in arrangement is a very rare bird. Good growers are not nearly as rare as the artist in arrangement.

While we are on the subject we must not forget to comment once more on Philip Freud, of Michell's. He has the gift in the highest degree as was evidenced by the trade display he put up for his firm—very artistic and a business bringer.

The cut flower chrysanthemums are magnificent. Best we have ever seen. William Kleinheinz, who was at the New York and Madison shows last week—also Chas. H. Totty—say that they are far ahead of anything seen there. The coveted prize for the best fifty went to the Countess Eulalia, against four of the strongest exhibits ever put up.

The aquarium show proved a fine attraction. This was sent in by Frank Barrett. John Hobson's crotons, eight to fourteen feet high, were a great feature in the main hall. Dreer had the front of the stage with foliage plants; a choice well-grown collection, also splendid groups of Phoenix and Cocos in the foyer besides a great decoration of ferns and foliage plants.

An unique orchid exhibit was by W. Kleinheinz—a half oval pyramid twenty feet high and some twenty feet diameter at the base—one of the great features of the show, and while it got a first prize and a silver medal that was but the least the judges could do. Wm. Robertson as usual came well to the front in both foliage and flowering and groups and was showered with blue ribbons. Alphonse Pericat put up a good display of orchids.

A good vase of Jonkheer Mock rose was shown by Charles H. Totty, also a fine collection of hardy chrysanthemums. Cottage Gardens Co. sent in a great exhibit of their new white carnation Matchless. An unnamed white from Mr. Schultz, Charlotte, N. C., was exhibited by the Leo Niessen Co.

The Japanese garden by Edward A. Stroud exceeded all expectations and took all beholders by storm. It was a fine feature—original, effective and interesting and behind it, all in hidden and subdued form, fine business bringing potentiality—all the stronger because hidden.

Meehan's Nurseries had a pergola on the low stage of the lower hall covered with wild smilax on top and surrounded by a good collection of specimen evergreens and hardy chrysanthemums. Thomas Long, of course, carried all before him with his group of specimen rare ferns, each of them about as big as a haystack and all perfect.

Harry F. Betz, a new exhibitor, made a fine wall group, flanked at each side by pillars and open entrance well decorated, made up of foliage plants mostly, in the entrance hall. A fine display of hardy chrysanthemums were put up by Michell's Andalusia Nurseries. H. Waterer's showing of quality bulbs was very fine and of such size and perfection that they spoke for themselves. The arrangement was in charge of Anthony Waterer and A. Tulloch. John Nesbit deserves special mention for three fine vases of snapdragon. You don't see such flowers at this early season except from master hands. Of course they can mostly all do it in the spring.

We cannot give the prize list in detail, but there were many other exhibitors equally worthy of chronicle did space allow. Among them were: Joseph Hurley, Samuel Batchelor, John H. Dodds, David Aiken, Axel Lindroth, Wm. Comfort, Wm. Fowler, Walter Scott, etc., etc.

THE NEW YORK SHOW.

The Horticultural Society of New York has good reason to feel elated over the success of its exhibition held Oct. 31 to Nov. 4 at the American Museum of Natural History. It was an exceptionally good display in many respects and the public interest was astonishing, culminating on Sunday afternoon when 97,000 people are said to have passed through the doors between one and five o'clock. The show was free to everybody and it required a large force of attendants to keep the throng moving along so that the line of waiting thousands that extended part of the time away out across the street might be accommodated.

A new record was set with specimen bush plants. The struggle for supremacy was again between A. Lewisohn of Ardsley, represented by John Canning, superintendent, and F. Untermyer, represented by W. H. Waite and Mr. Canning was winner. His three specimens, Lady Lydia, white, R. F. Felton, yellow and Wells' Late Pink were the sensation of the show and it is not probable that their like will ever be seen again. The last named was the winner of the gold medal sweepstakes. These plants were each from 13 to 14 ft. across, 6 to 7 ft. high and each carrying 1600 to 1800 flowers of fine size and uniformity. The groups of decorative plants were superior to any we have seen anywhere this season in the beauty of the plants and the taste shown in arrangement. The orchids were simply superb and really a show in themselves. The gem of the lot was shown by Julius Roehrs Co., under a glass case—a beautiful plant of Laelio-Cattleya Oriole. The sweepstakes winner in the orchid classes was Mrs. H. Graves, gard, Edwin Thomas. Her group of yellow forms of Cypripedium insigne was lovely. Some idea of the many attractive exhibits not provided for in the regular schedule may be gleaned from the following list of special awards:

Special Prizes.

Julius Roehrs Co., grand collection of stove and greenhouse plants, not for competition, silver medal; Robert Scott & Son, new rose Killarney Brilliant, silver medal; Chas. H. Totty, vase of Lillian Doty chrysanthemum; Max Schling, chrysanthemum basket with autumn leaves, diploma; Clement Moore, gard J. P. Mossman, group of Cattleya hybrids, silver medal; J. A. Manda, group of Cattleya labiata.

S. Untermyer, trained specimen single chrysanthemum Sylvia Slade; vases long-stemmed chrysanthemums.

THE LENOX, MASS., SHOW.

As usual, the Lenox Horticultural Society's exhibition, which was held on October 23 and 24, was a thing of beauty and the attendance of visitors showed conclusively that the public was duly appreciative. Fred Heeremans again won first on plant group, a grand lot, well grown and well arranged. A. H. Wingett was once more invincible on ferns and palms. A. J. Loveless won, among other things, the Giraud Foster cup for orchids, the Totty prize for Ursula Griswold and the Wells-Pockett silver medal for Clara Banghart. S. Carlquist won the medal for most meritorious exhibit, with Begonia elatior. Ed. Jenkins captured the Breck cup with a superb arrangement of fine vegetables, also the Wells-Pockett gold medal for chrysanthemum Clara Banghart and the Elmer D. Smith prize for Elberon. Heeremans got the Dreer cup for greatest number of first prizes and the Fottler, Fiske, Rawson medal.

In the regular prize list, which was a long one, all the gardeners on the many well-known estates of this section were well represented. Chrysanthemum cut blooms were magnificent in every respect and roses and carnations were of high quality throughout.

NASSAU COUNTY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The ninth Annual Fall Show of this society was held at Pembroke Hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., on Oct. 28-29, and proved a great success. There were 55 classes and most of them were keenly contested. Chrysanthemums and foliage plants filled the main floor while the second floor was well taken up with vegetables, roses and carnations, etc. The dinner table decorations brought out the largest entry of any class in the show—ten in all. J. Adler, Glen Cove, was the winner for the second year in succession. The exhibit of vegetables staged by H. Gaut won the Stumpp & Walter cup, also the Gardeners' Chronicle prize for the most meritorious exhibit. The judges were W. H. Waite, Yonkers; Jas. Stuart, Mamaroneck; Jas. Bell, New York, and J. McNicol, Cedarhurst.

List of First Awards.

Percy Chubb, gard A. Mackenzie, won the following 1st prizes: C. A. Coffin prize for group of chrysanthemum plants; Weeber & Don cup for six plants; Society's cup for 18 blooms; Mrs. D. Burns' prize for 10 blooms; Titus & Bowen prize for 12 blooms; Vaughan's Seed Store prize for 12 singles; Burnett Bros.' prize for vegetables; Hitchings & Co. prize for group of foliage and flowering plants. Mrs. J. H. Ottley, gard. J. MacDonald, won the Lord & Burnham prize for standard chrysanthemum; H. E. Smith prize for 8 chrysanthemums, one variety; Mrs. Ottley's own prize for 12 blooms arranged for effect was awarded to Mr. MacDonald. E. W. Kimball, gard. J. McCarthy, won the Lord & Burnham prize for standard single; E. M. Underhill prize for bush single and Cottage Gardens prize for pink carnations. W. R. Harkness, gard. A. Fournier, won the M. Stapleton prize for bush double. J. T. Pratt, gard. G. Ferguson, won the H. W. Buckbell prize for 6 blooms, 6 varieties. C. H. Totty prize for Clara Banghart and for 6 singles. H. F. Matz prize for violets. Mrs. W. D. Guthrie, gard. W. Ross, took the F. B. Edmonds prize for largest bloom; R. Mesereole prize for American Beauty roses; A. T. Boddington prize for roses. M. F. Schiff, two Cottage Gardens prizes for carnations. J. R. Delamare, gard. R. Marshall, the Julius Roehrs prize for orchids.

The list of second and third prize winners is necessarily omitted for lack of room.

ELBERON SHOW.

The Elberon, N. J., Horticultural Society's fourth annual exhibition, held last week at the Casino was a really notable event. Chrysanthemums, roses, carnations, violets, palms, fruit, etc., were all shown in lavish array and the attendance of visitors was good. Among the big prize winners were Anthony Bauer of the Goldman estate, D. C. Kelley of the Greenhut estate and Geo. Masson of Frelinghuysen estate. Chas. H. Totty's cup went to Thos. Hambilton of the Weinpfheimer estate and the Hitchings Co. cup was awarded to Joseph Mills of the George Gould estate. George Masson 1st and A. Bauer 2nd was the record on dinner table decoration in one class and Chas. Hurn and Geo. Masson in the other, respectively. The Michell gold medal for largest number of points was awarded to A. Bauer. The Wells medals were won by B. Meyer, D. C. Kelley and A. Bauer.

THE MADISON (N. J.) SHOW.

This exhibition, always a good one, was this year fully up to its reputation. It took place on October 28 and 29. Among the things which attracted special attention from visitors was C. H. Totty's display of singles and semi-doubles which was recognized with a well-deserved gold medal. The vegetable display and orchid group by Wm. Duckham were also worthy of note and the orchids won a special silver medal.

The Prizes—Specials.

Robert Tyson won the Stumpp & Walter prize for 6 blooms; C. H. Totty, the E. D. Smith prize for "Madison" rose; P. D. Whitney, the Vaughan prize for Wm. Turner; L. A. Noe, the Pierson prize for Milady rose; Wm. Duckham, the Badgley, Riedel & Meyer prizes for roses and carnations; L. M. Noe estate, the Totty prize for Shawyer rose.

Chrysanthemums.

Thirty six flowers in 6 varieties: 1, Mrs. D. Willis James (supt. W. Duckham); 2, C. H. Totty.

Eighteen flowers in 6 varieties: 1, Otto H. Kahn (gard. Jas. Fraser), Morristown, N. J.; 2, G. E. Kissell (gard. Percy Witney), Morristown, N. J.

Twelve varieties in one vase: 1, Dr. D. H. McAlpin (gard. John Downing), Morris Plains, N. J.; 2, O. H. Kahn.

There were many other classes for cut blooms in which the winners of prizes were Dr. D. H. McAlpin, Mrs. H. McK. Twombly, Mrs. D. Willis James, C. W. Harkness (gard. E. Wilde), Otto Kahn, Mrs. Paul Moore, G. E. Kissel, Mrs. John Crosby Brown (gard. Peter Duff), C. H. Totty, Paul Moore (gard. Edward Davis), Glimpsewood Manor (gard. H. B. Vizer), and J. W. Johnson (gard. A. Fullerton). Fine specimen plants were contributed by Mrs. J. Crosby Brown, Dr. McAlpin, Mrs. H. McK. Twombly and Mrs. D. Willis James. In the group for effect Dr. McAlpin was 1st; Glimpsewood Manor, 2nd. C. H. Totty was winner in all the commercial classes.

There were 20 classes for roses. C. H. Totty was winner in the class for any undisseminated variety, with a lovely shell-pink sport from Mrs. Shawyer. Other winners in the rose section were L. A. Noe, L. M. Noe Estate, L. B. Coddington, C. A. Wyke (gard. W. O. Michael), J. J. Riker, Wagner Greenhouses, Harry O. May and C. W. Harkness.

In the carnation classes the winners were Dr. D. H. McAlpin, C. W. Harkness, H. O. May, Otto H. Kahn, Mrs. D. Willis James, Chas. Weber, G. F. Neipp. In violets, H. Coghill (gard. P. Penipede), C. W. Harkness, Mrs. J. Crosby Brown.

Vegetables.

Twelve distinct kinds of vegetables, tastefully arranged: 1 (Madison sp. prize $75), Mrs. D. Willis James; 2, Giraud Foster (supt. Edward Jenkins), Lenox, Mass.

Collections of 6 kinds of vegetables: 1, O. H. Kahn; 2, The Wayside (gard. David Francis), Convent, N. J.

There were many other vegetable classes, all well contested.

Certificates.

Certificate of merit to Carnation Gorgeous from Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass.; to mangel beet from Amos Cheesbro, Madison, N. J.; to Ponderosa lemons from L. A. Noe. A special prize was given to Mrs. F. W. Devel, Maplewood, for a scarlet dahlia; cultural certificates to L. M. Noe estate for lemons, and Samuel Randolphe for peanuts.

THE NEW BEDFORD, MASS., SHOW.

On Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 3 and 4, the New Bedford Horticultural Society put up a very creditable exhibition in the library building. The prizes were well competed for and worthily awarded. James Nicol, the invincible chrysanthemum grower of Quincy, took the silver medal for 12 best blooms, with Wm. Turner. A. E. Griffin, gard. for Galen L. Stone, got the bronze medal in same class. Mr. Griffin won the majority of the chrysanthemum prizes. On specimen plants, D. F. Roy, gard. for Col. H. E. Converse, was high-liner, and on hardy chrysanthemums D. Shea, gard. for Mrs. H. Hathaway, was first. The D. F. Roy cup for 12 blooms was won by Mr. Griffin. The T. J. Grey cup for 18 blooms and the Farquhar cup for 18 long stemmed blooms were captured by Mr. Roy.

An award of merit was given J. P. Rooney, gard. for Mrs. F. Grinnell, for chrysanthemum plant, a bronze medal to Peckham Floral Co. for group and the same to A. E. Griffin for begonias. Also a special award to James Garthley, superintendent of H. H. Rogers estate.

FIELD DAY OF WABAN ROSE CONSERVATORIES' EMPLOYEES.

Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., gave a field day on Saturday, September 6, to its employees and their families. The afternoon was spent in a ball game between the married men and single, various running and jumping games for the girls and ladies and the boys and men, for which prizes were given. Refreshments were served. This picture was taken on the lawn of Alexander Montgomery, the superintendent, who is seen in the middle of the picture with Mrs. Montgomery. The day was perfect and a very enjoyable time was had.

A draft for a substantial sum has been sent from Boston, Mass., as a gift from the young Scotch gardeners of the neighborhood towards the erection of a new horticultural hall in Edinburgh, Scotland.

NEWS NOTES.

New Concord, Ohio—H. H. Gier has purchased the greenhouses of J. C. McCutcheon.

New Bedford, Mass.—Wm. P. Pierce, for 37 years in business on Union street, has moved to 610 Pleasant street.

Xenia, Ohio—J. J. Lampert has retired from the wholesale flower business and turned over his greenhouses to his two sons, George and Harry. In the future, Mr. Lampert will devote all his time to his retail store on North King street.

Now is the time to use the Silkaline for tying up the plants. On the market for many years this Meyer specialty holds its own against all comers, however cheap they may be in first cost. Silkaline is genuine, full length, and fast color.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

Frank P. Gaul, formerly of Philadelphia, has assumed his duties as manager of the local store of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Company. For the past fourteen years Mr. Gaul has been connected with H. H. Battles, for whom he managed the Century Flower Shop for a number of years. Mr. Gaul is receiving the congratulations of the local trade, he being quite well-known to some of the florists here.

Considerable complaint is to be heard at the dullness of business in the retail end. It is said that the constant agitation in Congress is responsiible for this condition to quite an extent. Certainly the change of administration, meddling with the tariff, the income tax and the proposed new currency legislation, is not conducive to good times or business. Flowers of all varieties, with the possible exception of orchids, are very plentiful. The market is literally overcrowded with chrysanthemums. Roses are coming into the city in quantities larger than necessary to fill the demand. Carnations have improved in quality, although not in price.

Washington dealers refuse to further accept the street men as the legitimate outlet for the surplus stock of the growers and are considering various plans to eliminate at least a portion of the competition produced by these men. At a recent meeting of the store men, at which quite a number of prominent retailers were present or represented, this matter was carefully gone over and another meeting is to be held during the present week at which the plans will be perfected. A notice last week appeared in the daily papers, signed by the tax man, informing the various merchants, including the florists, that their licenses to do business had expired. This means, in the case of the florists, that they owe the government $15. In addition to this they must pay a personal tax upon their store at the rate of something like $15 per $1,000. The street men have perhaps a pedler's license but that is about all.

The store of Gude Bros., this week, presents a very beautiful appearance, that firm holding its annual chrysanthemum show. The three sections of the store, covering a space 30 feet by 180 feet, are a blaze of color. The front section has been turned into a garden with a fountain in the center and along the walls are huge white Grecian pillars on which have been placed palms and ferns. Directly behind the fountain is a Grecian arch also having palms and ferns and draped with smilax. Along the walls and ceiling smilax and oak leaves have been placed and in vases and wall pockets are hundreds of choice Appleton chrysanthemums. In that section usually devoted to make-up work have been placed all the varieties of chrysanthemums now being offered in the local market. As in previous years, this spacious store is thronged from morn until night by a crowd of flower lovers. In connection with the show, Gude Bros. have placed on exhibition the two silver loving cups and the six blue ribbons won by them at the Maryland State Fair last month.

CHICAGO NOTES.

E. Eisner, formerly in business on S. Halstead street, has opened a new store at 5448 S. Halstead street.

A Miller, of A. Henderson & Co., who has just returned from a two months' trip through the east, reported good business.

The Chicago Florists' Club held their ladies' night entertainment in the Gold Room of the La Salle Hotel, Thursday, Nov. 6. Reception, 7 to 8; dancing, 8 to 1. Everyone in the trade had an invitation.

The heavy shipping orders, especially to the south and southwest, last week, kept the local market well cleaned up. This week the supply of roses and chrysanthemums is considerably heavier but the market cleans up well.

Fire in the store of J. F. Kidwell & Bro., 3806 Wentworth avenue, at midnight, Sunday, Nov. 2, destroyed the store and broke some glass and injured the stock in some of the greenhouses adjoining the store. The store was covered by insurance but it will be some time before it can be fitted up for use. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Miss Semler, president of The Edleffsen-Leidiger Floral Co., and Mrs. Ida Baumgarten, of the Baumgarten Floral Co., both of Milwaukee, were Chicago visitors this week, on their way home from an extended business and pleasure trip through the east. They report a very pleasant and profitable trip. Other visitors: John Bauscher, Freeport, Ill.; J. J. Karins, representing H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia; Edw. Amerpohl, of Janesville Floral Co., Janesville, Wis.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

Ed. Dornheim is now with Berger Bros. in the sales department. This gentleman is favorably known to the cut flower trade and we wish him well in his new sphere.

M. Rice & Co. report that they have done the biggest October business in their history. All records broken. The only complaint now is too much overtime strain on the staff.

Abram L. and Mrs. Pennock left for Florida on October 30th. Samuel S. accompanied them as far as Washington. Both are well and hearty. Their millions of friends follow their goings and comings with loving interest and hope they'll live a thousand years yet.

The Lake Geneva Gardeners' and Foremen's Association will hold a chrysanthemum exhibition at Horticultural Hall, Lake Geneva, Wis., on November 11 and 12.

NEW YORK NOTES.

R. Vincent, Jr., and Mrs. Vincent have been visiting New York the past week.

J. Horace McFarland, of Harrisburg, Pa., sailed for a health trip to Europe, on the "Imperator," November 1.

H. A. Barnard, representative of Stuart Low & Co., Enfield, England, sailed from New York for home last Wednesday.

Charles Miesem, twelve years old, son of John Miesem, of Elmhurst, N. Y., is ill with rheumatism of the heart and the physicians hold out no hope for recovery.

Among the visitors in town last week were a party of gardeners from Lenox, Mass., including Thomas Page, Ed. Jenkins, Robert Spiers, A. J. Loveless and A. Carlquist.

C. H. Totty, L. J. Reuter, Wm. Duckham and Wm. Vert started on Monday night, November 3, from New York for Chicago, to attend the Chrysanthemum Society meeting there.

That sound of revelry last Wednesday evening after working hours had given place to innocent recreation in the wholesale flower district was only Phil. Kessler and his cronies celebrating Mr. Kessler's birthday. Phil. was the entertainer and he knows how.

George Golsner of College Point has a suit against the gas company which has been in court for some time. On trial last April the jury disagreed and a second trial last week resulted in another disagreement, the jury standing ten to two in favor of Mr. Golsner.

OBITUARY.

William F. Holtz.

William F. Holtz, for many years head of the wire shop at Kuehn's and late with Geo. Angermuller, St. Louis in the cutflower department, died on Wednesday, Oct. 29th, after a lingering illness, at the age of 38 years. Mr. Holtz was a widower and leaves two little girls. The funeral took place on Saturday, Nov. 1, with many in the trade in attendance who sent floral designs. He will be greatly missed by his late employer.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON

Market conditions here are regarded as fairly satisfactory in most respects. Violets are unusually scarce, due in the main to the soft weather of the past month, which has promoted a soft growth of leaves, but no flowers and on this one specialty the demand really exceeds the supply. Carnations, which for a time were on the short side, are now over-plentiful and seem to lag in the wholesalers' hands. Roses are of high quality all through the list, and already the Thanksgiving Day outlook is being contemplated, for roses are a prime requirement for that festival. In red roses, Cardinal shows up as a worthy leader at the present time. Lily of the valley is excellent as are also cattleyas. Prices on chrysanthemums are inclined downward, there being no active demand for them and the supply being heavy.

BUFFALO

It has been noticed in previous years, that a week or ten days before election, trade has been very quiet. It has been a little better this year. The early chrysanthemums have been plentiful enough and have gradually moved, but not at high prices as the quality has not been up to the standard. This may have been on account of the warm weather we had in September and the early part of October. The keeping quality has been poor and many complaints have been heard regarding this. The later varieties are now coming on—Balfour, Golden Age, White and Yellow Bonnaffon, White Cloud, Touset, etc. Roses are in heavy quantity—too many to command high prices. Carnations are not over plentiful but there are plenty of lily of the valley, orchids, violets, swainsona, lilies and pompon chrysanthemums. The latter has taken well in yellow and white. The receipts are heavy and a few dark days would help to check the supply and put the market in a more satisfactory condition, for which the wholesaler would be grateful.

CHICAGO

The market last week opened with an active demand and trade continued brisk up to the middle of the week. Towards the close of the week, however, the general trend of the market pointed to lower values pretty nearly all along the line. Saturday, which is generally a clean-up day, proved rather disappointing, with the result that quite a lot of stock was carried over, still there is no great surplus of any one thing, with the possible exception of 'mums in the smaller and inferior grades. Really first-class blooms are now too plenty and still command good prices but of the second and third grade stock prices keep dropping very materially. Roses begin to feel the effect of the 'mum season. The stocks offered are not unwieldy but the general demand is less active than formerly. Prices, more particularly in the longer stemmed grades, are inclining towards a lower level. Shorts are still in active demand. Carnations are coming in a little more plentiful though prices are ruling firm. Wholesale houses, however, are now able to fill orders in full except, perhaps, in certain special varieties. There is a better tone to the violet market, more especially in local grown singles; the quality of these is improving daily. New York doubles have also much improved in quality, but much more slowly. Lilies are dragging somewhat and the demand for lily of the valley is rather slack.

PHILADELPHIA

Bonnaffon chrysanthemums and cattleyas were the leading features here last week. These were both in choice form and good crop and easily led the procession. Gardenias are still rather scarce. The tone of the rose market improved a little, but there was no advance in quoted rates. Carnation quality better; also quantity, which latter fact holds prices from the hoped-for upward jump. The demand for violets is improving right along. Some very choice pink snapdragon are now to be seen around. The best white chrysanthemum at present is Razer; the best white, McNiece. On the whole, a fairly satisfactory week.

NEW YORK

Conditions in this market have not changed materially. There have been two or three days when a hopeful activity could be noticed, but, as a whole, it cannot be said that any marked improvement can be recorded over the somewhat depressing situation reported in the past few weeks. Nothing can be said in the way of criticism of the quality or the variety of material offered in the wholesale district. The slowness with which it is moved and the "bargain counter" atmosphere which seems to permeate all the trading deals is the unpalatable feature. Of business stability there is none thus far and we hardly expect to see it until the chrysanthemum avalanche lightens up and the weather takes on a wintry aspect. All special and ordinary stock is in abundance, except violets, which are quite scarce.

ST. LOUIS

The St. Louis market was quite strong last week; anything seasonable could be had and plenty of it, and from the way the retailers bought they must have had a busy week. Chrysanthemums are much in favor with the buyers. Other seasonable stock is coming in fine, the cooler weather having toned them up, and prices have gone up a little.

CO-OPERATIVE FLOWER MARKET DINNER.

The 10th annual meeting and banquet of the Boston Co-operative Flower Market was held at the Quincy House, Boston, on Saturday evening, Nov. 1, 150 attending. Pres. John McFarland presided, and others at the head table were Donald Carmichael, treasurer; William W. Tailby, secretary; Norris F. Comley, William H. Elliott, Robert Montgomery, Edward Wood, James Wheeler and L. E. Small, board of directors. There were several invited guests and felicitous speeches were made, complimenting the organization on its prosperity and usefulness.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF GARDENERS.

The third annual convention of the National Association of Gardeners, since its reorganization, was held in the American Museum of Natural History, New York City, on Monday afternoon, November 3d. President William H. Waite called the meeting to order at 2.30 o'clock and introduced Frank R. Pierson, the chairman of the executive committee of the Horticultural Society of New York, who welcomed the visiting gardeners to the convention.

The annual reports of the officers showed an unsurpassed growth within the organization during the past year and an excellent financial condition. The election of officers followed. William H. Waite of Yonkers, N. Y., was re-elected president; John W. Everitt of Glen Cove, N. Y., vice-president; M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J., re-elected secretary; and James Stuart of Mamaroneck, N. Y., re-elected treasurer. The following directors were re-elected to serve for one year; William Kleinheinz, Alexander Mackenzie, Peter Duff, William Duckham and John H. Dodds.

The following resolution on the death of Mr. Julius Roehrs was adopted:

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father has deemed it wise to remove from our midst, our fellow member and brother gardener, Julius Roehrs, and

Whereas, In the passing of our brother we have suffered the loss of a sincere friend and staunch supporter of all that stands for good in the profession of gardening, and

Recognizing that through his decease the world has lost one whose achievements in horticulture have been equalled by but few, and through whose accomplishments many have been benefited,

It is fitting therefore, that we, The National Association of Gardeners, assembled in annual convention, should give expression of our feelings over the loss of our esteemed fellow member, and that we spread upon the records of our proceedings the deep sorrow we feel, and that we convey our sympathy and condolence to his bereaved family.

Be it resolved, That we tender to the family of the deceased our deepest sympathy and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and that they be spread in full upon the minutes of the meeting.

F. R. PIERSON,
JAMES MacMACHAN,
M. C. EBEL,
Committee.

Dr. Thomas J. Headlee, State Entomologist of New Jersey Experimental Station at New Brunswick, addressed the meeting on, "The Relationship of the Gardener and the Entomologist," and his remarks were well received. After a general discussion on the various problems which confront the gardener, the meeting was adjourned to the Hotel Endicott where the annual banquet occurred.

At the banquet the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, the Horticultural Society of New York, having invited us to become its guest, at its annual flower show and to hold our convention in the American Museum of Natural History under its auspices and offering to secure for us ample accommodations for our business session, all of which we accepted.

Resolved, that the National Association of Gardeners tenders to the Horticultural Society of New York a hearty vote of thanks and appreciation

Resolved, That it tender to Mr. Frank R. Pierson, for his address of welcome; to Dr. Thomas J. Headlee, of New Brunswick, N. J., for his interesting paper at our convention; to Arthur Herrington, for his able services as toastmaster at our banquet, and to Charles H. Totty, for his contribution of flowers for table decorations, a hearty vote of thanks and appreciation.

PETER MURRAY,
ROBT. WILLIAMSON,
M. C. EBEL,
Committee on Final Resolutions.

The Banquet.

The meeting of the National Association of Gardeners in New York wound up in a glorious jubilation at the Hotel Endicott on Monday evening, November 3. The affair will long be a bright and happy spot in the memory of all who participated. The menu was all that could be wished and there was plenty of music by the orchestra, not to mention the vocal efforts singly or in chorus by the merry participants in this care-free and inspiring event.

President W. H. Waite presided. In a few neat remarks he introduced A. Herrington as toastmaster and the great success of the evening was due in no small degree to the able manner in which Mr. Herrington filled the position. The speakers included R. Vincent, Jr., of Baltimore; F. R. Pierson, as representing the New York Horticultural Society; W. J. Stewart of Boston, C. H. Totty, H. A. Bunyard, J. F. Johnston, President Brown of Nassau County Horticultural Society, Wm. Duckham, leading light; Jas. Dorward, J. Harrison Dick, J. Austin Shaw, A. Jenkins, August Grave, W. E. Maynard, Robt. Williams of Greenwich, Secretary Ebel, and Mr. Miller from Garrison. These were all called upon in the order named to contribute of their wit or wisdom to the general cause, and if applause was any criterion, it must be acknowledged that they all were right on their job.

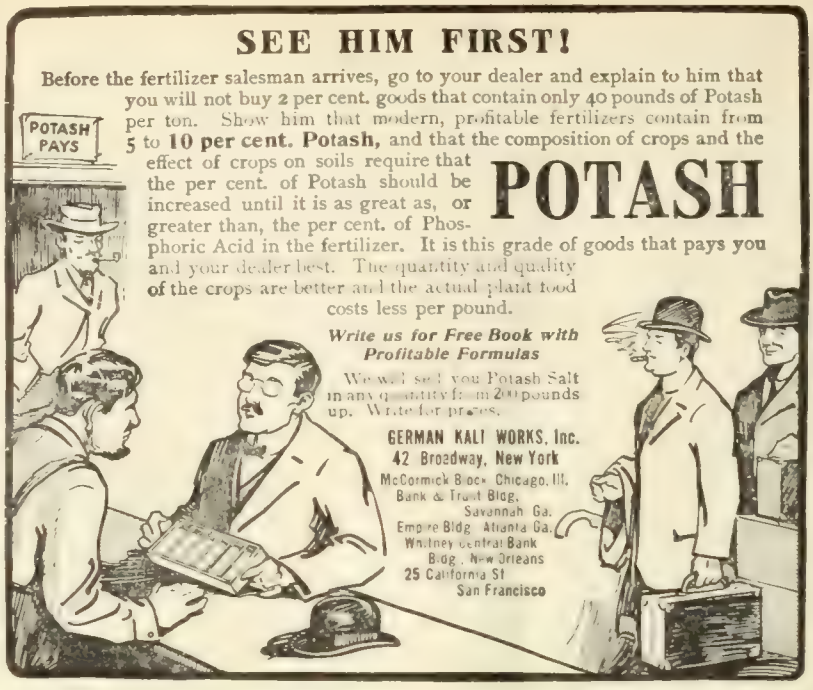
CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

President C. H. Totty's address at the meeting in Chicago, November 5, 1913.

Fellow Members of the Chrysanthemum Society of America:

We are once more assembled to do homage to our favorite flower, the chrysanthemum, and in the name of the Society I bid you welcome!

Just how far we have progressed since a year ago, I must leave the exhibition to say. The weather all along the eastern seaboard has been so wretched that many of our very finest flowers never reached maturity. Our brethren in the Central States are not bothered, I understand, by the night fogs. They have cause to thank a discriminating Providence for sparing them this particular misfortune, although perhaps they have other troubles which counterbalance it.



I think I may safely say that in my eighteen years of chrysanthemum growing in New Jersey, we have never had such a season as this, with temperature running as high as 75 at night and a heavy fog that rolls up and causes the foliage and flowers to simply reek with moisture. As a rule, damping is confined to flowers that have been heavily fed more or less, but this year for the first time in my experience that I saw flowers which had never been fed at all, damp off almost as badly as flowers that had been overfed.

It is, indeed, depressing to the grower of fancy stock to see his labors for the past six or seven months wiped out in a night, but this apparently is one of these conditions that the 'mum grower is unable to prevent or advise upon. I thought perhaps if the Society could get up a list of what would be non-damping kinds, it would be useful to the grower living in a foggy zone. Chrysolora, for instance, was the bright particular star of our collection as comparatively few of the flowers failed to mature in good shape. The question of loss in a season like this is a very serious one and none of our members, I am afraid, made any money so far this fall out of his product.

I feel that the demand for the chrysanthemum is just as large as it ever was or even larger, but this year in the large eastern wholesale markets the thousands, nay, millions of dahlia blooms brought in formed a staggering load for the chrysanthemum to overcome, since the dahlia can be and is sold so cheaply. We can, of course, have no argument with the dahlia grower, for he, like ourselves, is entitled to make what he can out of his business and enjoy the fruits of the earth, but it does seem as though the problem of distribution to the masses could be better accomplished in some way than by crowding the wholesale markets to such an extent that nothing can be sold at a remunerative figure. We have the varieties, we have the cultural skill, but in a season such as this last one we certainly have not had the market to dispose of the stock. If there is anyone who knows of a way to overcome this condition I would be glad to have him mention it or have the matter thrashed out in a meeting, by members present. Had Providence favored us with a good sharp frost or two the last days of September as very frequently happens, there would have been a different story to tell. One good result, however, of the beautiful fall has been the marvellous display of outdoor early flowering chrysanthemums. In our own case several acres that we planted have been a wonderful sight since the last week in September and even today are very, very fine in spite of the drenching rains and heavy fogs.

Can the market for chrysanthemum blooms be increased? Personally, I think it can by growers broadening out their list and not confining themselves to the eternal Ivory, Bonnaffon, and one or two other kinds. Where one is shipping to a wholesale market the varieties that will ship well must be a first consideration and, of course, take first precedence, but it will be noted in an exhibition that ladies rave over the large-flowered Japanese varieties, the singles and any other odd type that comes up. This is a point for the observer to make his deduction from. The buyer would willingly take something different if given a chance and while the shipper to a wholesale market is always handicapped by the apathy of the retailer, who only wants a few staple varieties and large quantities of them, still the grower, of whom there are thousands in America, who retails his own products, should certainly enlarge his list of varieties. He is enabled to do this because the problem of packing and shipping is not of such consequence to him as it is to a grower for the wholesale market. The public mind is very fickle and the cry is always for something a little different, something new, and the grower who has something different for his customers every year, can always succeed in holding them and make good money.

How can we increase our membership? This is a yearly question at this time and the answer is still somewhat problematic. The kindred societies such as the Rose and Carnation Societies have something of interest

FALL SPRAYING

Fruit trees, ornamental trees, evergreens, and all hardy stock susceptible to scale and other insects should be thoroughly sprayed before freezing weather sets in.

SCALINE will cleanse your trees and shrubs of San Jose, Oyster Shell and other hard scale, red spider, larvae of the aphis, grub of the locust borer, and other insect pests which secrete themselves in the crevices of the bark during the dormant season.

SCALINE is composed of a high grade of petroleum and the properties of the well known fungicide, FUNGINE; mixes readily without agitation; is used at a strength of one part to twenty parts water; containing no sediment can be applied through the finest spray nozzle, and requires no drenching of the plants, but simply misting them, to get effective results.

THE BRIGHAM GREENHOUSES.

The accompanying illustration shows the tidy greenhouse establishment of Frank P. Brigham, Belvidere., Ill. All the houses are uniformly 225 ft. in length. The stock grown consists of roses, carnations, snapdragon and lilies of exceptional quality. Visitors are always welcome here.

for their members at almost any season of the year. The Chrysanthemum Society may be said to live and move and have its being only during the month of November and just about the time a prospective member is getting enthused the season is over and his interest has again waned for another year. The Society is doing excellent work, weeding out inferior varieties and acting as a buffer between such inferior kinds and the grower. It is entitled to the support of every chrysanthemum grower in the country on this ground alone. Again the large number of enthusiasts who grow chrysanthemums outdoors without any glass protection whatever, should form a goodly host for any society, but apparently we have not yet found a way to reach them. I have mentioned this particular subject before because I feel quite strongly in favor of having them as members, realizing as I do that they can never be accused of having a direct financial interest in the development of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, and are working solely and simply for the love of their favorite flower. I cannot believe that the charge of $2.00 per year for dues is the reason for their not joining us. Any suggestions that could be forwarded for reaching these people would, I am sure, be welcome by the officers of this Society.

Whatever progress has been made by the C. S. A. is due entirely to the efforts of our conscientious Secretary, C. W. Johnson, who has worked early and late in the interest of the Society and who deserves praise for the results he has accomplished for it.

S. A. F. STATE VICE PRESIDENTS.

"In order to enable the coming administration to select the best men for the offices of vice-president," a circular letter signed by President Farquhar and President-elect Wirth, of the S. A. F. has been sent to S. A. F. members asking them to give their kind assistance by sending to the President-elect the names of such men as, to the best of their knowledge, they believe will fill the position with credit to their state, and in the interest of their Commonwealth and the National Society. Such suggestions should be in the hands of the President-elect not later than December 1st. 1913.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The annual meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for the election of officers for the ensuing year, etc., will be held.

The thirty-ninth annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen will be held at Cleveland, Ohio, June 24-26, 1914. The Hollenden Hotel will be headquarters.

JOHN HALL, Secretary.

The landscape gardening class of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston had a field day at Hyde Park, Mass., on invitation of M. B. Barrett, on Sunday, October 5. The day was spent in field practice and Mr. Barrett furnished bountiful refreshments.

A special exhibition of fruits will be held under the auspices of the Mass. Horticultural Society and Horticultural Hall, Boston, Wednesday to Sunday, November 12 to 16 inclusive.

The New England Fruit Show, Inc., will hold its Third Biennial Exhibition at the same time and place.

At the October meeing of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore, Leo Niessen, of Philadelphia, gave an interesting address on "Publicity." A committee consisting of G. O. Brown, N. F. Flitton, I. H. Moss, J. J. Perry and Jas. Hamilton was appointed to solicit subscriptions for a publicity fund. The fall exhibition will be held November 18-22, inclusive.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club on Monday evening, Nov. 10, will be Ladies' Night. An elaborate spread has been arranged for, also a fine vaudeville entertainment, and plenty of fun is promised. Eleven new names are proposed for club membership, which shows that the organization is making rapid progress under the management of President Siebrecht.

The Horticultural Club of Boston had, as its guests at the November meeting, Leonard Barron, editor of the Garden Magazine, New York, and Election Commissioner Martin of Boston. Mr. Barron gave a thoughtful and thought-inspiring address on "Horticultural Journalism," which was freely debated. A cablegram of good wishes was received from President Farquhar, who is now in Germany.

The new pink carnation Philadelphia made its debut here, two vases of superb blooms having come on from Detroit in excellent shape and the variety was greatly admired for its vigor and keeping qualities.

PERSONAL.

Harry G. Morton, formerly at R. M. Saltonstall's, Chestnut Hill, Mass., is now head gardener at Mrs. Plant's, Cohasset, Mass.

Charles H. Totty was the Republican candidate for mayor of Madison, N. J. We have not yet heard how the tables turned and so cannot yet extend congratulations or proffer sympathy, but "we hope for the best."

St. Louis visitors: J. J. Karins, representing H. A. Dreer, Phila.; M. La Vine, New York.

Boston visitors: F. J. Keller and Mrs. Keller, Rochester, N. Y.; D. Lumsden Durham, N. H.; W. A. Kennedy, representing C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; J. H. Snyder, Buzzard's Bay, Mass:; Leonard Barron, Garden City, N. Y.

Big Eastern Contractors Let Their Greenhouse Contracts to L & B

THE contracting firm of Stone and Webster of Boston, are credited as being one of the largest building firms in the East.

The fact that both heads of this concern gave Lord & Burnham the contracts for building their greenhouses is an endorsement of our work that means much.

It is evidence that they look upon the constructing of greenhouses as a high order of building, requiring both much experience and a particular training.

When you come to consider building a greenhouse — consider the considerations of these big contractors.

For your further convincement, let us send you our catalog. Or better yet, set a day for one of us to come and talk things over with you.

Six Superb New "Spencer" Sweet Peas

Selected Seed of Our Own Growing at Floradale Farm—The Home of Sweet Peas

King White This already famous variety marks an epoch in the Sweet Pea world. It is in a class by itself, as much superior to all other existing whites today as was Dorothy Eckford when first offered in 1903, or Burpee's White Spencer in 1908. Too much cannot be said in praise of this unique new white Spencer. It has all the first-class qualities which go to form Sweet Pea perfection. It is remarkable for the "glistening immaculate purity of the whiteness" and the perfect finish of the flower. While of truly gigantic proportions the flowers are most exquisitely finished in every detail. King White has such marvelous substance, which might almost be termed "leathery," that it is entirely free from the objectionable reflexing habit so generally found in the standard of other whites. The grand flowers are borne almost invariably in "fours" upon stout stems of great length. The bold, widely expanded standard is waved exquisitely, while the wings, also well waved, are beautifully placed. The plants are exceptionally vigorous in growth with distinctive rich green foliage, and wonderfully profuse in bloom for a long season. KING WHITE is the one white for both exhibitors and market growers, while it is indispensable in every up-to-date amateur's collection. King White received an Award of Merit from The National Sweet Pea Society of England, July, 1912, after having been grown in their trials; also Award of Merit by The Royal Horticultural Society of England, July, 1913; Certificate of Merit by The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, June 26, 1913; and Bronze Medal from The North Lonsdale Rose Society, Ulverston, England, July, 1913.

In sealed packets containing fifteen seeds each. Per pkt., 15 cts.; $1.00 per dozen pkts; $7.00 per 100 pkts. In lots of 500 pkts. or more, $6.25 per 100 pkts. (Cable word, Rex.)

In sealed packets containing thirty seeds each: Per pkt., 25 cts.; $2.00 per dozen pkts.; $13.75 per 100 pkts. In lots of 500 pkts. or more, $12.50 per 100 pkts. (Cable word, King.)

KING WHITE.—Natural Size.

Illuminator It is almost impossible to adequately describe or paint the beauty and surpassing grace of this unique novelty. In color it is perfectly distinct from all other varieties and has been pronounced the most glorious Sweet Pea ever seen. It might be described as a rich glowing cerise-salmon, with an indication of bright orange suffusion which marvelously scintillates and glistens under bright sunlight; under artificial light the flowers appear to be a glowing orange-scarlet. Uniformly of large size and great substance. The flowers are most perfectly formed and well placed on long stout stems, frequently in "fours." Of vigorous growth, the vines carry a rich profusion of bloom. We were awarded a Certificate of Merit for Illuminator both by the American Sweet Pea Society, at the great Boston Show, July, 1913, and The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, June 26, 1913.

In sealed packets containing twelve seeds each: Per pkt., 15 cts.; $1.00 per dozen pkts.; $7.00 per 100 pkts. In lots of 500 pkts. or more, $6.25 per 100 pkts. (Cable word, Shining.)

In sealed packets containing twenty-five seeds each: Per pkt., 25 cts.; $2.00 per dozen pkts.; $13.75 per 100 pkts. In lots of 500 pkts. or more, $12.50 per 100 pkts. (Cable word, Illuminator.)

Charm As the name implies, this novelty is indeed a "charming" variety of delicate and exquisite color, such as we have every confidence in introducing to our friends. It was awarded a Certificate of Merit by the American Sweet Pea Society in 1911. The flowers are of fair size and most of the strong stiff stems bear four flowers each. One of the finest Spencer type, they are througout a glistening pure snow-white, suffused equally through standard and wings with delicate flesh or blush-pink. It comes very true and is a most beautiful variety for bunching.

Wholesale: Per oz., 50 cts.; per lb., $6.00.

Decorator This may be described briefly as an ennobled "Rose du Barri" greatly increased in size and brought to true Spencer type. Of vigorous growth the vines flower profusely, bearing on long stems three and frequently four very large and beautifully waved flowers. Whether seen on the plant or used for house and table decorations (especially under artificial light) its merits are immediately recognized. The color is rich rose overlaid with terra-cotta, intensifying to deep bright orange at base of wings. Awarded Certificate of Merit by the National Sweet Pea Society of England and the Elberon Horticultural Society, at Asbury Park, New Jersey, 1912.

Wholesale: Per oz., 50 cts.; per lb., $6.00.

Orchid Never before have we seen a lavender with all the qualities of Orchid; the flowers are softer in tone and more refined in contour. The color is rich deep lavender throughout, slightly suffused pink on both standard and wings. The flowers are practically of a self color suggesting the rich tone found only in the Cattleya family of orchids. The flowers are of extra large size, always borne three and four (with plenty of fours) on long stiff stems. The plants are most vigorous in growth and profuse flowering. While so profuse flowering most of the flowers are dropped without producing any seed-pods, hence the seed is very scarce.

Wholesale: Per oz., $1.00; per lb., $12.00.

Margaret Atlee The flowers are of largest size, exquisitely waved, and borne profusely in fours upon long, strong stems. The color is rich glowing pink on cream, suffused with salmon; there is a distinct blotch of primrose at the base of the standard, thus lightening up the flower most wonderfully. The color becomes slightly deeper towards the edge of the standard, while the wings are a pleasing shade of rosy-salmon. Margaret Atlee gives many duplex, or double, flowers and has been greatly admired both in America and England. We were awarded a Certificate of Merit for this lovely novelty by the American Sweet Pea Society, June 29, 1911, although we are only now first able to offer the seed.

Wholesale: Per oz., $1.25; per lb., $18.00.

IMPORTANT NOTICE. ☛ We can accept no further wholesale orders for either EMPRESS EUGENIE or WEDGEWOOD of which we have to report already "SOLD OUT."

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine

Now is a good time to start propagation of Begonia de Lorraine and Cincinnati. Stock for next year must spring from early struck leaf cuttings. There can be no doubt as to the superiority of early started plants from leaf-cuttings over those propagated later by rooting side shoots in the usual way, though the latter have their uses and are probably as valuable as anything expressly raised for a holiday trade. Well-matured leaves, but still of a healthy, spotless green, are taken from the most vigorous plants in such a manner as to cause no disfigurement. Cutting away the stubby end of the leaf stalk, about half an inch below the leaf is all the trimming needed. This lower end when inserted in the sand will just bring the base of the leaf in close contact with the surface of the sand bed. A steady heat of not less than 70 degrees in the sand with a few degrees lower overhead, a somewhat close and moderately humid atmosphere, frequent sprinkling and the exclusion of bright sunshine by portable shades, insure a good start and healthy root formation.

Allamandas

Plants that you have been growing on during the summer should now be given a place where they can ripen up their wood. Reduce the water supply gradually until the wood becomes well ripened up. This is one particular essential in their culture. Water may be withheld to the point of flagging as long as you do not allow the wood to shrivel, which would work a great injury if allowed to happen. Give these plants a place in some house that stands at about 50 degrees at night. In order to perfect wood that will flower well give them a place where they can receive all the sunshine possible. See that they have plenty of ventilation whenever possible, as this goes hand in hand with reduced watering and temperature in bringing allamandas to the right condition.

Freesias

Freesias require a nice moist state at the roots. To get them in flower for the holidays give them a shelf or bench in a house where a night temperature of 55 degrees is maintained. Give ventilation on all favorable occasions but never allow cold drafts. They appreciate doses of liquid manure if not too strong, which would cause a browning on the ends of the leaves. They are also easily injured by fumigation but will stand tobacco papers without injury. Late batches can be held in a cold house or even in frames for some time. Freesias are excellent for design work and those with a local trade can scarcely afford to be without them.

Rhododendrons

These plants are of special value for forcing during Easter time. When received they can be placed in soil in some root house or cool pit and the roots kept moderately moist. When being potted they want a very porous soil, such as two parts of fibrous loam, one part of leaf mold and about half this quantity of sand. Keep them in a cool place, anywhere just above freezing. In February they can be brought into a temperature of about 50 degrees at night which can be increased to about 62 degrees at night. At this stage they like a moist atmosphere and should be freely syringed, but must be removed to a more airy and a cooler house when their flowers begin to open. Be sure when ordering that you get the varieties that are suitable for forcing and that are well set with buds.

Paper Whites and Roman Hyacinths

I have often mentioned the fact that paper white narcissi should be brought in early and given lots of time in a cool house. The same can be said of Roman hyacinths, although the romans will endure a much higher temperature without harm. I have seen paper whites brought in and put down by the side of the path in a warm house and grow all to leaves. This is entirely wrong. This early, cheap bulb is most useful at the holidays, and the way to make it so is to bring in the flats in the first half of November and put them on the bench in the full light, in a house where it is about 50 degrees at night. Roman hyacinths should be given 60 degrees at night and allowed six weeks to come into flower, but give them also full light. Pay a little more attention to it, provide a light, sunny, cool house where the flowers can develop slowly. If you have plants which seem a little forward a temperature of about 40 degrees and enough shade to keep the sun away will keep the stock at a standstill.

Protecting the Hardy Border

Clear all beds and borders of hardy perennials of any dead stalks, cutting them down to the ground. After this hoe and clear the ground from all manner of weeds. The winter covering of the perennial border is an important operation, and on it depends much of the future success. This protection should not be given as long as the weather continues mild. All perennials should be allowed to become inured to the present increasing cold. When the ground has formed a nice crust of frost they can be covered with some coarse manure to the depth of from 4 to 6 inches, all over.

Mr Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Care of Adiantums; Cyclamen; Lily of the Valley; Orchids; Pot Roses for Easter; Preparations for the Holidays.

Pruning Peach Trees

The pruning of peach and nectarine trees differs vastly from that of the vine. The chief reason is that the vine fruits on the wood that it makes the same year while the peach or nectarine fruits next year on the wood that has been made this year, hence the motive for retaining as much of last year's wood as possible at the time of pruning. The flower buds will be visible on all wood so, where there is a doubt as to which is the best piece to leave, select that having the most flowers. The maximum amount of flowers for the coming season can be gauged on peach and nectarine trees by the presence of the flower buds which are formed during the fall, ninety-five per cent of which should produce a perfect flower. Where disbudding was correctly done in the spring, and summer pruning was also attended to, the winter pruning will be very simple. These two operations just mentioned are the key note to well-trained peach trees. Disbudding leaves just the required number of growths in the right position to cover the trellis properly and the summer pruning removes most of the useless wood after the fruit has been gathered. At the time of disbudding I recommended leaving growths on the top side of the wood only in order to facilitate pruning. Where this is practiced the old wood on the underneath side is cut away and the new drawn down a little to take its place. This will never leave any very large spaces to be filled up as is the case when the growths are left on both sides, for when a piece of old wood is taken out there is sure to be a V shaped space which requires some growths to be drawn up and others to be drawn down to fill it in. Prune all trees before a tie has been cut so that the position of all the wood can be seen and the right space allotted to those which are to be left. It is a mistake to have a center to a fan-trained tree as the center ought to be left open thus providing space for the new wood to grow. Do not be afraid of discarding old wood; the summer pruning will not have removed all of it and an overcrowded tree will never be satisfactory. Let each piece of wood have a space of three to four inches.

Protect Strawberries

Strawberries will have been standing in their summer quarters so long as no severe weather was in sight, but the recent cold wave makes it necessary to protect them from the frosts or the pots will be broken with the expansion of the soil. A deep frame makes an ideal place to plunge them as they are away from the glass and the frost cannot get at them so easily. Use leaves that are dry and pack them around the pots tightly, placing the pots close together. See that an extra large label is placed in the right position so that the varieties are easily distinguished later on. Do not coddle the plants in any way. Probably the sash will be enough protection for a while and later on when it is necessary to add other protection do not leave it on when the weather is mild. A friend of mine tells me better fruit is obtained by not allowing the soil to become frozen at all as it injures the roots. Whether this is a fact or not I cannot say but I hand it on to the readers to try it out. Usually we have not cared about the soil freezing a little so long as it was not sufficient to break the pots.

Late Grapes—Hanging

Ripe grapes will be hanging in the late vinery now and may be allowed to remain there until the year end. Keep the house dry and airy through the clear weather with a night temperature of about 45 degrees, which, however, should not be forced to a degree. During any dull or wet weather keep at least one of the heating pipes warm and in severe weather have all the pipes warm—not hot—and should the temperature be a few degrees low when the pipes are so, do not trouble; it is better to have it so, as hot fire heat will shrivel berries quicker than anything else. As the bunches are cut remove a few from each vine which will have the same effect as taking a load off. It will mean using some of the latest varieties before the earlier ones are finished but if, say, two are cut from each one first it will help some. Such varieties as Lady Hutt, Gros Colman, Gros Guillaume (Barbarossa) and Black Alicante should keep well up to Christmas.

Vine Eyes for Propagating

If it is intended to propagate any vines next spring select some of the best laterals at the time of pruning of the varieties that are needed and have them correctly labeled and heeled in. Underneath a bench in a cool house will suit them, but if there is any danger of its getting warm before they are wanted put them outside or in a cold frame and protect them.

Setting Tomatoes

At times during the winter months trouble is experienced in setting tomatoes. This can usually be traced to excessive moisture in the house or lack of air. Unless it is very cold or windy never have the house closed up tightly; that crack of air works wonders. When watering has to be done do it as soon as the house gets nicely up to the day temperature and when possible select a fine clear day to do it. With the right atmosphere and temperature all that should be necessary is to give the plants a sharp shake at noon to distribute the pollen. Real bad cases can have the flowers fertilized with a piece of fur.

Grading for New Houses

If you are planning to build a new house or two next spring, and the ground where it is to be built is not at all level, do not wait until building time to do the necessary grading. We have just heard from one of our readers, who has had a good deal of trouble with his house settling. No matter how well the earth in the places filled may be packed, it cannot be firmed down as well as nature would do it. Therefore it is well to do your grading at once, and let the snow, rain and frost each have a chance to settle the ground down to where it should be. If this can be done two years in advance so much the better, for then the soil will be firmed almost as good as nature's own land. It may not seem possible that this settling of soil would in any way bother the houses, yet it does, and will have them all out of shape by the time five years have passed. Generally houses built now are well built, so that they will still be here fifty years from now. Picture your houses then if they are built on unsettled ground. The only way to do in such cases is to run concrete posts from the grade down into the solid earth underneath, and then let the soil settle all that it wants to for the houses will be safe.

Mildew

Many growers who have never been troubled with mildew at one place find that it is almost uncontrollable at another or new location. The fact is that every new location has new problems of its own. The air may be different, the wind may blow around some tall buildings or trees and right into the houses. The only way to do is to find out all these things of the new place and then run things accordingly, and not the same way as another place where conditions were altogether different. To ascertain the currents of air in a house take an ordinary pair of bellows filled with lime and blow some of it here and there and then watch the dust. This will show you things you would doubt if you were told, and after you know the way the air travels you can place your heat so as to counteract or change the currents of cold air, and have it come in, in such a way that the chill will be taken from it before it touches too many of the plants. Again the pipes doing service one way, will not answer very well when the wind changes.

Keeping the Plants Resistant

Keeping the plants in perfect health will be a great help to keeping mildew where it belongs, for the poor weak, overfed and overwatered plants are always sure to get it first. Keep the plants hardy, and it will be much easier to defend them against diseases, for they will do a good deal of the fighting themselves. A dressing of lime now and then will help, but too much of it is not good either.

Watering in Cold Wet Weather

Watering during cloudy weather should be avoided as much as possible, but to have the plants too dry would be equally harmful. If the weather shows no signs of clearing, and the plants are in need of water, a good watering should be given. Then allow the ventilators to remain opened a little, and try to give the house a little heat to dry off the excessive moisture and carry it out by the way of the ventilators. At sundown a little air slacked lime blown underneath the plants will help to dry out the air for the night and thus help keep away mildew spores that may be in the house asleep, for they do not grow unless conditions are ideal for their growth.

Lime and Sulphur

Where no steam is used for heating, and no other remedy is available a little sulphur mixed with lime about 1 to 2 and blown over the plants will prevent the mildew from spreading. We have found that a good spray of Fungine will do away with all traces of mildew, and if applied in time will kill it so that many leaves will be saved. This fact is mentioned only for the good of the growers, and not to advertise the article, for this is no place for advertisements. We have so far heard of nothing that can compare with Fungine and that is why no other preparation is mentioned. There is one thing, however, that goes against it, and it is that it will stain white paint wherever it comes into contact with it. This stain, however, is not permanent and will disappear in a short time. This is mentioned for the benefit of our friends in the private conservatories where all has to be kept polished all the time.

In blowing the lime and sulphur over the plants it is well to be careful not to let the powder get over the blooms or over buds just beginning to show color. This would bleach them more or less, and thus discolored would not bring the same price that good stock would.

Lining the Boxes

The warm weather that still exists should not be trusted too much and at least two thicknesses of newspaper should be used to line all the boxes used for shipping. Frost bitten flowers are not in demand, and after this happens once or twice shippers will remember it. Paper is cheaper than roses, any time.

The Winter's Coal

Strange to say that the middle of November finds many coal bins empty, and growers just beginning to think of ordering their coal. This is very poor business, and we would have little sympathy for the man who failed to get his supply of fuel on time, should an early blizzard and severe weather strike us unexpected. Let us hope it shall not be, but one cannot tell when winter will set in, and there is nothing like being well prepared. The man who is ready for any emergency is the one who will win out.

Looking ahead

Our news notes from Minneapolis inform our readers that Theodore Wirth, assiduous and [illegible], has already under way a plan for getting together a goodly representation from Minnesota to attend the S. A. F. Convention at Boston next August. Mr. Wirth's scheme whereby the necessary funds may be accumulated for each individual without being burdensome, will perhaps be found worthy of imitation by the florists of other places so remote from Boston as to make the expense of the convention trip a formidable obstacle. All will be pleased to learn that the strenuous president-elect of the national society has recovered from his painful accident and is in the harness again, lively as ever.

The Cleveland blizzard

We fear that the weather man has administered a cruel blow to the Cleveland Flower Show, for which so extensive preparation and generous provision had been made. It is difficult to believe, as Boston saunters along under a cloudless sky, that the telegraphic reports of wild gales and drifting snow, and suffering and death to the west and south of us can possibly be true. Boston will undoubtedly get her share before the winter has gone, but should be thankful that she has at least escaped this record-breaker for November. That it should hit our Cleveland friends just as flower show arrangements are being completed is a grievous misfortune at best. We sincerely hope it will turn out less so than seems likely at this time.

Horticulture's way

Ever since the issuance of its first number, now nearly nine years since, HORTICULTURE has made an annual gain in circulation, but it remained for the present year to reach the high record for new subscribers. This has been uniformly noticeable ever since the beginning of the year and frequently a new subscription is accompanied by an appreciative word for the quality of the reading matter presented from week to week. The character of HORTICULTURE's reading contents rather than its quantity, has been our first concern always. Old-time readers of this paper need no reminder of the principles on which it has based and will continue to base its appeal for support and the respect and confidence of the horticultural profession. But we hope the new readers who may peruse this note will take time to look further into the pages that precede and follow and consider what it means to the worker, striving to advance, to have at his disposal every week such a compendium of practical knowledge and helpful information as he will find there. HORTICULTURE has never entered the fight for merely big circulation at any sacrifice, but we shall be glad to see a continuance of the sort of growth which the past year has given us and would express the hope that those who like the kind of service HORTICULTURE is rendering will do whatever they can to add to the number of our readers with the coming of the new year. We offer no premiums or other inducement except full value for the money in useful reading matter and the advertisements of the most trustworthy "live-wire" houses in all departments of the trade.

Up-to-the-Minute Publicity

The introduction of a new flower or exploiting of any special line of plants as now conducted is no small undertaking. For instance we find scarcely a show this fall, from New England on the east to Chicago on the west, where the name of C. H. Totty does not appear as an exhibitor of new types of semi-double and single chrysanthemums. The expense of packing, transportation, staging, special prizes, etc., not to mention the large quantity of material required to put up a noticeable exhibit in each case, all count up. Add the cost of newspaper advertising, cataloguing, etc., and it is not difficult to see why so few raisers of new things nowadays undertake to introduce their own productions as formerly. Mr. Totty is not the only one who is thus enterprising, but these present remarks are prompted by the display staged by Mr. Totty in his home town which we have given the position on our front cover this week in compliment to the prowess and zeal so well displayed in his country-wide campaign.

THE EXHIBITIONS

THE CHICAGO SHOW.

Another Chrysanthemum Exhibit has come and gone, this one running nearly twice its scheduled time and making a record for showing some of the finest blooms, of the big fall favorites, ever seen in Chicago. Not one of the largest, but one of the best—this describes the affair in a sentence. The exhibit, which was given by the Chrysanthemum Society of America in conjunction with the Horticultural Society of Chicago and Chicago Florists' Club, was held in Blackstone Hall, Art Institute, and opened the afternoon of November 5th. When the closing day came, November 7th, the blooms were in such perfect condition that the management extended the time to November 9th and special displays of roses were added by Peter Reinberg and Bassett & Washburn, and the Chicago Carnation Company who showed vases of their Peerless Pink, Gloriosa and The Herald carnations.

The exhibit was staged by G. T. Siegert of the Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, and his work showed much skill and good taste. Though distinctly a chrysanthemum exhibit, two large groups of palms and decorative plants, furnished by Frank Oechslin; specimens of box woods in various shapes by Vaughan's Seed Store and fine groups of Begonias Cincinnati and Lorraine from Poehlmann Bros. added greatly to the effect as a whole. The groups of chrysanthemum plants which also added materially to the beauty of the exhibit, were furnished by Poehlmann Bros., Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association and Vaughan's Seed Store and were mainly in plants of commercial sizes. The largest bush plants in the hall came from Iowa State Agricultural College, and the grafted plants always so admired by those outside the trade were missing. A very pretty effect was a bed of rose plants in full bloom, growing in two-inch pots sunken in moss, showing masses of the tiny roses of Baby Tausendschon, Phyllis and Germa Tetschendorf by Vaughan's Seed Store.

Very noticeable among the many excellent cut chrysanthemums was the Wm. Turner, and a vase of 25 grown by C. H. Totty won a silver medal. White blooms seemed to lead, nothing quite equalling the Wm. Turner, and Naomi was another splendid white. The older varieties as Major Bonnaffon and Eaton are keeping up well in the race. Exhibits of single blooms were quite large and made a good showing.

The rose section (not for competition) contained some noteworthy varieties. Killarney Brilliant was shown by Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hills, Pa., and much admired. It was in as fine shape at the end of the show as at the beginning. Dorner's new red rose, No. 6, was exceedingly fragrant and of a dark rich shade. A brilliant red novelty was shown by S. J. Reuter & Son, Westerly, R. I., and E. G. Hill & Co., had a vase of their light pink Ophelia. Dorner also had a vase of his scarlet carnation Champion, and the Detroit Cut Flower Exchange exhibited Philadelphia. Two of the retailers, A. Lange and J. Mangel, sent baskets of roses to represent their branch of the trade. The out-of-town visitors were confined mostly to the exhibitors.

Cut Flower Awards.

Silver cup for 10 blooms, one variety; C. H. Totty with Wm. Turner. Gold watch for 6 varieties, 3 blooms each, private gardeners, F. D. Countiss. Silver cup for 10 blooms not disseminated, Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Corp. Silver gilt medal for best vase of blooms from cultural standpoint, Poehlmann Bros. Co. with Bonnaffon. Silver medal for best display of varieties introduced by self within five years, Elmer D. Smith.

Plants.

In the large flowering plant classes Vaughan's Seed Store won all the firsts except one which went to Poehlmann Bros. Co. Iowa State Coll. won the Geo. W. Childs gold medal for bush plants.

Vase 25 blooms, one variety, white—1st, C. H. Totty with Wm. Turner; 2nd, E. G. Hill Co. with Naomah; 3rd, Bassett & Washburn with Solamon. Vase 25 pink—1st, Mt. Greenwood Cem. Seedlings Not in Commerce.

6 blooms white 1st, C. H Totty, bronze medal 6 pink C. H Totty, bronze medal 6 yellow—C. C. Pollworth Co., bronze medal. 6 red—E. D Smith & Co., bronze medal. Sweepstakes 6 blooms among the above seedlings—C. H. Totty, silver medal.

THE STAMFORD SHOW.

The Third Autumn Exhibition of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held in the Armory, Stamford, Conn., November 7th and 8th, and proved in every respect the finest exhibition ever held by the Society. The excellent attendance which far exceeded expectations shows the deep interest the public is taking in this young and energetic Society. Entries were heavy in the 98 classes in the schedule, competition very keen, and the judges fulfilled their duties in a most efficient and satisfactory manner, although they had no easy task. Chrysanthemums, which occupied the larger part of the exhibition, were of excellent quality and quite the equal to the standard in former years. Of the trained specimens, Adolph Lewisohn's "Black Hawk," a gigantic plant 14 feet in diameter caused quite a sensation. Other fine specimens were shown by Herbert J. Parks, Mrs. Albert Crane, Wm. Fisher, Chas. Mallory, W. W. Hercy, J. S. Downey and G. D. Barron. Single chrysanthemums and pompon varieties, now fast coming into public favor, were well staged.

Roses stood out prominently. Pink and White Killarney, Milady, American Beauty, Mrs. Geo. Shawyer and Mrs. Chas. Russell were never before shown to such advantage. Carnations were shown in excellent form and variety. Some excellent flowering and foliage groups occupied the center of the hall, artistic in their design, calling forth the admiration of all. Vegetables and fruit also added their part. The former brought out some fine displays where competition was very keen, Mrs. Albert Crane being a winner of two cups and several other prizes. Several excellent groups of orchids were staged. The gardeners' decorative art was again displayed in the basket and table decorations. In the former, P. W. Popp, gardener for H. Darlington, came first with a splendidly decorated basket of chrysanthemums and autumn foliage. Thomas Aitchison, gardener for Henry Seigel, was second with a pretty basket neatly arranged. Great interest was displayed in the table decorations with competition very keen. Thomas Aitchison, winner in this class, put up a wonderfully pretty table of Lady Hillingdon roses, which was greatly admired. A. Peterson and Thomas Ryan were second and third, respectively.

The interior decorations of the hall, which added in no small way to the general success of the exhibition, were kindly donated by Chas. T. W. Main, the local florist. Excellent music, combined with the artistic surroundings, added the finishing touch to the most successful exhibition in the history of the Society.

The trade exhibits included groups of evergreens from F. E. Conine Nursery Co., Stratford, Conn., chrysanthemums and carnations from Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y., flowering and foliage plants from A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., orchids from Geo. E.

Baldwin Co., Mamaroneck, N. Y., and floral decorations by Chas. T. W. Main, Stamford, Conn.

Chrysanthemum Plants.

Adolph Lewisohn, gard. J. Canning; Chas. Mallory, gard. W. J. Sealey; W. W. Heroy, gard. A. Wynne; J. S. Downey, gard. Thos. Ryan; Mrs. Albert Crane, gard. Alex. Geddis; Edw. Hoyt, gard. J. B. Roy; H. J. Parks, gard. A. L. Marshall; G. D. Barron, gard. Jas. Linane; and Miss G. Iselin, gard. Ewen McKenzie, were the principal winners in the plant classes.

Chrysanthemum Blooms.

Wm. Ziegler, Jr., gard. A. Bleschke; Miss C. A. Bliss, gard. C. T. Burns; Mrs. H. S. Bowen, gard. John Watts; Miss Cockcroft, gard. A. Paterson; Robt. Greenmert, Mrs. Albert Crane, M. I. Borg, gard. Owen A. Hunwick; Chas. Mallory, gard. Wm. Smith; Jos. Millbank, gard. Ed. Parker; Miss G. Iselin, were the winners of 1sts in the many classes for cut blooms. W. W. Heroy won a certificate of merit for best seedling not in commerce.

Carnations.

In this as in the preceding list, lack of space precludes mention of any but the winners of 1st prizes in all classes, although there were many 2nd awards where there was little to choose between exhibits as to priority. Mrs. F. A. Constable, gard. J. Stuart, W. W. Heroy, Miss C. A. Bliss, E. C. Benedict, gard. Robt. Allen, Mrs. Albert Crane, Mrs. C. S. Smith, gard. A. Pederson, R. Delafield, gard. Wm. Brock, Mrs. A. A. Anderson, gard. Robt. Williamson, were 1st in various carnation classes.

Roses.

In roses, the winners of 1st were Richard Delafield, J. J. Riker, gard. W. R. Fonkes and C. G. Wills, gard. Martin Glendon.

Flowering and Foliage Plants.

Group 75 sq. ft.—Mrs. A. A. Anderson, Kentia—J. B. Cobb. Phoenix—A. J. Parks. Orange trees—Mrs. Oliver Hoyt. Asparagus—W. H. Fisher. Six table plants—E. C. Benedict. Geraniums, Mrs. Albert Crane. Lorraine Begonias, Miss G. Iselin. Other begonias—W. W. Heroy.

Fruit and Vegetables.

Here was a very extensive list and the quality of exhibits was very high. The list of competitors was largely the same as recorded in the foregoing premium awards.

THE TARRYTOWN (N. Y.) SHOW.

This was the 15th annual exhibition of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, and it was well up to the well-known high standard of past years. The hall was handsomely decorated with greens and electric lights and was well filled with fine groups and tables of plants and flowers. The dinner table contest brought out five entries and they were among the most popular attractions.

Chrysanthemums.

The Archbold [illegible] for 12 chrysanthemum blooms, and the Hentz prizes for 25 blooms, were [illegible] 1st by Wm. Rockefeller, 2nd by Wm. Jamieson. The Redding [illegible] 6 blooms won 1st by E. Group of palms, flowering and foliage plants, Joseph Eastman. Six ferns for table decoration, Theo. Trevillian.

There were many more classes in all sections than are above enumerated, the winners being generally the same, but we have not space for all. Special awards were given as follows: F. R. Pierson Co., certificate of merit for exhibit of palms, ferns, roses, etc.; F. A. Vanderlip, honorable mention for specimen orange trees; A. L. Gifford, honorable mention for hellebores and gardenias; Elmsford Nurseries, certificate of merit for display of single chrysanthemums; A. N. Pierson, cultural certificate for roses and single chrysanthemums.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE SHOW.

The 82nd Annual Chrysanthemum Exhibition of the American Institute of New York was held last week at the Engineering Building, New York City. It was one of the best shows ever given by the Institute and the new halls proved very well adapted for the purpose. The plant groups were well arranged and composed of exceptionally fine material. The premiums offered were, as usual, very liberal and the classes generally were well competed for. Max Schling's display of "made-up" work was a great centre of admiration. Conspicuous, also, in their attractiveness were the decorative groups from Julius Roehrs Company, and orchids from Lager & Hurrell.

The following list of awards has been considerably curtailed for lack of room, but it includes the main classes and covers the names of the more important exhibitors.

Chrysanthemum Blooms.

[illegible] H. Darlington [illegible] plants [illegible] Winners in private gardeners' classes [illegible] Alex Mackenzie, Glen Cove; J. P. Wild, Madison, N. J.; W. H. Waite, Walter Angus, Chapinville, Conn.; Frank Black, Oakland, N. J.; J. W. Everitt, Glen Cove; James Bell, R. E. Jones (Seabright), A. Macdonald (Yonkers), and Chas. H. Ro[illegible]

Chrysanthemum Plants.

Peter Duff, Orange, N. J., four 1sts; W. B. Thompson, Yonkers, one 1st, three 2nds; W. D. Robertson, Roslyn, L. I., one 1st; Jas. Bell, two 1sts, one 2nd; Max Schneider, one 2nd.

Miscellaneous.

[illegible] Roeh[illegible] Co. Group of [illegible] plants; A. J. Manda, Brooklyn, specimen palm and specimen fern; Lager & Hurrell, collection of orchids. On roses, commercial growers: L. A. Noe, A. N. Pierson Co. and C. H. Totty divided the honors; private classes, W. H. Waite and H. J. Allen, Hyde Park. On carnations, commercial: Head's Bergenfield Nurseries; private, Abraham Wynne Robt. Jacobs and Max Schneider. On violets, Max Schneider and Thos. Bell, Fairfield, Conn. On begonias, W. B. Thompson and R. Hughes, Flushing.

Specials.

Many special awards were made, in which the foregoing and others participated. Among the more prominent were the following: W. H. Waite, vase 24 blooms; Thos. Bell, do.; P. W. Popp, do.; Wm. Vert, do.; J. W. Everitt, collection 12 varieties; Chas. H. Rice, seedling pompons and singles; Peter Duff, three awards for trained specimens; R. Vincent, Jr. & Sons Co., hardy chrysanthemums; J. W. Everitt, single chrysanthemums; W. Angus, do.; A. J. Manda, specimen Boston fern; Robt. Bottomley, anemone varieties; Head's Bergenfield Nurseries, hardy and pompons; J. P. Sorenson, Essex Falls, N. J., vase of chrysanthemums and foliage; A. N. Pierson Co., rose: Mrs. Geo. Shawyer, single and pompon chrysanthemums; C. H. Totty, four specials for collection 50 varieties, display of chrysanthemum plants and hardy seedlings and roses; Patten & Co., Tewksbury, Mass., certificate for carnation Princess Dagmar; Chas. Weber, Lynbrook, N. Y., certificate for carnation Laura Weber; Max Schling, certificate for display of floral baskets.

THE ROCHESTER SHOW.

The splash of falling water, the song of canary birds, the charm of music and the beauty and fragrance of myriads of flowers mingled in the annual show of Rochester flower lovers and growers which opened last week in Convention Hall. The great auditorium and the annex were transformed into a German formal garden. High, close-cropped hedges broken at regular intervals by tall evergreens and one or two arched gateways carved out of the solid wall of the hedge by the cunning hand of the florist decorator hid the displays from the visitor's eye as he first entered.

On the left as one passed through one of the green-arched gateways a vista of flowers and greenery closing in the distance with a great fountain and waterfall came into view. All around, the stately, snowy and golden, pink and crimson globes of giant chrysanthemums. At their base masses of greenery, and thousands of bright-hued flowers.

The high hedge-border was pierced by a long arbor passage at the south end of the main auditorium. Passing through this, the visitor came upon the fountain, with its waterfall and pool, water streaming first from the mouths of half a dozen lions' heads into a shallow basin, then rushing over the edge and falling with a continuous splash into the broad pool at the base. At times the waterfall was illumined with brilliant colors which play upon the water with fast-changing beauty.

Credit for the conception and execution of this unique show belongs to William Pitkin, Jr., a young Rochester landscape architect. The display was greatly helped by immense contributions from the Public Park Department. Full information as to the awards and the financial results have not yet been received.

The Fruit Show, now open at Horticultural Hall, Boston, is a splendid success. The displays are prodigious, the quality exceptionally high and the arrangement of the various exhibits is excellent. More about it next week.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The Executive Committee of the American Rose Society met in New York City, Monday, November 10th, and pursuant to the resolution of the meeting of the Society held at Minneapolis, decided to hold the annual meeting for 1914 in conjunction with the New York Horticultural Society and New York Florists' Club show, which will be held in March, 1914, in the Grand Central Palace. The management has offered the sum of $2,500 for premiums to be used by the Rose Society. The Executive Committee has accepted this offer and the premium list will be prepared without delay so far as possible to secure the best results.

The Rules and Regulations governing Rose Test Gardens, which were presented at the last meeting and submitted for further examination, were carefully gone over, and passed as directed at the Minneapolis meeting. The Rose Test Gardens in view are at Arlington Heights, Washington, D. C., Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., and Minneapolis, Minn., Park System, and also at New Brunswick, N. J. The effort to secure the list of all roses originated in America, with their pedigrees, has met with much appreciation; this list will be properly arranged and published as far as received in the Annual Bulletin for 1913. Messrs. Robert Simpson and Robert Pyle are appointed to assist the Secretary in the work of preparing the Bulletin.

More dues for membership have been received this year than common. President Pierson submitted a report on affiliation of local societies holding June shows and a proposition for the distribution of the American Rose Society medals. Messrs. S. S. Pennock, Pyle and H. O. May gave their views bearing upon this effort as desirable to gain a country-wide interest in the work of the Rose Society.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND,
Secretary.

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held at Horticultural Hall on Tuesday evening, November 18, at 8 o'clock. The lecturer of the evening will be James F. M. Farquhar on "Landscape Gardening From the Standpoint of a Practical Man." Numerous applications for membership will be presented. Nomination of officers for 1914 will be made. Many fine exhibits of plants and cut flowers are promised, and the meeting should prove one of the finest the club has yet held.

All members wishing to join the landscape gardening classes are asked to be at Horticultural Hall on Monday evening, November 17 at 7.30 o'clock, when the class will be organized. Lectures and other features in addition to the regular class work are being arranged for.

W. N. CRAIG, Secretary.

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

Ladies Night, Monday evening, November 10, was the most successful and best attended affair in the history of the Club. Ladies in great numbers were present. The Club Room was not large enough to hold the crowd and the gentlemen were compelled to stand in the hall and anterooms. A delightfully pleasing program had been prepared and Messrs. Duggan, Wheeler and Guttman, the house and entertainment committee, deserve great credit for the complete arrangements made, the only regret being that all the ladies could not be accommodated at one sitting. The House Committee were assisted by George E. M. Stumpp. Joseph Fenrich entertained one of the overflow meetings of the men with an interesting talk on the "Future of the Cut Flower Business in New York." Mr. Fenrich's number showed that he had given the subject much careful thought, and undoubtedly would have done much good to his hearers, but their inattention to the fine points of his address was deplorable and much of Joe's 70—H. P. 6—cylinder pressure was simply wasted in trying to preserve order and some of his audience came near turning turtle in their efforts to the same end.

President Siebrecht was all smiles at the success of the evening. A particularly gratifying feature was the willing acquiescence on the part of the members in the request to refrain from smoking out of deference to "ladies' night."

The Nominating Committee reported the following names for officers to be balloted for at the next meeting: President—Wm. H. Siebrecht, Sr., H. A. Bunyard, Wm. Duckham. Vice-president—C. W. Scott, H. Weston, Jno. A. Rassbach. Secretary—John Young, M. C. Ebel, J. H. Pepper. Treasurer—W. C. Rickards, Jr., Robert Koehne, Philip Kessler. Trustees—three to serve two years—Jos. A. Manda, C. H. Totty, W. R. Cobb, Wallace R. Pierson, Alex. E. Hogg, I. S. Hendrickson, A. L. Miller, F. H. Traendly, Jas. T. Scott.

The Committee on Awards reported on their visit to W. A. Manda's establishment, and the award of final certificates to Dahlia DuPont, Dahlia Gertrude, and Dahlia Bohemian Garnet. Wallace R. Pierson brought to the meeting an exhibit of the new chrysanthemum Indian Summer, which was greatly admired. The Committee on Awards, owing to the crush, were unable to judge exhibits. Taken all in all, last Monday night will go down in club history, as "One Big Night."

WORCESTER COUNTY, MASS., HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

This society held its annual meeting on November 5. Officers were elected as follows: President, Edward W. Breed, of Clinton; vice-presidents, Arthur J. Marble, Charles Greenwood and Herbert R. Kinney, of Worcester; secretary, Leonard C. Midgley, of Westboro; librarian, Miss Lucy M. Coulson, and treasurer, Burt W. Greenwood. The three trustees appointed by a committee chosen to to fill positions of members who have died during the past year are William Anderson, of South Lancaster; H. H. Browning and F. J. Reed, of Shrewsbury.

In his report for the past year, Mr. Midgley made the recommendation that the society hold fewer shows, that they should be larger and remain open in the evening to allow the many people who are interested, but who are employed through the day, the opportunity of attending them.

The report of President Breed showed that during the past year four medals had been awarded; one to the Waban Rose Conservatory, for the Mrs. Charles Russell rose; one to A. N. Pierson, for the new Milady rose; one to the R. & J. Farquhar company of Boston for two new lilies, and one of the Hadwen medals to Marshall of Fitchburg for apples.

An animated discussion on the subject of Sunday shows was held, but no definite step was taken. The concensus of opinion was that Sunday exhibits would furnish a place of amusement and entertainment for numbers of people, but would be hard on the exhibitors themselves.

PITTSBURGH FLORISTS' AND GARDENERS' CLUB.

The evening of November 4, was Chrysanthemum Night at the Pittsburgh Florists' and Gardeners' Club. Exhibits and awards were as follows:

To Mr. Edwards, gardener for H. J. Heinz, a certificate of merit for the finest chrysanthemums ever shown before the Club.

To Bureau of Parks, Pittsburgh, for collection of chrysanthemums, the finest varieties being William Turner, Wood Mason, and Winifred, among the doubles, and in a fine collection of singles and pompons the new variety Oriole was conspicuous.

Messrs. Godwin, of Bridgeville, Pa., and Randolph & McClements of Pittsburgh were commended for vases of good commercial varieties.

To Carl Becherer, gardener for Dixmont Hospital, Dixmont, Pa., a cultural certificate for collection of double and single seedling chrysanthemums.

Mr. Becherer gave a very interesting demonstration of the method of pollination which he used in producing his fine seedlings. The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. showed good commercial varieties. The representative of this company said they attempted the growing of no fancy stock, but large quantities of the smaller varieties that could be easily purchased by the average man. They found Bonnaffon still the best yellow. They found a good demand for the singles and pompons which are being put in baskets with water containers by the retail shops, and keep for a long time. A great many go to the hospitals as presents.

Jno. W. Jones of Phipps Conservatories, said he found it an excellent idea to nick the stems of the large chrysanthemums in different places that they may take up more water and last longer.

A vote of congratulation for J. W. Jones, an ex-president of the Club, on his election to the presidency of the Botanical Society of Western Pennsylvania, was unanimously passed.

H. P. JOSLIN, Secretary.

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS' CLUB.

Our first "ladies' night" was certainly a success. The rooms were handsomely decorated by Mr. Edgar, of the firm of B. F. Barr & Co. In conjunction with, and part of the decorating scheme, was an exhibition in which some very fine 'mums were shown by Rudulph Nagle, I. S. Landis, H. D. Rohrer, B. F. Barr Co., of Lancaster, M. J. Brinton of Christiana and Elmer Weaver of Ronks. Harry Weaver of Bird in Hand had a very nice vase of Silver-Pink Snapdragon. The Leo Niessen Co. showed a fine vase of carnation Gorgeous and Fire Flame and Sweetheart roses, all of which were much admired. The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. had a vase of Matchless carnation. Judging from the comments both these Philadelphia firms will be well repaid for their exhibits.

After spending about an hour over the exhibits, sports were indulged in, Mrs. A. M. Herr winning the prize for the greatest number of strikes and spares in bowling. There were about fifty ladies accompanied by their husbands and sweethearts, and they had full play on the bowling alleys, the billiard and pool tables and cards. A number of the fancy chrysanthemums were given as prizes for these games and quite a number of ladies were carrying huge armfuls on their way home. Lunch was served about ten and the affair closed at 11.30, pronounced a grand success. Mr. T. J. Nolan was the only visitor and he said he would have to be in Europe to miss another one if he knew of it in time.

CONNECTICUT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Chrysanthemum night was observed on the 6th of November. Fine chrysanthemum blooms were exhibited by President John F. Huss; Alfred Cebelius, gardener for Rev. M. W. Jacobus, Hartford; W. S. Mason, gardener for the Pope estate, Farmington; Carl Peterson, West Hartford; Louis Chauvy, gardener for Walter L. Goodwin; A. N. Pierson, Cromwell; and T. B. Brown, Windsor. A vase of "William Turner," shown by Mr. Cebelius, created quite a sensation, some of the blooms measuring 23½ inches in circumference. Among the choicest chrysanthemums were Harry E. Converse, Mary Donnellan, Mrs. J. C. Kelley, Glenview, Dr. Enguchard and William Duckham.

Diplomas were awarded as follows:

First class certificates to Alfred Cebelius and A. N. Pierson, for pompons; Connecticut Agricultural College, for seedling carnations; Warren C. Mason, for pompons and singles; cultural certificates to Whitney Greenhouses, chrysanthemums; Connecticut Agricultural College, chrysanthemum sports; T. B. Brown, seedling chrysanthemums; certificates of merit to John F. Huss, chrysanthemums; Louis Chauvy, chrysanthemums; W. C. Mason, chrysanthemums; H. J. Thompson, honorable mention for potatoes, one weighing 2 lbs. 6 oz. and the other 2 lbs. 11 oz.

President Huss gave an account of his trip to the flower show of the Horticultural Society of New York, followed by Mr. Alexander Cumming, Jr., and Alfred Cebelius, who also attended the show. The attendance was the largest this fall, forty members being present. The next meeting will be held on November 25th.

prizes that his committee had arranged for the coming season. The club donated $30 for prizes, this committee to arrange competition, the trade to be solicited for further offers.

Theo. Wirth has underway the formation of a club to go in a body to the Boston convention, a membership to be charged and so much weekly to be paid in and at the time of above event each member will have sufficient to defray his expenses of the trip. A membership of twenty is enrolled so far. All florists in the state are invited to join. This was the first club meeting Mr. Wirth has attended since his accident of two months ago. A luncheon was served at the close of the meeting and thoroughly enjoyed by all.

A dance will be given Monday evening, November 24th, at the Masonic Temple and the committee in charge under the chairmanship of Joe Oys are arranging for an event that will be an honor to the club.

C. F. Rice, secretary of the club the past year will be succeeded by J. G. Taylor. Mr. Rice leaves the 14th of November, accompanied by John R. Van Bochove of Kalamazoo, Mich., his former employer, on a moose hunting trip, which will consume about three weeks. C. F. RICE, Sec'y.

The fifty-ninth annual meeting of the Western New York Horticultural Society will be held in Rochester, N. Y., January 28-30, 1914. The program will be an unusually strong one, and the topics up-to-date.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS.

Department of Plant Registration.

The Montgomery Company, Inc., of Hadley, Mass., submit for registration, the Rose described below. Any person objecting to the use of the proposed name, or the registration of the rose, is requested to communicate with the Secretary at once. Failing to receive objections to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Name, Hadley.

Description—This rose is a development of a strain of red forcing roses, including Liberty, Gen. MacArthur and Richmond. Color, deep velvet crimson, retaining its brilliancy at all seasons of the year. Flowers borne on long stiff stems, with abundant bronze green foliage. Unquestionably one of the most fragrant roses in existence, being exceeded, among forcing roses, only by American Beauty. It is a strong rapid grower and has undoubtedly proven itself an all-the-year-round forcing variety.

The Conard & Jones Company, of West Grove, Pa., submit for registration, the Cannas described below. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed names, is requested to communicate with the Secretary at once. Failing to receive objections to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson—Color crimson pink, particularly clear and pleasing. Flowers are large with broad overlapping gracefully-rounded petals of great substance and durability. It is an early continuous and abundant bloomer. Habit is robust, but leaves do not hide the flowers; foliage is light green, prettily veined.

Golden Gate—The flowers open almost pure gold but soon become richly rayed with orange crimson and apricot, centering to the throat of deep carmine red. Foliage green.

Wintzer's Colossal—Without doubt, the largest flowered Canna to date, as the average flowers more than cover a man's hat. It is an improvement over all others in the orchid-flowering class. With its superior substance it seems to revel in the hot sunshine with impunity, and promises to give satisfaction in the most tropical sections. Color vivid scarlet that retains its brilliancy. Generous green foliage. Five feet high.

Jane Addams—True rich buttercup yellow (richer than Buttercup canna) with a suggestion of red in the throat The buds are dark maroon, and they blend artistically in color with the bright yellow blooms and soft green foliage. It has a strong erect habit of growth, growing to the height of 4½ feet.

San Diego—A bronze-leaved beauty with flowers perfectly formed and tastefully crimped. The blooms are a Chinese orange, or Persian yellow shade which harmonizes perfectly with the dark bronze foliage. On account of its sturdy growth and picturesque appearance this novelty is especially well adapted for growing as a specimen plant. Four feet high.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The regular meeting of the Cincinnati Florist Society was held at the home of Fred Bartmeier on Monday evening, after which the members present enjoyed a very pleasant social evening.

At the October meeting of the Springfield (Ohio) Florists' Club, the following officers were elected: President, Roy McGregor; vice-president, John M. Good; secretary, Arthur C. Leedle; treasurer, Chas. W. Unglaub.

The State Florists' Association of Indiana met at Richmond on November 3, at the E. G. Hill greenhouses. It was decided to hold an exhibition in Indianapolis in November, 1914. The next meeting will be held at New Castle on December 2.

The Cleveland (Ohio) Lady Florists' Club organized October 27th and elected the following officers: President, Mrs. George W. Smith; vice-president, Mrs. Walter Priest; secretary, Miss Hester Getz; treasurer, Mrs. H. P. Knoble. About twenty members joined during the evening, and it is expected that at the next meeting there will be an enrollment of one hundred or more.

The Official Program of "Maryland Week," and the Annual Meetings and Exhibition of the Maryland Horticultural Society and allied organizations has been received. The dates are November 18 to 22, and the location the Fifth Regiment Armory, Baltimore. Among the interested workers in various official capacities we notice the names of R. L. Graham, George Morrison, I. H. Moss, E. A. Seidewitz, Chas. J. Bolgiano and others more or less familiar to our readers.

The regular meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held in the Town Hall, Lenox, Mass., on Saturday evening, November 1. The chief business was centered on the fall show, held the previous week. Financially and otherwise it was a big success and the drawings at the door were a good bit in advance of the previous year. For the same show next year the society has already acquired two handsome cups for competition. Ed. Jenkins gave an interesting talk on his trip to the Madison, N. J., show.

The regular meeting of the North Shore Horticultural Society was held at Manchester, Mass., on Friday, November 7. A large attendance of members was on hand, it being the election of officers for the ensuing year. The result of the ballot was: President, John L. Chapman; vice-president, Frank Foster; secretary, Albert Sims; treasurer, John Jaffray; librarian, Robert A. Mitchell; executive committee—Alfred E. Parsons, William Till, Herbert Shaw, T. Harrison Stiles and Herman Sanford.

The discussion committee announced that Thos. J. Grey of Boston would be the speaker at the next meeting.

Obituary

Adam Rothar.

Adam Rothar, a retired florist, died on November 7 at his home in Bushwick avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., aged 66 years.

John Brodrib.

John Brodrib, formerly in the florist business in Hartford, Conn., died on October 29, at Tolland, Mass. Mr. Brodrib was 53 years of age and a native of England. He leaves a widow, four sons and one daughter.

Albert Dirwanger.

Albert Dirwanger, for more than forty years a leading florist of Portland, Me., died at his home in that city on Sunday, Nov. 2, aged 83 years, 10 months. Death was caused by cerebral apoplexy.

Mr. Dirwanger was born in Bavaria, Germany,. He learned the trade of a florist in his native country at a time when a long and severe apprenticeship and a thorough course of instruction in every branch of the work was necessary. When a young man, after completing his apprenticeship, he came to America, which was then held out to all enterprising young Germans as a land of great promise. And he like a great many others of his race found it so indeed. He was fond of flowers and the flower business. This and his home formed his main object in life. Industrious and domestic in his tastes he lived a quiet life amidst congenial surroundings. His wife died about five years ago and he leaves his only child, Isabelle K. to mourn his loss. But, indeed, the greater part of Portland will feel a sense of bereavement for he was a sympathetic and kindly hearted gentleman and was universally beloved and respected. He was a brother of the late Joseph A. Dirwanger, also well-known in the florist trade of Portland for many years.

NEWS NOTES.

Anderson, Ind.—The greenhouses and contents of Williams & Matthews were completely destroyed by fire on November 1st. The loss is estimated at $20,000.

New York, N. Y.—Despite the snowbound news from Cleveland, Messrs. W. E. Marshall, J. Muller, of Julius Roehrs Co., Wallace R. Pierson and one or two other intrepid spirits started from New York, Tuesday evening, for that beleaguered city. The party would have been considerably larger were it not for the unpromising outlook.

The Boston Co-operative Flower Market, Inc., will hold a flower show in their rooms on Park street next spring. Three hundred dollars was appropriated for that purpose at the annual meeting, November 1. The directors for the ensuing year are as follows: John McFarland, president; Donald Carmichael, treasurer; William W. Tailby, secretary; Norris F. Comley, William H. Elliott, Robert Montgomery, L. E. Small, Charles Streifford and Henry Shedd.

SEED TRADE

The Potato Prospect.

It is pretty widely understood that the potato crop in the country outside of Maine is considerably short of last year's by some millions of bushels. On the other hand it was known that Maine had raised the largest and finest crop ever produced in that State. As dealers in seed potatoes generally depend upon Maine for their supplies for the middle, eastern and southern states for early market, they felt confident of securing their usual quantities at reasonable figures. All this seems to have been changed, if information we have received is reliable. A long spell of wet weather, extending over several weeks, converted the fields into quagmires, and this was followed by a hard freeze, ruining a very large percentage of the crop which had not already been dug. Some estimates place the loss to the State as high as $500,000, but the full extent of the damage has not as yet developed, and it will doubtless be some weeks before the exact conditions are definitely known. This undoubtedly will mean an unusually high figure for selected seed stock, and those who have not already covered their requirements, should hasten to do so, but they would be wise in stipulating that the tubers should be free from rot.

Seed Beans.

Growers are beginning to make their final estimate of what they will deliver in the way of seed beans, and dealers generally will be keenly disappointed when actual deliveries are made. Weeks ago we predicted that the majority of both growers and dealers did not appreciate the extent of the shortage in beans, and such information as has reached us very recently, confirms this opinion. So far as we can ascertain, the only varieties that are now offered are the Red Valentines, Early Refugee and the Giant Stringless Green Pod, and nearly all of these are of the 1912 crop, as no grower is in a position to offer new beans of any variety. The greatest shortages will be felt on the wax-podded sorts and the Black Valentine, Late Refugee and Burpee's Stringless Green Pod. It is extremely difficult to secure offerings of any of these varieties at the present time, and as there is likely to be a keen demand from market gardeners and other users of seed beans, retailers will not be in a position to quote many of them at wholesale.

Canners' Convention.

We assume that most of the seedsmen and seed growers, who contemplate attending the Canners' Convention in Baltimore, February next, have made reservations for such rooms as they will require. If they have not, they should lose no time in doing so, as rooms will surely be at a premium before convention time. We are reliably informed that practically all of the leading hotels are now booked to capacity, the only exception being the Hotel Rennert, which still has a few rooms not taken. We are advised that the Baltimore canners are making great efforts to have this the banner convention up to this time, and it will probably be several years hence before it is eclipsed. The local organization has appointed committees to look after various phases of the convention, and an extended program of entertainments has been prepared, particular attention being given to entertaining the ladies.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Canners' Association, and the Board of Directors of the Canning Machinery and Supplies Association, was held in Chicago on the 12th. The business discussed related to the forthcoming canners' convention at Baltimore. It promises to be a hummer.

"Future" Peas.

We have information to the effect that prices on future peas, both for canners and seedsmen will be somewhat lower than those of a year ago, although there will be no very sharp decline as conditions do not justify such action. The cost of producing seed peas now is very greatly in excess of what it was a few years ago. In fact it costs more to produce the seed now than it was sold for some five or six years back. While it is quite possible that prices may recede even further than those which will be asked for the coming season's crop, there is no possibility of their ever approaching the old level of even five years ago. There appears to be an abundance of seed stocks in the hands of growers, so far as peas are concerned, but seed stocks of beans are short, and dealers would do well, so we are advised, to get in their orders early. Incidentally we may add that our information is that prices on seed beans will show a marked advance over those of last year, as the farmers are the deciding factor today in practically all products of the soil, and they will not continue to grow beans at old prices. We have heard no figures mentioned, but merely that there will be a considerable advance.

Notes.

Petaluma, Cal.—W. J. Hickey has purchased the seed and flower business of M. Vonson.

Chicago, Ill.—At the seed stores work is slacking up and the coming week will practically see the close of the season. It is reported as a fairly satisfactory season and with the usual push, plans are already being outlined for another year.

Cincinnati, Ohio—The Rahe Seed Company, 113 East Court street, has reorganized with the following officers: President and secretary, Harry H. Peters; vice-president, Albert H. Peters; treasurer, William L. Miller. William J. Rahe has retired from the company.

The St. Louis County Florists' Club made up of growers only, held a large and interesting meeting on Wednesday night, Nov. 5th, at Nieman's Hall. President Vennemann presided over the meeting. R. Marshall lectured on "Economy in Greenhouse Heating" which proved to be a very interesting talk and discussion.

New Brunswick, N. J.—Jack Clark has remodelled and redecorated his flower store and on November 1st had a public reopening. The store is a model in all its appointments.

Brookline, Mass.—F. E. Palmer is the center of quite a turmoil this week. He placed advertising posters for Mrs. Pankhurst in his flower store windows, and protests and threats of boycott from the anti-suffragists promptly followed. Fred. refuses to be intimidated and the suffragists are rallying to his support with their guns all loaded for bear, all of which is good advertising for Palmer.

NEWS NOTES.

The Miami Floral Company of Dayton, Ohio, had a grand public opening of their new and handsome establishment on Thursday, Nov. 6. The Dayton Daily News devoted the greater part of two pages to a description of the beauties of the place, one of the most elaborate and attractive in the country, with portraits of J. W. Rodgers, general manager and other officials of the company.

The advertisement of the Rosary Flower Company in this issue seems to be a point well taken. We find in the Florists' Directory no less than thirteen "Rosarys" and "Roserys" all in the same line of business in various parts of the country. It is not surprising that correspondents get them mixed up sometimes. No doubt they are all "own root" plants but it is our impression that the New York establishment was the first to use the name.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

Postponement of the blanket order making sweeping express rate reductions has been announced by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The order was to have become effective December 1, but has been postponed until February 1, 1914, it is understood for the reason that the express companies showed they did not have sufficient time in which to get ready for the new schedules of rates.

The storekeepers are continuing their investigations regarding the competition put up by the street vendors and Messrs. Loose and Oehmler have been designated to look up the laws relating to street sales and to consult counsel in the matter. Their conclusions are to be submitted at another meeting. This sort of competition has long been a cause for complaint, but concerted action has not heretofore been had. Now that the dealers are in accord and have gotten together the District Commissioners are to be appealed to with a view to the enactment of suitable laws or regulations applying to street sales. Store men are subject to a license tax of $15 per annum and a personal tax on their stores, fixtures, merchandise, etc.; they have rent, light, clerk hire and other expenses, while the street men merely pay a very nominal license fee.

Visitors: George C. Watson, of Philadelphia, Pa.; C. B. Knickman, of McHutchison & Co., New York, and Joseph Goudy, representing H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE FLORISTS' SUPPLY HOUSE OF AMERICA

CHICAGO NOTES.

The Cleveland florists who visited Chicago the past week did some good work for their coming flower show, Nov. 13-15.

Elegant stock of Milady rose is now seen in the market. This flower is so perfect in form, so rich and velvety in texture, its color such a deep glowing red that when surrounded by its magnificent foliage it finds admirers at once.

The dance given by the Chicago Florists' Club Nov. 6, to the flower show visitors and their friends is reported to have been a happy occasion. It was held in the east room of the La Salle Hotel and a large number attended.

It is not hard to understand the increasing favor for the home-grown single violets. Their delicious fragrance when the boxes are opened as compared with that of the eastern ones after their long shipment is strongly in their favor.

A. T. Pyfer will represent the Chicago Carnation Co. with a large exhibit of carnations at the Cleveland Show. His collection at the Chicago Show included seven varieties, two not disseminated and did credit to his reputation as a "carnationist."

One of our wholesale salesmen aptly illustrated last week's business as like the lake whose border we touch. One day the waves rode high and carried all before it while the next day it was calm and scarcely a ripple to stir the calm which settled down on business.

Visitors—E. O. Orpet, Lake Forest, Ill.; Earl R. Mann, Richmond, Ind.; Mrs. Ida M. Latshaw, Libertyville, Ill.; E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; C. H. Totty, Madison, N. A MODEL ROSE ESTABLISHMENT.

One of the most progressive of the rose-growing concerns of greater Boston is the Montrose Greenhouses, of which Eber Holmes is superintendent. Each year sees substantial advances in equipment and a wider sphere of influence. During the past season a herd of forty high-grade cows has been added for the purpose of supplying the indispensable fertilizing materials, and they are housed in a barn with every modern method and device to insure comfort and cleanliness. It is a fine example of what to do and how to do it. Grading has been nearly completed for the erection of another rose house, 60x500 ft., which will be completed about the first of the new year. All the popular varieties of roses are doing well, more especially Mrs. Russell, which is easily the leader in the local demand. Most of the houses are now equipped with concrete benches.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Quiet, very! No signs yet of any decrease in the chrysanthemum cut, but the crest of the wave has undoubtedly been reached. In the meantime, carnations are "up against it" hard and are about the most unsalable thing on the market. Roses are faring better. They are shortening up in supply and if any active demand should materialize there would be a near famine. Violets have taken a jump and the demand is lively even at doubled prices, the singles selling for fifty per cent more than the doubles. Everything else on the list is in ample supply. Demand is decidedly dull—both local and shipping.

BUFFALO Weather conditions have been favorable for good business, although too mild for the keeping of stock, which has been good and moved fairly well on all lines except roses which have come in a little faster than they could be disposed of to good advantage. Of course, chrysanthemums are the feature of the market and as the early varieties are about over, the better keeping varieties are coming in and it is hoped that complaints will be fewer from now on. The rose demand has fallen on high-grade Sunburst, Milady and Shawyer. Some good Perles are seen, also Hillingdon, but the latter has fallen off in demand and Ward is much preferred. There are lilies and plenty of violets. Lily of the valley and carnations are coming on more each day.

CHICAGO There was more variation than usual in prices and demand during the past week. A few warm days brought in quantities of stock and then a sudden drop in temperature accompanied by a terrific gale reduced the supply but also diminished the number of buyers. The demand for roses has been remarkably good all the fall, which even the coming of the chrysanthemums did not greatly diminish. Their sales have kept steadily on while other flowers have had their ups and downs. It is generally conceded that there are enormous quantities of chrysanthemums to draw from this season and growers have been cutting freely to work off the stock with the result that prices are not up to those of previous years. The approach of Thanksgiving is expected to cause a reduction of the cut from now on. Carnations are competing with pompons now but the supply till last week has hardly been equal to the demand in spite of the quantity of pompons brought in. This week carnations are moving a little slower as pompons take their place in funeral work at prices which make them very attractive. The violet market continues firm and both singles and doubles improve as the season advances, with a steady gain in the quantity of single violets handled in this market. Demand for lilies is picking up. Sweet peas have appeared in limited quantities also snapdragon.

CINCINNATI The demand for stock is not able to make serious inroads into the bulk of the supply. Only here and there are flowers that clean up well. A large part does not move at all. Prices have slumped to a low point. The first blizzard and snow storm of the season interfered with the arrival of the Monday's shipment of New York double violets, the trains being snow-bound somewhere between Cleveland and Columbus. Chrysanthemums are far more plentiful than the market requires. Only those of the best quality sell and even they do not bring anything like a good price. The bulk of the offerings are the smaller sizes, and these enjoy the best call, but the stock is so large that prices, as before stated, are low. Roses are not as plentiful as they were, but are still easily sufficient. Carnations, too, are less abundant, but the call for them is weak. Everything else in plenty.

NEW YORK As is generally known, the wholesale market conditions in this city have been unsatisfactory and disheartening for the well-wishers of the flower industry all through this fall. Not wishing to "harp constantly on the same tune," as has been sometimes charged against the trade paper reports on the New York market, we have tried from week to week to treat the situation as moderately as possible, hoping that the next week might furnish some good encouraging news. But this time we must cut loose from our conservative position and confess to the extreme demoralization existing all through the wholesale market district. So far as prices are concerned, everything has "gone to smash," and the truth is that the price quotations as given in our regular tables are practically no index of what is going on. Never in the history of the business has a worse condition prevailed than at present, and this applies to everything from cattleyas down, with the one exception of violets which are in demand at better prices than heretofore. Chrysanthemums are in overwhelming supply. We sincerely hope that this is the last pessimistic report we shall have to make this season.

WASHINGTON With the coming of the cooler weather business seems to be improving slightly, although considerable complaint is to be heard against the continued dullness of the market. The height of the chrysanthemum season has been nearly reached and the storemen will welcome the passing of the glut. It is said that beginning early in the week commission merchants and growers began holding back their supply of chrysanthemums for Saturday when an exceptionally heavy demand was expected due to the Georgetown-Virginia football game. Prices were nearly doubled in some instances and this caused the placing of numerous orders with out-of-town dealers for Friday and Saturday deliveries, which would have otherwise gone to local firms. Roses are in good supply and fair demand. Orchids continue to be somewhat scarce, although enough are to be had to fill all orders. Lily of the valley is moving well. Carnations are good.

ST. LOUIS The market has been crowded up considerably on chrysanthemums and business is not any too brisk. The commission men clean up almost daily on fancy stock. The only thing left over is second grade goods. Carnations are coming in better and they clean up daily. Roses are normal. Violets not as yet in plenty and only Californias in this market now. Other things hold their own and have a good demand at all times.

PERSONAL.

Chas. McCreas won easily in his race for one of the city commissioners of the city of Newport, Ky.

Cincinnati visitors: Frank Farny, representing Mr. Rice & Co., Philadelphia; J. T. Heidegen of Aurora, Ind.

L. Merton Gage, secretary of the American Gladiolus Society, went to Bristol, Vermont, this week, where his aged father is very low.

Boston visitors: C. B. Weathered, New York; Stephen Green, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Leonard Barron, editor of Garden Magazine, Garden City, N. Y.

William W. Tailby, who has been clerk of the Boston Co-operative Flower Market for some years and has been unanimously re-elected to that office, was presented with a purse of $100 at the banquet at the Quincy House, Boston, in recognition of his long and faithful service to the organization.

Mrs. F. J. Fillmore, Sr., of St. Louis, met with a painful accident last week when she fell backwards into the cellar and broke her collar bone and fractured her skull, from which she is slowly recovering. Mrs. Fillmore is well-known among the trade and will be missed in the store when artistic work is needed.

CITY AND TOWN PLANNING CONFERENCE.

One more important forward step in the movement towards the betterment of methods in the development of Massachusetts municipalities has been taken by the calling by His Excellency, Governor Foss, of the First Massachusetts City and Town Planning Conference, to be held in Boston, Tuesday and Wednesday, November 18 and 19. Various phases of the problems which confront those anxious for more definite looking ahead in city and town building will be informally discussed and able speakers will give addresses on diversified topics.

The details are in charge of special committees of the Homestead Commission and of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, which are co-operating in arranging the conference.

During Recess

Oyster Roast at Washington, D. C.

The milkman was plodding along his beaten path long before the members of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., and their guests said "au revoir" and the lights at the Eagles' Hall, Sixth and E streets, N. W., were put out. The occasion was an oyster roast tendered to Adolph Gude, Fred H. Kramer and Theodore Diedrich, members of the club who recently returned from abroad. Good fellowship prevailed everywhere and all joined in the evening's pleasantries.

The evening began with the club's regular monthly meeting but business was cut short in favor of the "merry" part. Before the "roasting" began the members and guests whiled away the time talking shop. There are many matters at present demanding the attention of the florists, of which, perhaps, the question of street competition is the most important. Chairman Schmid, of the committee on arrangements, then gave the signal to begin operations, and an assault was made on the steaming bivalves. The announcement that the photographer was ready caused a halt in hostilities. After the gentlemen smoothed their hair and straightened their "westcoats," the big flash came. It was a great wonder to the HORTICULTURE correspondent how the men could keep quiet as long as they did for no sooner had they realized that their physiogonomies had been safely recorded on the camera plate than the real fun began. The playing of patriotic numbers caused considerable hilarity ending with a march around the big hall with President Otto Bauer as commander-in-chief. The musicians entered into the spirit of the affair and what they did not play was not worth listening to.

On the plea that he was not a speechmaker, Theodore Diedrich, following a hearty ovation, was excused in favor of Adolph Gude, who told of his trip through Germany, Switzerland, France and England in company with Fred H. Kramer and the other members of the brave band of Minute Men of America. He told of reviewing a section of the German army while in camp, of being received by the nobility, of visits to wonderful gardens, places and hofbraus, and of the exciting trip made by Mr. Kramer in a Zeppelin airship. Mr. Kramer told of the life in the big European cities; of how he and Mr. Gude almost flew from place to place, seeing everything worth looking at, and said that while Mr. Gude proved himself to be a prince of good fellows he had not in the least been contaminated by his association with royalty.

Peter Lattener changed his speech to songs of the Southland, rendering "Old Black Joe" and other melodies so well known south of the Mason and Dixon Line, his audience forming themselves into a huge choir. George Field begged off and declined to raise his voice in speech and Colonel Montague, Captain Zimmerman, Captain Costinett (fine, high-sounding titles) and a number of others spoke on various subjects and the balance of the evening and part of the following morning was turned over to a male quartet and the musicians from a local theatre, and a ventriloquist who brought forth many a laugh at the expense of a number of the florists.

In addition to all this entertainment some of the staid old members showed the youngsters how to dance the Virginia Reel, the Highland Fling, the Tango and that gruelling Grapevine Twist. Mrs. Clara Naecker, the nightingale friend of the florists, arrived late in the evening to fulfill a promise to sing to them. Although needing no introduction, she was greeted with a somewhat lengthy harangue and near-song, by a certain Northwest member.

Was the affair a success? Ask anyone who was present—they have not yet finished talking of the fun they had

OYSTER ROAST AT WASHINGTON, D. C.

A Detroit Outing.

The Detroit Florists' Club, 60 strong, made its twenty-fifth annual pilgrimage to Mt. Clemens, last Thursday, for the first time traveling in motor cars owned by the members. There were 14 machines in the procession.

Captained by Albert Pochelon, vice-president of the club, the florists left the Detroit Cut Flower Exchange, at 7.15 o'clock. Stops were made at greenhouses along the route, and the tourists assembled at J. F. Sullivan's greenhouse out Gratiot avenue.

In Mt. Clemens all the large growers were visited. Luncheon was served at Fred Breitmeyer's. It was the twenty-fifth luncheon Breitmeyer had served for the "pilgrims," and they presented him with a big mahogany chair in appreciation. Mr. Sullivan made a flowery speech of presentation. Supper was served at Van Boeslager's greenhouse, and a number of speeches were made there.

At Klagge's greenhouse the visitors saw 4,000 plants of the new carnation, "Philadelphia." Among those who made the pilgrimage were Philip Breitmeyer, Bruno Schroeter, Ed Beard, "Jerry" Stock and Charles Plumb, former presidents of the club.

FALL SPRAYING

Fruit trees, ornamental trees, evergreens, and all hardy stock susceptible to scale and other insects should be thoroughly sprayed before freezing weather sets in.

SCALINE will cleanse your trees and shrubs of San Jose, Oyster Shell and other hard scale, red spider, larvae of the aphis, grub of the locust borer, and other insect pests which secrete themselves in the crevices of the bark during the dormant season.

SCALINE is composed of a high grade of petroleum and the properties of the well known fungicide, FUNGINE; mixes readily without agitation; is used at a strength of one part to twenty parts water; containing no sediment can be applied through the finest spray nozzle, and requires no drenching of the plants, but simply misting them, to get effective results.

Gallon, $1.50; 10 gallons, $10; 50 gallons $37.50.

The Building Business and the Business of Building

A FEW nights ago, at the New York Florist Club meeting, I overheard a conversation that was so full of plain common sense facts that I am going to pass along the conversation to you.

Two growers were talking—two of the most successful rose growers in the business.

One remarked: "Never has our stock looked quite so good or as promising." The other replied: "Well, you are not doing any of your own building this year, as usual, and as a result you have been able to give all your time and attention to growing. Long ago I made up my mind that I could not afford to do my own greenhouse building and expect to keep on building my business as it should be built.

"I let the greenhouse builders build all my houses, and I keep busy building my business."

The point we want to make of course is: If these seasoned men in the business can't afford to do their own building, then how can you?

Let's you and I get together and talk the proposition over. If anybody can build economically for you, we can.

Gigs and Greenhouses

YOU can put a silver-plated harness on a draft horse and hitch him up to a stylish gig—but still he is a draft horse.

Just a big heavy dust scuffing draft horse.

By the same token, putting curved eaves on the usual iron frame greenhouse does not change it into a U-Bar Greenhouse. It's still the same heavy iron frame construction.

The only way to have a light stepping, quick moving, pleasant driving carriage horse, is to buy that kind of a horse.

The only way to have a U-Bar house with all its lightness, attractiveness, and durability, is to buy a U-Bar constructed house.

What a thing looks like, is one thing.

What that thing is like, is quite another.

Other curved eave houses may look like the U-Bar, but that's the only way they are like it.

Send for catalog. Or send for us. Or both.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Adiantums

In order to have a good cut of adiantums for the holidays new growth should be well along by this time. Be very careful and do not give beds too much water as this can be easily overdone at this season of the year. The surface soil should be allowed to become fairly dry before applying any water. It is a good plan to work the beds over each week which will tend to keep the soil in a sweet condition. When the fronds have made fairly good growth they will stand liquid feeding once a week. Where it is possible see that the adiantums have full sun from this out and do not fail to give ventilation whenever possible. Be careful that the atmosphere does not become dry, as all adiantums love plenty of atmospheric moisture. Keep it right by damping down the walks three times a day.

Cyclamen

There is no end to the work on a progressive plant and cut flower growing establishment all the year round, and especially at this time is the rush of getting everything into shape for the winter's work. Those who have made use of frames for the last two months for cyclamen must now get the plants indoors. The cyclamen does nicely in a house a little over 50 degrees at night, and the plants from now on should be kept moving. Additional greenhouse space will soon be at liberty as chrysanthemums are cut out. While the cyclamen will still do in frames for a few weeks, if well looked after and protected on severe nights, it is unwise to keep them out after the latter part of November. Give them a light position but not too sunny. Do not syringe overhead and it will pay to use the watering pot in lieu of the hose. Look over the watering as early in the day as possible as they should become dry by nightfall. Keep the house in fairly moist state by damping down the walks night and morning. Place the plants well up to the glass so they will be forced to grow stocky.

Lily of the Valley

Newly imported pips, soon to arrive, cannot be forced with any success before the beginning of the new year. The flowers could be had, but the spikes would come bare of foliage. For early forcing choose the Berlin pips, and the Hamburg pips for late forcing. Cold storage pips will have to be relied upon for the holiday supply. An assorting into several grades of the pips on their arrival is now necessary, and the storing away can go hand in hand with the unpacking. A cold frame outdoors now affords the best and most convenient place where they can remain until repacked for cold storage rooms, or taken out for forcing. If it is merely to be a supply for winter, then no other place is needed. In such a case the pips should be packed upright in boxes, with sand or soil between, under and over the bunches. This simplifies labor in bringing them in, especially when frost has solidified the entire contents of the frame.

Orchids

For some months now watering should be done early in the morning, and the amount of damping down of the floors will, of course, depend on the weather and the amount of fire heat being used. During sunless weather, watering should be done with greater caution, as the daylight is steadily declining now, and while some days are hot there are spells of dull weather. Most orchids will stand full sun now so let them have it in the fullest measure. Few orchids want a close, stuffy atmosphere, so ventilation should be given at all times when possible in greater or less quantity according to the outside conditions. With all orchids now in their winter quarters, some time must be given to the work of cleaning them, and any spare moments are well spent in this way. Temperatures should now be lowered in the several houses, as scientists tells us that plants make most of their growth at night.

Pot Roses for Easter

It is time now to lift or buy roses intended for Easter forcing. Just pot them in 5, 6 or 7-inch pots as they may require. If the roots are long and straggly, or in any way mutilated shorten them back. Use any good rose soil with some bone and wood ash mixed. Be sure to give them all good drainage and pot firmly. When they are potted give a thorough watering. It is a good plan not to prune too hard after lifting; just cut down to about 18 inches for the present as you can do the severe pruning when you start them up. Where the room is available it will be well to give the plants a week or two in a very cool house, after which they can be placed in some deep frame. Look them over once in a while as they should be kept moist at the roots. Plunge the pots up to the rims when placing in the frames, else they are liable to become broken by freezing. During mild weather expose them to full air as they should be kept cool until wanted for forcing.

Preparations for Another Season

The latter part of November might well be called the beginning of the winter season so it is well to look over your stock and see if you are short on palms or other decorative plants. Where such is the case lose no time in placing your order so they can be shipped before the real hard weather sets in. This little forethought will make it better for both buyer and seller.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Carnations; Poinsettias; Gardenias; Schizanthus; Veranda Boxes for Winter Effect; Verbenas.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communication should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Cleaning the Early Peach House

Soon after pruning the trees, have the house thoroughly washed down the same as we recommended for the early vinery. This applies to all fruit houses; it not only helps to exterminate pests but admits more light, which is something to be considered through the dull short days we usually experience when early fruit is in its first stages of growth. A coat of paint in addition will brighten things up and be a great and lasting benefit to the house. One coat of paint inside and outside during a year will double the "life" of any house. After cleaning the house cut away the trees from the trellis. It is impossible to make any kind of a job without the whole tree is cut away. Trying to tie the trees in with half the old tie remaining is poor workmanship. The trees should receive one or two sprayings before being put back on the trellis. If they have been clean through the past season give them one spraying as a preventive. Any that have been troubled with any kind of pests must be dealt with accordingly but whatever insecticides are used do not base the proportions on the trees that are growing outside as those that are forced under glass are more tender and due allowance must be made. Old trees that have quite some heavy wood in them at the base can be scrubbed with a stiff brush which will remove any bark that may be partly loose and make sure that there are no small cavities left untouched by the sprayer. Have all the cleaning done before renovating the border as some of the chemicals will penetrate the top soil and while they may not poison or kill the roots directly they are best removed, which will be done if the top dressing is applied after all cleaning is done. Trees of several years' fruiting will have a quantity of surface roots if a mulching of manure was given them during the past season. It is at this season of the year that the real benefit of mulching the trees will be visible. Do not try to remove all the mulch if it is filled with fibrous roots, nor rely on the fork to do all the work in connection with this; too many valuable roots will be broken by so doing. Rather get the hand and brush off all the loose material that will come easily leaving the rest to have a thin covering of soil. It frequently happens that the ball of a peach tree is a little higher than the rest of the border, which, although no good in itself, shows that there is a quantity of the right kind of roots just below the surface. Other trees that are not so fortunate can have the surface soil removed until some roots are bared and new soil added to replace it. A few brickbats broken small and [illegible] will be beneficial in keeping the soil open. Make the whole nicely firm with the big rammer.

Starting Pot-Vines

Pot vines that have had a rest can be started now. These early ones require a house to themselves to get the earliest and best out of them. Select a house that is easy to heat and one that gets all the sunlight possible. The heating pipes and benches should be so arranged that at least one pipe is underneath the pots and that the benches are deep enough to allow of a hot-bed being made up of sufficient depth to accommodate the pots in which the vines are growing. This hotbed system can be dispensed with for any that are grown in pots during the summer but for these early ones it is beneficial. There is a gentle, even heat there right from the start which helps the roots to move. Any excessive heat from this source will be injurious. While straw manure can be mixed in with leaves for this purpose I prefer only clean oak leaves. These will heat up themselves when they are watered through once. See that styptic has been used on all the cuts that were made through taking off the sublaterals. Plunge the pots to the rim in the leaves, and bend the canes in a semi-circle shape to retard some of the sap from the top buds. If this is not done probably there will be a few strong growths at the top of the cane at the expense of those lower. Try to get an even break all over the cane. Syringe the canes two or three times daily and shut up the house early enough to get warmed up well with sun heat. Maintain a night temperature of 40 to 45 degrees.

Forcing Rhubarb and Asparagus

Neither of these subjects are particular where they grow so long as they have some moisture and heat. Both will grow in the dark but asparagus is best given the light. A mild hotbed of half long stable manure and half leaves will be a big advantage to them. Should the manure be hot add more leaves. Pack the roots in as closely as they will go, working down some fine soil in between. Cover the asparagus over with two inches of rough leaf soil. Do not allow the roots to become dry and keep plenty of moisture in the atmosphere. Start them with a night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees; after growth has nicely started do not allow it to go below 55. Make the usual advance by day.

Prepare for Pot-Trees

Providing the pot-trees have had some frosts on them they can be started as soon as the house can be got ready for them. Have the house clean to receive them and also give the trees an additional spraying before they are admitted. To save room for a time the trees can be placed double thick until the flowers expand; the only drawback to this is some buds are sure to get rubbed off when being shifted around.

Protect the Outside Walls

Vineries or peach houses that are to be forced early and have not got a heating pipe close to the outside wall will often have the frost penetrate through, keeping the border cold. This can be remedied by packing leaves against the wall (outside) and covering them over with long straw manure to prevent their blowing away. Better have this job done before the leaves are used elsewhere.

One Day Earlier, Please

Thursday of next week being Thanksgiving Day, HORTICULTURE must go to press on Wednesday night. Correspondents and advertisers will please bear this in mind when sending in copy or instructions. Do not send electros by parcel post. Either express or special delivery mail are much more prompt.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communication should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Holiday Time

Once more the holidays are coming, and that means a good deal to our trade, as well as to other lines of business. Places doing retail work had better be well supplied with all the necessary materials from paper to the boxes that the fancy trade demands. Doubtless many growers will make the mistake so often made, and will try to hold the cut flowers back so as to get the benefit of the higher prices then paid. This is all right when it is well done, but should never be carried to any extreme. Never attempt to hold the cut blooms long enough to impair the quality of the same. Remember that all the cut flowers go to the retailer before they find their way into someone's home, and it may take two days or more to make the trip from the wholesale house to the home, and then they are expected to last there for a while, or at least ought to, for the home where poor flowers arrived will no doubt be without them for a while to come. Help to sell your own stock as well as do a good thing for the trade in general by always having your stock top-notch, the very best it is possible to produce.

Holding the Plants Back

This is another practise that must not be carried to any extreme or serious trouble may result, for when the plants are checked right in the midst of the season it will take something to start them again. It may be very well to retard the plants just a little to keep the buds from opening too rapidly, and thus hold them a day or two longer, but to reduce the temperature away down to hold the whole crop is a matter that none of us should attempt to have anything to do with. Four degrees less than the regular temperature is about as low as we would let any of our growing houses get, and we think it is about the limit. Should you wish to use the house for other plants than roses after the holidays are over then of course it will pay to run the plants for all that they are worth, running the house so as to get most out of it while it lasts, and letting it go when it is through.

Wood for Propagation

Now as soon as the rush is over the propagation of the coming season's plants will begin in earnest. Many growers will depend on the blind wood that the roses produce for the necessary material, but we find that it pays in the long run to set aside the required number of plants and pinch all the buds as soon as they appear, and then let the wood ripen enough to be used, and then cut it up as soon as possible. This will give good cuttings as a rule, cuttings that will root almost evenly and produce plants that will be very much the same grade. This is just what is wanted, for the more even the plants are in growth and size the better will they be to handle and grow to produce good results. With Beauties it is much the same. Surely you are not encouraging the flowering qualities of the plants by using blind wood to make cuttings from. We would not advise using the wood that bears buds for that is far too expensive. There is plenty of nice flowering wood on the plants that can be used and will answer the purpose very well.

The Fire in the Propagator

Do not wait until you are ready to put the cuttings into the sand before you start the fire in the boiler to heat the sand in which the cuttings are to be inserted. Have the sand warm two or three days at least before the cuttings are put in. This will give you a chance to see if the sand heats well, and if there are any places that run too cold to root the cuttings. This can be remedied before the cuttings are put in, and if delayed will prove very bothersome, to say the least. Have all in running order before you cut the wood for your cuttings, and you will have much better success than to attempt to save a little coal. A bench of cuttings is worth much more than a few shovels of coal; at least we find it so, and we run things accordingly.

Gardeners and Lockjaw (Tetanus)

Agricultural laborers and gardeners are very subject to infection by the bacilli of tetanus, because their work brings them into contact with the soil and especially soils containing organic manures in which the bacillus appears to go through one of the cycles of its existence. Greenhouse soils by their high manurial content and the heat and moisture in which they are environed are veritable hot beds of incubation for tetanus bacilli. As in the nature of things the greenhouse-man's hands must be, during working hours, contaminated to a greater or less extent by the soil and as he is very frequently using a knife or working among roses whose loving embraces are very liable to make "the red blood flow," it is a wonder that infection is not more common than it is. Fortunately our blood contains the requisite resistant qualities to oppose the inroads of this terrible disease, else few would escape. But once in a while a direful calamity occurs and some vigorous man is cut off in his prime. Such as a few years ago was the case with James Brydon of South Lancaster, Mass., than whom no brighter light ever illumined the gardening profession, and from time to time we see it recorded in our horticultural press where some man has died from lockjaw resulting from the scratch of a rose thorn or some other trivial wound which has opened the gates for this insidious foe. And the pity of it all is that a little timely cauterization or disinfectant would have prevented these sad deaths.

The object of this article is to bring home to all who read it the ever-present danger of infection by this dreadful disease, and more especially by means of slight scratches and bruises which quickly heal over, as herein lies the greater danger, the germ being avaerobic (can only grow where free oxygen is excluded) it is these little neglected wounds that should be opened and cleansed with some good antiseptic such as peroxide of hydrogen or a solution of carbolic acid. It may, and does seem like a lot of trouble to bother to disinfect every little scratch or bruise but if you once saw a person die of tetanus you would think it well worth while even if the chances of contracting the disease are somewhat remote.

The big show plants

[illegible] chrysanthemum plants for which they [illegible] attractions at the fall exhibitions in New York and thereabouts. If this be true it will be a great loss to the spectacular side of these exhibitions. We hope to see solid inducements given to encourage them to continue the exercise of their marvellous ability in the growing of such truly wonderful plants, the equal of which have probably never been seen elsewhere, here or abroad. There was a time when the Boston shows excelled in this particular line but the old spirit of rivalry between skillful gardeners aided and abetted by equal ardour on the part of their employers, has apparently died out completely and it is now several years since anything exceptional in plant growing and training has been seen at the Boston exhibitions. Of course, it goes without saying that the premiums offered for such productions have no relation to the cost of growing them, and in many cases the first prize will hardly pay cost of transportation.

Two kinds of "shows"

In a recent letter, J. I. Donlan, recognized as a man of intelligence and taste in floral exhibition matters, writes, "Your remarks anent attractions at shows in your last issue were to the point. If we must have these lamentable ways of staging things let them be confined to one day to be known as Growers' Day, then have the materials given over to experts to arrange in the most attractive manner." We are not prepared to say that Mr. Donlan's suggestion is entirely practical but in principle it is in accord with what we have been preaching these many years. Our communication from Rochester relative to the great popular success of the show in that city, which appears in this issue, would seem to indicate that the enterprising florists and gardeners of that section have succeeded in solving the question of public support for floral exhibitions on exactly the plan we have been advocating. Pictures we have seen of the exhibition in Chicago, held at the same time, show the opposite extereme—a growers' show on time-honored lines simply. Being in a large degree a trade affair on account of the participation of the C. S. A., perhaps no other course was entirely feasible at Chicago on this occasion but we are not at all surprised to hear that the attendance of the public was very slim.

"Free seeds"

Our seed trade readers will be interested to know that in the estimates recently submitted to Congress it has been recommended that the distribution of ordinary vegetable and flower seeds be discontinued and that the part of the $300,000 heretofore devoted to this use be applied to some better purpose. If Congress sees fit to accept the recommendation, we are informed that it is the intention of the Department of Agriculture to give particular attention to the securing and distribution of new and valuable seeds and plants, including forage crop seeds, whose character and quality will be thoroughly known and tested; and pains will be taken in every instance to see that a sufficient supply is sent to make it worth while for the individual farmer to make an experiment. Apart from the very natural disapproval by the seed trade of the seed distribution as carried on in recent years, there is no question that from the most favoring standpoint it has been a superfluity and an unnecessary drain on the government purse. This collecting and giving away of seeds often of a grade far inferior to the stock sent out by reputable seedsmen has put the Department in a ridiculous light before the public and its discontinuance would be hailed with satisfaction by many other than the seed trade people. While on the subject we would say that the work of collecting and disseminating seeds and plants or experimental purposes, as conducted by the Office of Foreign Seed and Plant Introduction, of the Bureau of Plant Industry, appears to have been wisely conceived and well carried out.

THE ROCHESTER SHOW.

Rochester's Fourth Flower Show, which came to a close on Saturday, November 8th, will be remembered as one of the most successful which have been held, both in attendance and in the excellence of the exhibits. Although the correct figures of the attendance are not quite ready it is thought that in the neighborhood of 18,000 people paid admission to the hall in the five days the show was open and in no instance was anyone heard to remark but that the general plan and arrangement was superior to that of any previous exhibition held by the Rochester Florists' Association

Rochester's Flower Show differs from the general run of exhibitions in that no prizes or awards of any kind are offered, those having charge of affairs believing (and, the past successes have proved this to be a fact) that if you wish to interest the people in flowers to such an extent as to get them to pay their good money to go to a flower show, it is necessary that the flowers you are exhibiting should be placed there in an artistic manner in order that they may lose none of their beauty, and when this is done it seems to us that a flower show planned and arranged as we have it in Rochester can be made to pay for itself and possibly may show a slight profit. The latter, however, has not been our aim. The thing is to get the public interested in flowers so that more flowers will be used by the people and to this end we have eliminated the long and tiresome rows of tables of the conventional flower show with the exhibits crudely arranged thereon, and, in their stead, have placed a beautiful garden through which the people can wander at their leisure and while admiring may listen to the strains of sweet music.

The plan this year was drawn up by William Pitkin, Jr., a prominent landscape architect of this city, the garden effect being of early German design. The entire main hall was surrounded by a hedge of arborvitae about six feet high which acted as a background for the exhibits, the points where the walks intersected being connected by arches of the same material and the ceiling hung with garlands of wild smilax illuminated with special lighting fixtures. The entrance to the annex or new part of the hall was reached by a lofty archway directly in front of which was placed a large fountain—that, too, being of early German design—which was beautifully illuminated by electric lights. The ceiling of this part of the hall was hung with laurel roping which gave it a very striking appearance and at the rear of the fountain the Ladies' Auxiliary Florists' Association conducted a Tea Garden under the management of Mrs. Dunbar, which was a very successful undertaking and a great convenience to the people.

In the annex a new feature was added this year—namely, two dining rooms elegantly furnished in which were arranged elaborate table decorations under the supervision of Felix Albert. These rooms were the rendezvous of the lady visitors and created a great deal of interest and in the future exhibits of this kind will be given even more attention. The rest of this hall was devoted to the display by the Rochester Parks Department, a wonderful exhibit containing besides a vast amount of chrysanthemums, a collection of hardy fruiting shrubs of the North Temperate Zone, of which there were 170 species on exhibition, all to be found growing in the Rochester Parks. This collection was classified and arranged by Mr. Horsey under the direction of John Dunbar and great credit is due these gentlemen for this very fine display.

The main hall was occupied entirely by the private and commercial establishments. Among those exhibiting were: Mrs. Gilman H. Perkins, gard. Alex. Lothien; Hiram Sibley, gard. Etienne Berry; Mrs. W. A. Wadsworth of Geneseo, N. Y.; Mrs. G. D. B. Bonbright, gard. H. Watson; Mrs. W. D. Ellwanger; Mrs. W. S. Kimball, gard. Colin B. Ogston; Mrs. George R. Fuller; James Vick's Sons; Jacob Thomann & Sons; George B. Hart; Frank Bennett, Barnards, N. Y.; George J. Keller; F. R. Schlegel Sons; H. P. Neun; Crosman Bros.; Charles Suhr; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; Patten & Co., Tewksbury, Mass.; The Rhinebeck Violet Growers' Association; F. R. & P. M. Pierson, Scarborough, N. Y.; David Scott, Corfu, N. Y.; H. C. Salmon; George Crooke & Co.; Albert Rayton. Lord & Burnham Co., made an unique exhibit by placing at the end of the main hall a beautiful tablet in bas-relief acting as a terminal to the general scheme, the subject of which was symbolical of the flower show.

DRACAENA ROTHIANA.

One of W. A. Manda's favorite specialties and well entitled to a place among the very best decorative plants for the home, greenhouse or outside in summer. It stands the common conditions and usual neglect in a living room in a most nonchalant manner, seeming not to care about temperature or neglect in watering, being a rival for the tough old Aspidistra, which is commonly recognized as having more lives than a cat.

EXHIBITION NOTES.

The Rhode Island State Corn Show will be held in the Mathewson Street M. E. Church, Providence, R. I., on December 5 and 6.

We hear that the E. G. Hill Company carried off many honors at the big Cleveland Show, worthily won by the high quality of their sterling novelties in roses and carnations.

In our list of awards at the New York Horticultural Society's exhibition we did not get in the silver medal won by Robert Scott & Sons, Sharon Hills, Pa., for Killarney Brilliant. This rose is well described in its name and is regarded by good judges as destined to have a future as a florists' rose as brilliant as is its radiant color.

An attractive feature of the chrysanthemum show at Worcester, Mass., was a Japanese garden arranged by President E. W. Breed. The principal plant and flower exhibitors were L. C. Midgley, H. F. A. Lange, Denholm & McKay, Mrs. C. W. Wells, the Knowlton estate and Forbes & Forbes. There was an excellent display of apples.

Clubs and Societies

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The meeting on Tuesday evening, November 18, was attended by a large concourse of members, who were disappointed by the inability of the lecturer of the evening to appear on account of illness, but who were well repaid for their trouble in the spicy discussions that were precipitated by the inquisitiveness of some of their number. It was a really enjoyable meeting with much good nature apparent throughout. No less than twenty-three new members were voted in.

On the exhibition platform were some fine snapdragons from the secretary, W. N. Craig, which Mr. Craig said were grown from seed planted last April. A. M. Davenport's Lorraine Sport made a very handsome object on the exhibition platform. It was commented upon as the best sport from Lorraine begonia thus far. Very compact, with flowers much larger than the type; habit more robust and plant easier to handle and pack than Cincinnati as the foliage is not so large. Alex. McKay was represented by a grand specimen of Begonia Baron Rothschild, which he said was grown from a leaf cutting one year ago, and which he says is far superior to Lorraine in keeping qualities in the dwelling house. He also had some specimen chrysanthemum blooms. Answering a query he gave the names of Well's Late Pink, William Turner, Ramapo, Mrs. Gilbert Drabble, H. S. Converse, and Merza as a first-class six for show blooms. S. J. Goddard had carnations Yellow Stone and on behalf of Baur & Steinkamp, Radiance. Patten & Co. showed Princess Dagmar and Seedling 561, a lovely pure-toned light pink. W. W. Edgar Co. showed a fine plant of the new Germania azalea, a very promising early flowering variety, and some small plants of Mme. Petrick grown on own roots.

During the examination of Mr. McKay on chrysanthemum growing, Duncan Finlayson gave a glowing description of the giant specimen plants he had seen at the New York show. The question of the methods by which these enormous plants had been grown and the comparative skill required as between old clumps held over and one-stem plants from cuttings brought out some rapid-fire wit and repartee between the enthusiastic admirers of Messrs. Waite and Canning and the critics of their accomplishments as displayed in New York.

The deaths of P. S. Duke and E. L. Pierce were reported and Messrs. Stewart, Craig and Finlayson were appointed to prepare resolutions on the latter.

Awards were made as follows: Report of merit to Alex. McKay for Begonia Germania and A. M. Davenport for Lorraine Sport. Honorable mention to W. W. Edgar Co. for azaleas and poinsettias; Faulkner Farm for snapdragons; Patten & Co. for carnation seedling, No. 561, and S. J. Goddard for carnations Yellow Stone and Radiance.

Officers were nominated as follows: President, W. J. Kennedy; vice-president, Herman Bartsch; treasurer, Peter Fisher; secretary, W. N. Craig—all present incumbents. Executive committee, Messrs. Peter Miller, Geo. M. Anderson, Jas. Wheeler, Eber Holmes, W. J. Patterson, B. Hammond Tracy, W. J. Stewart, K. Finlayson, W. J. Collins, A. E. Robinson, James McIntosh and W. C. Rust, from which list four are to be chosen.

The landscape gardening class started on Monday evening, November 17, with approximately twenty members and will meet regularly on Monday evenings.

Swastika Brand Cannas

This peculiar shaped Swastika is an ancient symbol meaning Good Luck, or the four winds of Heaven

For years we have used it in our catalog to mark the Cannas of our own development. Gradually our customers have associated the Swastika with Conard & Jones Cannas, and the famed work of Antoine Wintzer.

Now that we are listing over eighty varieties, fully two-thirds of which are our own production, it seems only logical to give them the brand name of Swastika, for quite the same reason that our friend Ward, for instance, calls his bulbs, "the Horseshoe Brand."

We believe that selling them under a brand in this way will be of a special advantage to both dealers and those who wish to catalog them.

Our list is now ready. Among them are some new things, which, after passing Mr. Wintzer's three years' test, are ready for you and your customers.

Among the number is the splendid broad petalled "Panama," a fine, regal, free-flowering member of the family, that is getting itself much talked about.

Send for our list. Get your order in early.

Department of Plant Registration.

Frederick Lagerstam, of Belle Haven, Greenwich, Conn., submits for registration, the chrysanthemums described below. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objections to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

"Mary Ellen"—Sport from Dr. Enguehard. Habit, growth and foliage the same as Dr. Enguehardt. Flower is a light terra-cotta with a blush of pink.

Charles L. Baum, of Knoxville, Tenn., submits for registration, the chrysanthemum described below: Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objections to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

"Lena Baum"—Sport from Chas. Rager, or Chas. Razer. Color light yellow, Jap. incurved. A better grower and larger flower than its parent and considered one of the best yellow commercial varieties of its kind. It is practically perfect in form, finish, stem and foliage, and is a very easy grower.

Public notice is hereby given that, as no objections have been filed to the registration of the fern "Pteris Krinkeii," by Henry Krinke & Son, of St. Paul, Minn., same becomes complete. JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

ST. LOUIS FLORIST CLUB.

This club held a very interesting meeting last Thursday afternoon. After the regular routine business the spring flower show came up for discussion, after which it was voted to place the matter in the hands of the publicity committee and report their action at the next regular club meeting. Secretary Beneke read a letter from President-elect Theo. Wirth, of the S. A. F., asking for the selection of names suitable for state vice-presidents. It was decided that this be left in the hands of the trustees. Dr. Geo. T. Moore, director of the Missouri Botanical Garden was on motion elected an honorary member of the club. Secretary Beneke announced a few delinquent members and it was moved to allow them one more month time to pay before being dropped.

Robert J. Windler, as a representative of the Retail Florists' Association, asked the club to co-operate with them in asking the local wholesale florists not to publish their names in the classified list of the telephone directory. This brought forth a big discussion and the proposition was voted down as the Florist Club was composed of members in all branches of the trade and the Retail Association only of retailers.

John Held, a local grower, showed a vase of new pompon chrysanthemums. A bunch of 50 carnation Philadelphia was sent for staging but came in such poor condition the trustees thought best not to exhibit them and will look for better shipment for the next meeting.

R. Marshall brought this interesting meeting to a close with a fine lecture on Greenhouse Heating, which held the growers to the last. The next meeting will take place on Thursday afternoon, December 11th.

A HARDY SALVIA.

Last year we had occasion to mention approvingly Salvia Greggii, a hardy species from Texas. Messrs. Baker Bros., who are advertising this promising garden plant in this issue have a letter from W. H. Wyman of the Bay State Nurseries, North Abington, Mass., stating that it had been given a trial as to hardiness and the crowns had lived through last winter satisfactorily in a somewhat sheltered position.

Salvia Greggii

NEW, HARDY EVERBLOOMING RED FLOWERING SHRUB

A Native of the Cold, Arid Mountains of West Texas

Extremely hardy. Has withstood a temperature of ten degrees below zero. Is a great drouth resister. It flourishes and blooms profusely in the hottest and driest weather. It is as near an everblooming plant as we have ever seen. It begins to bloom in early Spring soon after growth commences. The blossoms literally cover the plant for two months or more. Then for a few months it does not bloom so freely, but is perhaps never without some flowers. In the Fall it puts on another full crop of blossoms that continue till long after the early frosts have set in. It requires a killing freeze to check its flowering.

The color is an indescribable lovely shade of red. It is a dark, soft cerise crimson, much the color of a well-grown American Beauty Rose. It has none of the harsh, glaring shades of the Salvia splendens. The beautiful color is perhaps the most attractive feature of this novelty.

It is a hard-wooded shrub. Grows three to four feet high and three to four feet wide in a compact globe, very full and neat in appearance. It is beautiful when massed in a solid bed, and is as useful as the Spiraea Van Houttei for bordering shrub beds. It is not so tall, but is as compact and graceful as the Spiraea, and in addition it is a blaze of beautiful red nearly all the season.

The very important question as to where it will grow has not been fully demonstrated, though we are fully convinced it will succeed in nearly every State of the Union. Young plants in Philadelphia, Pa.; Lexington, Mass.; North Abington, Mass., and Parsons, Kansas, went through last Winter in the open ground without protection. We have never heard of their being damaged by cold weather anywhere, but we do not know of their being exposed to anything colder than ten degrees below zero.

SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, Chas. C. Massie, Minneapolis, Minn.; 1st vice-president, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, N. Y.; 2nd vice-president, W. F. Therkildson, Painesville, O.; secretary, C. E. Kendel; assistant secretary, S. F. Willard, Jr., both of Cleveland, O.

WALTER MOTT'S NOTES BY THE WAY.

Troy, N. Y.

Gordonier Sons & Co. report an exceptionally good bulb season. They are busy with the new seed catalogue.

Sambrook Bros. gave a special chrysanthemum exhibition with an exceptionally fine stock. Chadwick Supreme is considered the best mid-season white here.

Albany, N. Y.

Fred A. Danker is working on a new catalogue that for style and completeness will surpass anything yet attempted. The landscape department is an assured success.

H. G. Eyres has fully recovered from a long spell of sickness and realizes he has some excellent friends among his customers who are glad to see him on deck again.

One of the surprises in the seed trade was the transit of Louis Schaefer from Eberle's to the Shearman house where he will fill a similar post as western representative.

Geo. H. Price, the prominent seedsman, says he has customers on his books still who purchased their first bill of seeds the first year of business and relies almost entirely upon the reputation he has built up for a continuance.

Auburn, N. Y.

Alfred Patrick, accompanied by Mrs. Patrick paid quite a visit to New York City, making a round of the chrysanthemum shows. It is refreshing to hear him describe the many advances made in the quality of stock of which he is a capable judge with experience of almost half a century. During their absence, the business was well taken care of by the two sons in charge of the houses and store.

Syracuse, N. Y.

Henry Youell, as representative of the craft both in the seed and flower branches has received many compliments from prominent visitors regarding the exhibits at the State Fair and predicts a still larger showing next season, introducing several new ideas.

NEW CORPORATIONS.

Rogers, Ark.—Jones Bros. & Co., nurserymen, capital stock, $400,000.

Grafton, Ill.—Rippley Manufacturing & Steamboat Co., capital stock, $15,000.

Creston, Ohio—Red Oak Seed Co., capital stock $10,000. Incorporators, A. C. Gustafson and others.

New Hyde Park, N. Y.—Long Island Seed Company, capital stock, $100,000. Incorporators, Francis B., Sarah M., and Alice L. Garvey.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—A. J. Brown Seed Company, capital stock, $200,000. Incorporators, President and treasurer, A. J. Brown; vice-president, T. Hershel Brown; secretary, E. B. Seymour.

Notes.

The J. C. Peppard Seed Co., of Kansas City, Mo., has increased its capital stock from $100,000 to $115,000.

The Braslan Seed Growers Company representative is leaving San Jose, Cal., for Eastern trade centers this week on his annual visit to the customers of the firm.

Chicago, Ill.—The seed stores are the leaders in getting ready the Christmas offerings. Already attractive displays of all the best sellers are being temptingly arranged, and the fact that the holidays are but a few weeks away is impressed upon the callers, catching the early orders.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

"Tree Talk," for November, published by Frost & Bartlett Company, Stamford, Conn., is an interesting and instructive 28-page issue. This is the second quarterly number. We understand that the publishers contemplate making it a monthly.

Bulletin No. 113 of the Agricultural Experiment Station of the University of Missouri is devoted to the culture and care of strawberries and especially valuable information on commercial fertilizers for strawberries by W. H. Chandler. Copies may be obtained by addressing the Station, Columbia, Mo.

Ohio State Horticultural Society; Annual Report for 1913. An interesting and instructive publication of 144 pages, being the record of the 46th Annual Meeting held at Zanesville, January 22-24, 1913. The topics treated are mainly appertaining to fruit and vegetables and farming problems, many of them from the pen of able and experienced writers.

The 53rd Annual Report of the Board of Park Commissioners of Hartford, Conn., has been received. The park department of Hartford is recognized far and near as a model to work up to. The report before us is especially interesting from the attention given to the activities associated with the playgrounds, and the many fine illustrations of this all-important feature. A splendid portrait of Charles E. Gross, who retires from the Commission after 18 years' service, is inserted as a frontispiece. Superintendent George A. Parker is to be congratulated, as always, on the completeness and thoroughness of his report.

FIRES.

St. Louis, Mo.—The greenhouse of St. Joseph's Academy was destroyed by fire on the morning of November 12th.

Sandusky, Ohio—Fire destroyed six buildings, boiler room and office of George F. Hartung, South Campbell street, on October 21st, causing a damage of $7,000, partly covered by insurance.

At the last meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club all the present officers were renominated for next year: President, Guy French; vice-president, Alex. Henderson; treasurer, E. F. Winterson; secretary, James Foley; trustee, Geo. Asmus.

CHICAGO NOTES.

The North Shore Floral Co. moved into its new store, 849 Irving Park Boulevard, last week.

R. C. Schiller is again at his home in Evanston, after three weeks in a hospital following an operation.

Alex Henderson Co. are just unpacking a large shipment of Japanese bulbs, Lilium auratum, rubrum, etc.

Another retail store is added to Chicago's long list in the outlying district. It is J. J. Kolar & Son's at 5115 W. 25th street.

John F. Kidwell & Bro., whose store and greenhouses were badly injured by fire recently, have the repairs well under way and business is now carried on again.

There seems to be something unusual in the fern conditions this year. The only ones who appear to feel easy are those whose stock is secured by good contracts.

A rose grower for J. F. Kidwell at his Belmont place, was found dead Sunday night, beside the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R. R. He had been with Mr. Kidwell three months, but no one knows of his family or friends.

Two carloads of hydrangea plants that had come all the way from Belgium, to be frozen in the big snow storm, will be a disappointment to Poehlmann Bros., who have refused to accept the stock. It means just that many less plants for Easter.

A visit to the preparing rooms of the Poehlmann Bros. store, reveals the fact that no time is being lost in getting everything into shape for the coming rush and the holiday season will be one of good stock, clean, fresh and with plenty of variety to choose from.

The Wholesalers' Credit Association has not yet materialized and the time of the old one has expired. Though no meetings have been held during the past week, considerable interest is known to exist and the outcome of a strong association is predicted by many.

Arthur Bloome is receiving the congratulations of his friends, many of whom were taken by surprise, when they received the announcement of his marriage with Maude Margaret Lau, which occurred at River Forest on Nov. 5th. The groom is well-known to the trade, having been many years with his brother, Paul Bloome, in their retail store on No. Clark street. Mr. and Mrs. Bloome will reside at 2749 Hampden Court.

Work is progressing rapidly on the factory at 31st street and Spaulding avenue, rented by the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., which supersedes the well-known Foley Mfg. Co., formerly at Western avenue and 26th street. The factory site has some advantages over the old one, being on the Illinois Northern whose tracks, unelevated, run close by and whose side tracks enter the factory, and is of the same easy access to callers, being close to Kedzie avenue, a main, north and south street car line. Philip J. Foley says factory will be ready in the shortest possible time and that the firm is already handling estimates on its new work.

An annual event, always of great interest to the public, is the opening of the chrysanthemum shows at the parks. At the conservatories in Garfield Park, said to be the largest park conservatories in the world head gardener August Koch had the exhibit ready for the public Sunday, Nov. 9, and in spite of the storm, thousands of people were in attendance. The large floor space has an oval center bed 75 feet long entirely filled with white varieties. The side beds slope from the floor to the roof and a fine color effect was made by using pink shades running from white to the deepest rose on one entire side and yellow running through bronze and red on the opposite. Specimen plants grouped at either end were exceedingly fine, a Zenoba with over 1000 blooms being prominent. At the four corners are grouped 1200 single-stemmed plants in 100 varieties, many of them of the newest kinds. Totty's single red, Alex Rowbottom, held the place of honor as the largest of the singles. The grower, Louis Heidtmann, for many years with the park, is an enthusiast and a student in his work, and the new varieties are tried as they come out. As all plants are plainly labeled a visit here is an opportunity to see what is being developed in the chrysanthemum world.

Visitors: J. McHutchison, New York; Mrs. Baumgarten, Milwaukee, Wis.; J. E. Matthewson, Sheboygan, Wis.; A. R. Leidiger of Edlefson Leidiger Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; Walter Mott, representing Benj. Hammond, Beacon, N. Y.; Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

Paul Klingsporn has left Berger Bros. and will locate in the west.

Samuel J. Irvine, late with Louis Burk, has opened a flower store at 807 North Broad street.

Mr. and Mrs. John N. May and Alexander Montgomery and son were guests of John Burton last week.

H. C. Heileman has sold out his flower store on Germantown avenue and will go into other business.

Gustave Koethe has purchased additional land at Roxborough, for the further extension of his florist business.

Billy Stevens, late with John Burton, is now on the sales staff of Berger Bros. He is proudly wearing a gold watch, presented to him by his late employer "for long and faithful service."

Thanks to the fireproof character of the Niessen Building no damage was done to the main floor where the Niessen business is conducted from the fire which occurred on the second floor occupied by Koons Bros., leather manufacturers.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

Corry, Pa.—Charles Oscar Richard Miller, proprietor of the Corry Plant & Floral Company for the past two months, has left town. He is wanted by the United States Post Office inspectors for alleged fraudulent use of the mails.

A CORDIAL INVITATION

Is extended to the trade to visit and inspect our new establishment, Fifth Avenue at 46th Street, New York City.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON As a general proposition, the heavy stock of material that daily encumbered the wholesale markets when last report was made, has been noticeably reduced. This is due in part to the waning chrysanthemum output and in part, we believe, to the proclivities of the growers in holding back their cut as much as possible for the expected Thanksgiving Day call. Carnations are not very plentiful, neither are roses and both these staples have gone up a peg in market value. Violets are very scarce. Lily of the valley excellent in quality. Paper white narcissi are coming in freely. Very fine Sunburst and Killarney Queen are in evidence and they bring a good figure when on 24 to 28-inch stems. Chrysanthemums have a bedraggled look and the end is not far off.

BUFFALO The supply in roses has fallen off considerably and the conditions have got back to normal. Chrysanthemums are in full swing and have sold quite satisfactory. Some choice Golden Wedding and Maud Dean have had ready sale. There, too, is the usual amount of ordinary stuff which blocks up and are moved for whatever can be realized. So far Major Bonnaffon has not been up to previous years in quality—more of the small stuff than the good large size. Violet sales were brisk for one day only and have again fallen back to the forced sale. Lily of the valley continues in normal supply and has remained steady. Lilies are more active and there has been a call for good Beauties which are scarce. The poor quality has not sold and Milady, which are excellent are preferred. There is a good demand on asparagus and other greens, some laurel and southern smilax have been used extensively the past week.

CHICAGO The market is considered to be in a very good condition, with a general shortening up of stock. Demand has been good and while there had been no specially heavy calls, as often occurs, the great bulk of flowers moved off at fair prices. Quite a number of sweet peas are coming now, the stems of most of them being of fairly good length and meet ready sale. American Beauties are still holding second place to chrysanthemums, but no one seems to have any going to waste. Extra long stems sell more slowly than the medium grades, but this is not confined to chrysanthemum season only. The call for orchids is just now rather ahead of the supply and prices are made accordingly. The supply of good carnations has shortened and probably will remain so till after the holidays. Home-grown violets are in fair supply, the eastern stock arriving in limited quantities during the warm damp weather. There is no excess of greens in any line. Most of the wholesalers report few advance orders for Thanksgiving and do not anticipate any great demand for flowers for that day.

CINCINNATI The market still seriously feels the effect of the glut of chrysanthemums. The receipts of the shorter and medium grades are far greater than can be utilized. The glut will probably continue until Thanksgiving next week. From present indications chrysanthemums alone will be in adequate supply for Thanksgiving. Most of the other stock is coming in in limited quantities which, while more than adequate right now, will scarcely be able to take care of a strong demand. The rose supply has shortened considerably. The cut of American Beauties is short of the call for them. Carnation cut is a little heavier than a week ago. Lilies are plentiful and considering market conditions enjoy a fair call. Violets are not selling very well. Lily of the valley and orchids prove good property. "Mexican ivy" has been added to the green goods list during the past week.

NEW YORK On Saturday, owing to the opening of the Horse Show, probably, there was a decided improvement in the market. Gains were apparent all along the line. Roses, which are much shorter in supply, have stiffened up in price, especially in the lower grades. Carnations cleared out nicely. Lily of the valley took a jump with the rest of the stock, reaching 4c. and a limited supply of special stock brought $5 per 100. Cattleyas are not so much in evidence. Chrysanthemums, while not realizing more money, cleaned up much better. Taking things all together,, there is a marked improvement in the market. Southern asparagus plentiful.

ST. LOUIS The market though not any too brisk, was steady throughout the past week. The supply and quality of chrysanthemums has been good during the entire season. Carnations are up in price owing to the shortage. The fancy goods run $4 per 100 and common go at $2. Roses are holding their own so far this season, running in price from $3 to $10 per 100, with

Killarney as the bulk in supply. Some extra fine lily of the valley is now in from local growers, also paper whites and Easter lilies. Violets have a good demand and are now too plentiful. Fine demand for smilax, oak branches and asparagus.

WASHINGTON There seems to be somewhat of a scarcity of really good carnations, with the result that the price has advanced somewhat. Gardenias, too, are also to be had in very limited quantities and prices are quoted on single flowers rather than on dozens or hundreds. Single violets are not very good while the doubles have improved greatly in both quality and price. Roses are quite plentiful. The rain of Saturday put something of a crimp into the chrysanthemum sales for the Georgetown-Virginia football game and quite a few were left over. Great preparations were made for the day and store windows were gaily decorated.

HOLYOKE EXHIBITION.

One of the best flower shows ever held in the Connecticut Valley was held Thursday afternoon and evening, Nov. 13, in Windsor Hall, Holyoke, Mass., by the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Holyoke and Northampton. It was the first annual exhibition, and it was well attended. Students from Mt. Holyoke, Smith and Amherst colleges were present, and made a study of the plants and flowers along with their college course.

There were more than twenty-five entries, which included carnations, roses, chrysanthemums, orchids, flowering plants, foliage plants, table and mantel decorations. The groups arranged for decorative effect attracted most attention. A. N. Pierson, exhibited fine roses. E. J. Canning of Northampton, in about 100 square feet, staged some fine coniferous evergreens in pots, with twenty different species in the group.

The 1st prize for chrysanthemums, collection of twenty-five, was awarded to the Mass. Agricultural College; Mt. Holyoke college was second and H. W. Field of Northampton, third.

The noteworthy exhibitors were:

H. W. Field, Northampton; G. H. Sinclair, Holyoke; Mass. Agricultural College; Smith College; Mt. Holyoke College; R. S. Carey, So. Hadley Falls; Gallivan Brothers, Holyoke; A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; E. J. Canning, Northampton; N. F. McCarthy & Co., Boston; S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia; Mrs. A. L. Fraleigh, Holyoke; The Montgomery Co., Inc., Hadley, Mass.

The exhibition was such a success in every particular, that a much larger show is being planned to be held in Northampton next year.

NEWS NOTES.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The boiler shed and greenhouses of Leo Rickenbach were considerably destroyed by fire last week.

Charles H. Totty. and S. J. Reuter have decided to send out their red rose Prince E. C. de Arenberg, next year. This rose has been sold by John Young in the New York market under the name of "Red Prince," but Messrs. Totty and Reuter desire it to be sold under its proper name. This rose has made a decided "hit."

We are pleased to be able to say that C. C. Laney, Superintendent of Rochester Parks, came home from the hospital on Wednesday, November 19th, having been there three weeks. He was operated on for appendicitis. He is recovering rapidly and it looks now that he will be back to business in three or four weeks' time. His case was a most serious one, as dangerous complications had commenced when the operation was performed, but thanks to his remarkably strong, rugged constitution he pulled through all right.

The Department of Entomology of the University of Missouri is working on greenhouse insects with a view of finding more efficient methods of combating same.

Florists will confer a favor on this department by sending to it any rare greenhouse insects they may find. When sending send the insect in a small paper box or mailing tube with several leaves of the plant on which it was found, and also the name of the plant, leaves sometimes being hard to identify. Send to F. A. Varrelman, Department of Entomology, Columbia, Mo.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

David A. Bisset, who recently met with an accident while riding a motorcycle which he had just purchased, is still confined to the Emergency Hospital with a compound fracture of the knee. While he is improving, it will be quite a while before he will be able to do active work.

The store of F. H. Kramer, at 916 F street, Northwest, presents a most pleasing appearance decorated as it is for his annual chrysanthemum and celosia show and the store is daily crowded with visitors. The large greenhouse at the rear of the store is filled to overflowing with these and other flowers, palms, ferns and bulbs in dishes and jardineres.

The American Pomological Society held the first of its meetings in this city on Tuesday last at the National Museum. The initial meeting was called to order by the society's president, L. A. Goodman, of Kansas City, and addresses of welcome to the 200 or more delegates who were present were delivered by William F. Gude and by W. A. Taylor, chief of the bureau of plant industry on behalf of Secretary Houston, of the Department of Agriculture who was unable to be present. Responses were made by G. L. Tabor, of Florida, and W. T. Macoun, of Canada, and others. An exhibition of nuts and fruits displayed in the main hall and in the basement of the museum is attracting considerable attention.

COVER ILLUSTRATION.

Our front cover page this week carries a beautiful picture of the chrysanthemum display in the greenhouse at Garfield Park, Chicago, last week. Our correspondent informs us that the crowds were so great on Sunday, November 16, that the only thing to be heard was a policeman's "Move on," and nothing could be seen but the people.

RHODE ISLAND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

This society has made surprising strides in influence and numerical strength during the three years in which President Thomas Hope has been in office. That it has a good hold on the public of Providence was evidenced by the size and character of the audience that assembled at the Public Library on Wednesday evening, November 19th, to listen to E. H. Wilson of the Arnold Arboretum on the subject of plant collecting in Western China. Mr. Wilson's talk was illustrated by numerous stereopticon slides of great beauty showing the trees and flowers and rugged scenery of the vast country in which he had spent so many years, from the river planes up to the region of eternal snows. It was a great surprise to learn from Mr. Wilson how large a proportion of our esteemed garden subjects are of Chinese origin—even very many that are popularly accredited to Japan. The lecture course, of which this was a part, is under the direction of the entertainment committee of which H. L. Madison is the efficient and wide-awake chairman.

LECTURE AT NEWPORT.

J. Otto Thilow, of the Dreer Seed House, Philadelphia, Pa., lectured before the Newport Horticultural Society and Newport Garden Association, November 18, his topic being "The Canadian Rockies and Their Flora." A series of lantern slides accompanied the lecture, which gave a very clear idea of the grandeur of those lofty and snow-clad mountains with their many beautiful flowering plants in their season. It was a surprise to some in the large audience to learn from the lecturer that many kinds of plants under cultivation in our gardens are found growing more luxuriantly in the rocky regions. This was accounted for by the mountain plants being protected with a covering of snow during their long resting period, and necessary moisture supplied from the melting snows in their growing season. Among the many plants shown in the beautiful colored pictures and described by Mr. Thilow as he saw them in the Rockies were: Rhododendrons, Kalmia latifolia, aquillegias, asters, Lobelia cardinalis, cypripediums and poppies. This lecture was the first of a series to be given under the auspices of The Newport Horticultural Society and the Newport Garden Association. J. R.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The 47th annual meeting of the Minnesota State Horticultural Society will be held in the West Hotel, Minneapolis, Minn., on December 2nd-5th, 1913. The Minnesota Garden Flower Society, the Plant Breeders' Auxiliary, the Woman's Auxiliary, the Gardeners' Association of St. Paul and Minneapolis will meet at same time and place.

The joint fruit show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and the New England Fruit Show, at Horticultural Hall, Boston, last week, was a success in quality, quantity and attendance. Apples composed most of the displays and the competitive classes were well filled. N. S. Winson won the special prize for best new seedling apple of merit.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held November 12 at Glen Cove. In the monthly competition the awards were as follows:

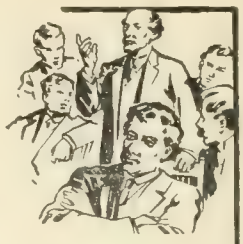
Chrysanthemums, pink, Wm. Ross, 1st; chrysanthemums, yellow, Jas. MacCarthy, 1st; chrysanthemums, white, Wm. Ross and J. MacDonald equal 1sts.

The next meeting will take place Dec. 10 at 2 P. M., when election of officers will be held. Prizes will be offered for single violets, poinsettias and lettuce.

J. MacDonald, Cor. Sec.

The regular monthly meeting of The Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held at Greenwich, Conn., Nov. 14th. The exhibition committee reported the recent show a huge success in every respect. Chief interest centered in the nomination of officers, election to take place at December meeting. We are still adding new members, two being elected and five nominated at this meeting.

W. D. Deymon & Son's prize for carnations was won by A. L. Marshall; James Stuart, 2nd. The following also received awards: P. W. Popp, highly commended for vase of anemone chrysanthemums Miss Rose N. Gaze, a very pretty white excellent for decorative work; also honorable mention for carnations; Louis Wittman, vote of thanks for roses; Alex Geddis, vote of thanks for Japanese radish.



On account of extra heavy business Wm. Morrow's paper on "Grape Culture under Glass," will be given at December meeting. P. W. Popp offers prizes for roses at next meeting.

Owen A. Hunwich, Cor. Sec'y.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—Albert Tersteeg and William Godding have purchased the entire stock of the Sunnyfield Nursery Company. They were both former employees of that concern. The new firm will be known as the Poughkeepsie Nursery Company.

New Times, New Things

The old fertilizer formulas are giving way to the new. At every farmers' meeting one subject should be the fertilizer formula that will furnish a balanced ration to the crop and keep up the fertility of the soil. To do this the fertilizer should contain at least as much as Phosphoric Acid. Our note book has condensed facts essential in farmers' meetings and plenty of space to record the new things that you hear. Let us send one to you before your Institute meets.

A supply of these is furnished by request to every institute held in several states. We will be glad to send a supply delivered free of charge to every Institute, Grange or Farmers' Club Officer on request. It contains no advertising matter.

TO DESTROY CATERPILLAR RINGS.

Editor Horticulture:

Will you please ask Mr E. Jenkins through your columns if his caustic potash spray on dormant trees will get out the "rings" containing the winter nests of the tent caterpillar? This pest is by far the worst enemy of fruit trees now in Plymouth County.

Thanking you beforehand,

Yours, G. B.

Plymouth, Mass.

Replying to G. B., I am confident that the caustic potash spray will corrode the "rings" referred to in the above communication.

FALL SPRAYING

Fruit trees, ornamental trees, evergreens, and all hardy stock susceptible to scale and other insects should be thoroughly sprayed before freezing weather sets in.

SCALINE will cleanse your trees and shrubs of San Jose, Oyster Shell and other hard scale, red spider, larvae of the aphis, grub of the locust borer, and other insect pests which secrete themselves in the crevices of the bark during the dormant season.

SCALINE is composed of a high grade of petroleum and the properties of the well known fungicide, FUNGINE; mixes readily without agitation; is used at a strength of one part to twenty parts water; containing no sediment can be applied through the finest spray nozzle, and requires no drenching of the plants, but simply misting them, to get effective results.

Gallon, $1.50; 10 gallons, $10; 50 gallons $37.50.

Obituary

C. L. Hoag.

Claudius L. Hoag, originator of the Niagara grape, died at his home in Lockport, N. Y., on November 11, aged 88 years.

William Galloway.

William Galloway, one of Philadelphia's best known pottery manufacturers, died Sunday, Nov. 16, after nearly three years' illness. Some twelve years ago he became secretary and treasurer of the Whilldin Pottery Co., at 713 Wharton street in which office his son, Walter Galloway succeeded him some 18 months ago. He was born in Philadelphia 75 years ago and for nearly 50 years has been connected with the manufacture of flower pots, architectural and garden terra cotta ware. The pottery up to some 15 years ago was at 18th and Market streets and at that time the improvements being made by the Pennsylvania railroad made the removal to another location necessary and he moved to 32nd and Walnut streets. He leaves a widow, one son and two daughters.

Another Proof That Our Iron Frame House Is Snow Proof

LAST week Wednesday, Ohio and parts of Pennsylvania were swept by a genuine mid-winter-like snow storm that put down the wires, tied up railroads and made many a grower anxious about his house.

The next day we received the following letter from C. W. Zuch & Sons of Erie, Pa.:

"The most severe snow-storm that we have had for sometime just passed over today. Toward evening we had to start propping our gutter houses, but the new Lord & Burnham house cleaned the snow all day.

The house Mr. Zuch referred to, is one of our sectional iron-frame vegetable honses, 72 feet wide and 458 feet long, which they erected.

Care of Carnations

Houses that were planted early will soon be coming into flower. By this time the young feeding roots will be coming nearer the surface and will welcome a light mulch of well-rotted cow manure and loam in equal parts. Before mulching give the surface a fair sprinkling of bone meal. Apply the mulch about half an inch deep. Syringing should now be done only in the morning and on bright days so they will have a chance to dry off before night fall. Plenty of ventilation on all clear days is especially necessary to keep the growth from becoming soft and weak. When the plants show a fair crop of flowers give liquid manure feeding about once a week. As a sure preventive for fly fumigate once a week. Follow up disbudding closely.

Poinsettias

Avoid wide fluctuations in night temperatures; 58 degrees to 60 degrees at night should be maintained, and in order to do this fire heat is necessary. No plants are more easily and speedily ruined by an excess of moisture at the roots than poinsettias. We have arrived at the critical time for poinsettias. Careful attention is required as to ventilaton, firing, etc., and watering carefully from now on is of great importance. It cannot be good policy to apply water which is near the freezing point. Some plants may not be as particular in this respect as others, but poinsettias will not stand for sudden changes in temperature or for water much below the temperature of the house they are in. Do not feed at all until the bracts are forming. Then give it twice a week in moderately weak doses. Some soot with the manure helps to keep the leaves dark green.

Gardenias

There is no reason why gardenias should not prove a paying crop if the plants are properly grown. We are arriving at a critical time with gardenias, more especially those intended for midwinter flowering, and of course most growers will want to get a good number of flowers in the cold months, while prices are high. The roots of gardenias love to be warm. The soil dries out better and the percentage of dropped buds will be materially less when a nice heat is kept in your pipes from this out. When water is supplied let it soak the soil thoroughly and let it dry out well before giving any more. If the soil is porous, as it should be, there will be no trouble with surface scum. After a time and when the roots have penetrated all the soil in the bench, in the event of the plants showing signs of exhaustion, the benches should be top-dressed with good loam and manure. Gardenias require a night temperature not much less than 70 degrees and a humid atmosphere continually.

Schizanthus

While schizanthus are tender and easily injured by frost, they, on the other hand cannot tolerate a warm greenhouse and flowers grown in a high temperature are vastly inferior. So see that they are kept in a cool house of about 45 degrees. But in order to forward plants a few of the more advanced can be given a sunny, airy house with a minimum temperature of 50 degrees. Any batch coming on for later flowering should not be allowed to become pot-bound. These are quite thirsty subjects and, once their receptacles are full of roots, want as much water as chrysanthemums, with weak liquid manure, in addition, every third or fourth watering. This is a suitable time to make an additional sowing for early spring flowering. Sow thinly in pans or flats and transplant just as soon as they can be handled. Always grow as near glass as possible, or they will get badly drawn.

Veranda Boxes for Winter

There is no doubt but what the larger cities are more in need of something green during the winter months. Yet even in the suburbs and smaller towns there are occasional calls for stock of this kind, and in most cases it will require but little pushing on the part of the local florists to do a most profitable business in this line. Bay trees, hollies, aucubas, boxwood, junipers, spruce, pine, arborvitae and biota, which are most attractive, all can be supplied at reasonable prices from our nurseries at home. Now is a good time to get these fixed up into shape. Give the boxes good drainage so that when the ground is not frozen hard the water can run off. A somewhat heavy soil rather than a sandy mixture, and one but sparingly enriched, should be used for this kind of work. In order to show these plants up to their best they are better done early so the soil can have a chance to become somewhat settled before the real cold weather sets in.

Verbenas

Propagation of verbenas should start in earnest now so as to work up a good lot of stock, this being the only means of increasing named varieties or special colors. Trim the foliage so as to obviate crowding in the sand and as well to let the air circulate among the cuttings. They will root in a cool end of the propagating bed and should be kept moist and shaded until rooted.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Christmas Azaleas; Lilies for Easter; Manure for Florists' Crops; Propagating Carnations; Soils for Winter; Freesias for Easter.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Start Early Vinery

As the first of December approaches our thoughts are turned to the starting of the fruit houses that are to furnish the early crops. The fruit growers' year seems to start from December 1st, rather from January 1st for there are several houses that can be put into motion about that time followed by the others at regular intervals if a succession of early fruit is required. Before starting any it is best to consider when the ripe fruit is needed and where there is any number of houses to be grown make up a list giving the date for starting each one. Establishments that are not growing any pot-vines will rely on the early vinery for the first grapes, which can be started on December 1st. See that all cleaning has been thoroughly done also that the border has been overhauled. Probably the border has been kept on the dry side during the last few weeks in which case give it some water, but do not water at this time if the border does no require it. There seems to be an idea prevalent that the border must be thoroughly soaked with water at the time the vines are started into growth; this is a mistake. Pot vines will be sure to dry out once in a while during the dormant season and for this reason any that are not started should be looked over occasionally and all should be watered when they are started. To ensure an even break the vines should be bent over in a way that the rush of sap to the apex is retarded and all the buds get an even share, which will mean an even break. Young vines will need tying down to get the bend on to them; older ones will bend of their own weight if the string that supports them is put in the right place. Syringe the vnes with tepid water twice daily and keep the house moist, which, with the higher temperature will start the sap to flow. A night temperature of 45 degrees, advancing from that to 50 by day during cloudy weather will suit them for awhile. Allow the house to go up to 60 degrees with sun heat. Very little air will be needed for quite a while but a crack should be got on daily for an hour at the least. Close down early (soon after noon hour), when the second syringing should be given.

Early Peach House

What has been said of the early vinery applies to the early peach house in most points. Pot trees should be started first as they respond to treatment easier than the trees in the borders. Should the two be started together the trees in the pots should have ripe fruit ten days earlier than those in the borders. Keep a night temperature of 40 to 45 degrees with the usual advance by day. We find Duke of York peach and Cardinal nectarine the earliest as well as being among the most reliable in their own sections. Have all the trees correctly tied to the trellis before starting the house.

Strawberries

With the starting of the early vinery and the early peach house a batch of strawberries can also be got on the move. These early houses are usually furnished with shelves to accommodate strawberries and no better place can be found for them. Here is where the best berries are produced both for size and flavor. They are near the glass, at all times getting the maximum amount of sun and generally being placed near the ventilators they get more air than when being grown on the benches. If these shelves are filled up at the time the house is started the temperature will suit them until the berries are ripe. Where they have to be shifted around occasionally to get the right temperature it means a lot of work and does the plants no good; in fact it is detrimental to the berries after they get large and soft enough to feel a bruise. Look the plants over before they are brought into the house, removing any dead or yellow leaves; also have the pots washed. Let them stay a few days until the soil has time to dry out a little, when each pot should be rammed to fasten the soil again which no doubt has been loosened by frosts or rains. Be sure the soil is on the dry side before attempting to ram it.

Sow More Melons

The first of December is a red letter day in the melon-growing section as well as the hard-wooded section. Fruit that is ripened from the new year up to the middle of April cannot be relied upon to be always of first-class flavor; the weather will have a big say in it. During the real cold days it is impossible to get much air on to the ripening fruit. Even suppose it were possible by having an excessive number of pipes in the house, that very cold air on the fruit would not be the same benefit to it that it would be were it naturally warm. Seeds sown now will produce ripe fruit about the middle of April and can be relied on to be of good flavor as the better weather is increasing on them as they develop. Stick to the winter varieties for this sowing; Hero of Lockinge and His Eminence are the two best. Sow the seeds singly in three-inch pots that have been well drained and washed clean. If the soil is put in dirty pots a difficulty will be experienced when the time comes to turn them out. Do not press the soil down at all, but leave it to settle with the watering.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur C. Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

The Sod Heaps

This was commented on some time back, yet no doubt there are many places that have not begun to put up any soil for the next season. There may be an early freeze that will put all work with the soil at a standstill, so if the soil heaps have not been made no time should be lost in putting them up. Good cow manure is the proper thing to lay between the layers of the sod, and where it can be had there is nothing better. Horse manure is too light, and we would not use it unless there was nothing else that could be had. Put a six-inch layer of manure between each two layers of sod which should be about a foot thick. In plowing the field where the sod is to be taken, do not plow very deep,—just deep enough to allow the men to pick up the sod nicely. We would not advise using loose soil in the heaps, unless it was necessary to do so. Using sod that is picked up with the fork is the best, and where it is possible to obtain all such, the heap will be a very good rose soil when it is turned over in the spring. We would not recommend mixing any bonemeal into the soil at this time of the year, unless it be the very coarse bone, such as is used extensively by fruit growers under glass. It is bone broken up into pieces about as big as peas, and although it is very slow in action you will find the little rose roots wrapped right around it when you take the plants out the following spring.

Picking Up the Dead Leaves

There will be some dead leaves around the plants even in the best cared-for houses, and to prevent disease and insects keep these picked up and keep everything nice and clean. Do not syringe them under the bench as is the custom with many, but pick them up and burn them as soon as possible after each syringing. The walks should be swept up clean, too, this helping to do away with large numbers of red spider and greenfly, for if there are any present in the house, some of them will come down with syringing, and there is no safer way to dispose of them than to burn them. Of course in the houses that are kept clean there will be very few, but even then there is likely to be one here and there. Better destroy it right there, so that it will not have a chance to breed its thousands of sons and daughters.

The Christmas Crop

With Christmas only a little way off, growers will be looking forward to the time when all the cut flowers are a little higher in price than at any other time of the year. The Beauties will at times come in for Christmas and the growers who have a nice promising house of these will realize a good profit. All buds that will be fit to cut on Christmas will be well formed now, or should be well formed, or they may be too late. It will not be advisable to run the houses warmer to bring them into bloom. It is better to miss the Christmas prices and have plenty of stuff during January and February, when the prices are equally as high, and sometimes higher, and far more steady. Let us hope there will be no blizzard to paralyze the trade, and that the business will be good.

Heavy Wrapping Paper

The prices that flowers will bring, will be too high to risk any frozen flowers so have plenty of heavy paper on hand, and as soon as the weather gets so cold that it will not be safe to ship the flowers the ordinary way, wrap up the boxes with the heavy paper on the outside. This will do wonders in keeping the frost out, as one sheet of good paper on the outside of the box will do the work of two sheets on the inside. Put plenty of paper on the inside of the box, too, for this is very important. As a rule newspaper can be bought very cheap, and to use it is no extra labor, so do not be afraid to use plenty of it.

Liquid Manure

As it now looks, we can safely say that the cold weather will prevail and it will not be harming the plants to use a little of liquid manure every now and then, using it quite weak to begin with, and gradually increasing the strength until it is as thick as it will run through the pipes. At times manure water is used much earlier in the season and where the plants can take it, it is very well to do so, giving the plants all they will take. As a rule, however, we seldom use it until after the turn of the year, in the Beauty houses, unless the weather is cold enough before the new year. In applying, make sure that the plants are wet enough, as it may damage them somewhat to water them with the manure water when they are on the dry side. Not that they have to be soaking wet, but wet enough so that the roots will not make a hurried grasp on the water as it leaves the hose. Good cow manure is the best thing to use for the making of liquid as it contains all the necessary elements, in about the right proportions. Where it can not be had there are various substitutes that will have to be compounded to make up as nearly as possible the same liquid that cow manure would make.

A valuable primrose

On the subject of hardy primulas, one of our contemporaries mentions four species as of especial value, but without including the one which has proved itself to be the best for this climate, viz., Primula pulverulenta. This species produces flower spikes fully three feet tall and bearing seven to eleven whorls of large dark red flowers. The peculiar powdery deposit on the stems and foliage, whence its specific name, is an additional attraction. It is one of E. H. Wilson's earliest finds on a Veitch expedition to the Chino-Thibetan border-land. It is very floriferous, remaining in flower from six to eight weeks. A portrait of this primula was published in HORTICULTURE two years ago.

Public spirit; a big asset

It is a pleasure and an inspiration to see how the city florists in Cleveland got together with one common impulse to help make their flower show a success. This fact, together with good leadership and a wise and liberal publicity policy, appears to have been the key to the pronounced success which was achieved in the face of what looked to be almost insurmountable difficulties. The spirit of loyalty to one's home town should be more generally cultivated. There are places where it is a very weak and sickly cutting. Prejudices must be ignored, old grouches forgotten and the immediate selfish interest of the individual must be pushed aside in the shoulder to shoulder alliance and organized effort for the common welfare, if we are to do our full duty to the community in which our lot is cast and eventually to ourselves. "Every man for himself" is a slogan that will ever conduce to civic dry-rot and decadence, and the man who makes this ungenerous sentiment the guide of his business policy will surely have to bear his share of the retrogression which is the invariable penalty for a community which is not a community but only an aggregation of individuals.

Get busy

A fact beyond question is that we in this country are on the verge of the greatest gardening revival America has ever seen. The unprecedented demand for hardy herbaceous material, ornamental shrubbery and evergreens, also garden bulbs, etc., as for instance the Darwin tulips and narcissi, is a sufficient index to the horticultural tendency of the times. Foreign houses are more quick to see it than the majority of our home establishments and are zealously preparing to get as much as possible of the lion's share of the business that is coming. If loyalty to the business enterprises of one's home town or section is a commendable virtue so also is loyalty to the business interests of one's country in a broader sense. As good Americans we do not like to see money going steadily out of this country for goods that are being produced in equal quality on our own soil but when, as is often the case, our nurserymen are unable to supply the goods, then the fault lies at their own door. HORTICULTURE frequently has requests for information as to where this or that new and desirable plant may be obtained and we are often regretfully compelled to direct the inquirer to foreign sources of supply. There is every inducement in the situation and out-look for our nurserymen to take a more advanced position. It ought not to be ever true that material of this sort, on which propagation is simple, cannot be procured from American sources.

Funkias or Plaintain Lilies

The indiscriminate recommending of hardy herbaceous plants by the sweeping statement: "Growing anywhere; requiring little or no care," is less noticeable today than it was from five to ten years ago. The progressive grower and nurseryman has learned by experience. Such statements are apt to mislead to utter neglect of herbaceous plantations. It is true there are a few species of flowering garden perennials making extraordinary efforts for an admirable showing when left in a semi-wild state. Polygonum, the knot-weed and Bocconia, the plume-poppy, may be mentioned as instances. This, however, being exceptional the fact remains that without proper care and previous preparation of the ground disappointments are inevitable. Strict adherence to this rule has been chiefly responsible for the wonderful advance of herbaceous flower gardens and the present high standard of their contents. Funkias, as popular inhabitants of those gardens offer many and various opportunities for effective employment. The marked ornamentality of the foliage of a number of species is an attractive feature itself. The large-leaved bluish green sorts, such as Funkia Sieboldii, Fortunei, Fortunei glauca and robusta we use in shore plantings around ponds and along creeks. They possess the natural characteristics of certain low land and swamp vegetations. In southern latitudes and throughout the Middle Atlantic States, most plantain lilies prefer a half shady position. Taking advantage thereof we may place clumps under tall-trunked trees in the thinly wooded section of home grounds and natural park landscapes. Associated together in numbers from 3 to 5, in an informal way, they aid in making the scenery richer and our walks through this section more enjoyable. Our picture of Funkia lanceolata albo-marginata represents the idea of arrangement and its effect.

The very appearance of some species of plantain lilies suggests their use for bordering purposes. Noteworthy among them is the low-growing Funkia Japonica aureo-variegata conspicuous by its strikingly handsome foliage; also Funkia undulata media picta and the small narrow leaved white flowering Funkia alba minor. The possibility of similar employment of stronger growing kinds is shown by the cuts of Funkia cœrulea and the original Funkia lanceolata. Both are plain green-leaved sorts, bearing lavender blue flowers during August and September.

FUNKIA OVATA

FUNKIA LANCEOLATA

In stateliness and beautiful foliage none eclipses Funkia ovata albo-marginata, identical with Funkia robusta elegans variegata. It is a species calling for a favorable position where it can be fully admired as a single plant. In conclusion I wish to call attention to Funkia subcordata grandiflora. I have been using it as specimen-plant on composite herbaceous borders, and also, in limited numbers naturalized under tall tree-growth. Going further, I do not hesitate recommending this old-time species for high class ornamental work in any modern formal garden, providing a half-shady place can be given. Exposed to the full midday sun the foliage suffers and the pure white deliciously fragrant flowers are apt to get burned during the hot spells of August. Planted on a border running along the north front of a residence. Funkia subcordata grandiflora proves instrumental in solving the always more or less difficult problem of establishing an attractive permanent growth in a shady situation.

Distinguished by a remarkable longevity and extraordinary hardiness plantain lilies do fairly well when left in a semi-wild state. To grow them to perfection, that is, to develop and enjoy their full beauty, requires deeply dug and well enriched ground, besides ample space for free growth. Propagating can be easily done by divisions during early spring or in fall. To obtain large ornamental specimens, plants must be left undisturbed for a number of years.

ORIGINAL GARDENERS.

HORTICULTURE has furnished us lately with serveral articles on "The Gardener and His Field." They are like almost everything else that is written, argued from the standpoint of ideal conditions. I suppose it is best for us to have an ideal set before us, or we might fall asleep by the way. Some gardeners I have known to be fond of sleep, did not climb very high in their profession, neither have some of us who are conceited enough to believe we are very much awake. I should like to read a well written book entitled, "The Success of the Gardener Who Has Failed, and the Failure of the Gardener Who Has Succeeded."

Carlyle wrote a book I believe on clothes, but I never remember seeing clothes advocated as making harmony between the gardener and his employer before. I like good clothes, but I have been taught—in fact I have read in a popular and very ancient volume, that these coverings were the result of anything but what we ought to be proud of. I have been a gardener since 1883, and during the intervening time I have worked under gardeners that were employed by royalty and other titled nobility in Great Britain, also under gardeners for American millionaires. Some of these men stood high in their profession, and held the position of friend as well as gardener to their employer, but the enviable position of friend was not attained by attire, for these men were always at the dirtiest end of the job on hand, thereby gaining the confidence and goodwill of their assistants, which is the aim of every true leader of men. It was their originality that gained the good will of their employer, and if I observe human beings correctly, it will do so not only in horticulture but in every department of life. In all walks of life the majority of us are anything but original, and I venture to assert that this great failure is the cause of lack of harmony between the gardener and the owners of estates. These gentlemen do not want what everybody else has; they are tired of sameness and that is one reason why the rich are making homes in the wilds, especially in summer. But after all is said and done, there are some mighty bad and unreasonable employers, and some very poor gardeners who are as unreasonable as they are, and how to get the two hitched would require more originality than I know of. Nothing perfect "under the sun"—not even originality.

LOCKJAW.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

In last week's issue of your paper Mr. Jenkins had an interesting article. Interesting in many ways, and many of your readers, and especially rose growers after reading would be liable to get the shakes. The letter is so peculiarly shaded that in reading it one gets the impression that the late James Brydon died from the effects of a scratch from a rose thorn. Nothing could be more misleading. Mr. Brydon, as I have always understood, got his hand scratched on a brass door knob when entering one of the green houses at South Lancaster, which later developed into blood poisoning.

We have a lot of stuff thrown at us each week by correspondents and others, and we have to wade through it, to get the real meaning of the article. There are some private gardeners who, getting hold of a Latin name, can weave a story round it that would almost make us believe that Noah was born in 1913. The rose grower has his own troubles without having any more added. It takes years sometimes to build up a trade in a commodity; then along comes some disturber and sets up a needless hue and cry which reaches the public. Money invested, experience, labor, everything is at a loss. I have had my arms scratched, and the red blood flowed and cow manure in contact at that and never have had ill effects. The most of the rose growers have gone through the same experience and do it every day. We don't know what may be in store for us in the future, but looking back many years, as far as my vision carries me, I never knew of a case where lockjaw was caused by a scratch from a rose thorn. When a boy I remember a gentleman who cut his thumb in cutting a piece of laurel, and died in a few hours. A few weeks ago a titled lady in London was stung by a wasp, and died before help could be had, and, lastly, in Natick Hospital there is a young man dying from lockjaw, the result of having stepped on a rusty nail. If Mr. Jenkins had known of those cases would he have blamed the rose thorn?

CHRYSANTHEMUM WM. TURNER IN OKLAHOMA.

The following letter which came to the office of HORTICULTURE a few days ago tells the story of the picture here shown. Oklahoma seems to be all right:

HORTICULTURE, Boston, Mass.

In your issue of HORTICULTURE, November 15th, I noticed in the account of the Connecticut Horticultural Society (Chrysanthemum Night) where a vase of William Turner, shown by Mr. Cebelius, created quite a sensation on account of some of the blooms measuring 23½ inches in circumference. I enclose photograph of three William Turner blooms measuring 26¼ inches in circumference. I only had 25 plants and the blooms all measured from 23 inches to 26¼ inches in circumference. They were grown in a bench, the soil being three inches deep.

JAMES RUST, Gardener to Charles Page,
Sand Springs, Olka.

William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., has a house of hybrid gerberas, some just showing buds. They are seedlings and planted on benches. Mr. Sim is not sure of their success as the gerberas carry a long tap root and solid beds might be more to their liking but, like all true investigators, he is trying them out and if they are a success there will be plenty of imitators.

THE EXHIBITIONS

THE CLEVELAND SHOW.

This ambitious exhibition widely advertised in advance among the trade and the public was a pronounced success in quantity and quality of exhibits, despite the handicap of the great snow storm, and the attendance was surprisingly good. The hall, a vast floor of over an acre and a half, was well decorated and the arrangement of the exhibits was very creditable, although the numerous heavy columns and low ceiling were somewhat of a drawback to effective work. The show continued from Thursday, Nov. 13, to Sunday, 16th. Carnations were especially staged on Thursday and roses on Saturday. The carnation display was very extensive and of record quality. The rose display was small in comparison, but it was exceptional in the number of meritorious new candidates for favor as commercial forcing roses and in the high quality throughout. The showing of floral work by the retail trade was a shining example for the trade of other cities and was by far the premier attraction in the eyes of the public. A miniature home and garden lay-out by J. Boddy, of the city parks, was also a powerful magnet for the visitors. Some idea of the extent of the show may be gained from the statement that there were no less than 336 entries in the competitive classes.

The "lions" of the carnation section were Cottage Gardens Co.'s magnificent new white, Matchless—well named, and Patten & Co.'s crimson Princess Dagmar. In the rose display the top-notchers were E. G. Hill's seedling Ophelia, Killarney Brilliant, S. J. Reuter's Prince E. C. de Arenberg, Hadley, and Mrs. Geo. Shawyer. In the chrysanthemum section the plant entries were quite ordinary, but the cut blooms were simply magnificent, E. G. Hill Co. and C. H. Totty both making great records. It is said that every class was filled up in this section. In the retail department the J. M. Gasser Co. presented a series of tables and other decorative work which were veritable gems of artistic beauty.

We have not space in which to publish the full list of prize awards even if that were desirable. In the chrysanthemum bloom classes first prizes were allotted as follows:

C. H. Totty, 6; E. G. Hill Co., 6; J. M. Gasser Co., 3; F. R. Williams Co., 2 and silver cup sweepstakes; Robert Weeks and A. N. Pierson, 2 each; Elmer D. Smith, 1.

Carnation 1sts as follows: E. G. Hill Co., 11 and two silver cup sweepstakes; Chicago Carnation Co., 8; Cottage Gardens Co., 1 and silver cup sweepstakes; Patten & Co., silver cup for best seedling; H. M. Weiss Sons Co., F. R. Williams Co. and N. Zweifel, 1 each.

Rose 1sts as follows: F. R. Pierson, 4 and silver sweepstakes cup; A. N. Pierson, 5; Lamborn Floral Co., 3; Cleveland Cut Flower Co., 2; C. H. Totty, 1 and silver cup sweepstakes; S. J. Reuter, F. R. Williams Co. and F. Breitmeyer, 1 each; E. G. Hill Co., highly commended for seedling Ophelia.

On decorative work the following 1sts:

J. M. Gasser Co. for chrysanthemum table, for rose table, for handle basket and for bride's bouquet; James Eadie Co., for bridesmaid's bouquet, for corsage bouquet and the Michell gold medal for basket of lily of the valley. On miscellaneous exhibits the Jas. Eadie Co. won 1st on lily of the valley, antirrhinums and hanging baskets; V. R. Gilmann on violets; F. R. Pierson on araucarias and ferns; J. A. Peterson on Lorraine begonias; Jones-Russell Co. on fern dishes; G. M. Naumann & Co. on Cincinnati begonias and C. Merkel & Sons on begonias.

PRIZE WINNING VASE OF YELLOW CHRYSANTHEMUMS

At Flower Show, Portland, Ore. Shown by Clarke Bros.

The Portland (Ore.) Floral Society put up its second annual flower show in the Armory on Nov. 11 and 12, amid a blaze of glory. It was the most spectacular show ever staged on the Pacific Coast and the public were ready to give it full recognition. We present in connection with these notes one view in this memorable exhibition and expect to show some more in a later issue.

The judges made additional report as follows:

Probably the most striking example of the above is the pictorial arrangement shown by the J. M. Gasser Co. The rare taste, artistic feeling and intrinsic beauty of this exhibit are worthy of the highest praise.

A large vase filled with palms, crotons and ferns, shown by John Kirchner, presents an excellent example of this means of decorating and is highly commended.

A vase of mignonette shown by the J. M. Gasser Co. is well grown; highly commended.

A display of araucarias, cyclamens and Pandanus Veitchii, by the Naumann Co.; is highly commended; the plants are clean and well grown.

An extremely fine exhibit of nephrolepis in many varieties and sizes, all in the pink of condition, shown by the F. R. Pierson

Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., is highly commended.

J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, shows a new begonia with bronzy foliage that appears to us to be most promising and is highly commended. The same exhibitor also shows a group of decorative plants, containing a large Dracaena Victoria, surrounded by Pandanus Veitchii and Asplenium Nidus-Avis, which is highly commended. He also shows a new seedling begonia of the Lorraine class.

The rose Ophelia is shown by the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind. The flowers were fine and well grown; a promising variety, highly commended, and we recommend a substantial award.

As an exceptional feature, the miniature landscape arranged by John Boddy, city forester, is highly commended. It shows what anyone could do with his home grounds if properly instructed.

THE POUGHKEEPSIE SHOW.

The Poughkeepsie State Armory was a fairyland of beauty during the past week when the annual flower show of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society was given, larger and better than ever. There was a large attendance and the wide range and attractiveness of the exhibits brought out comments of the highest praise.

The judges, R. W. Allen, of Hudson, and James Bell, of New York, made the awards:

The principal exhibitors and prize winners were: Levi P. Morton estate, Wm. P. Clyde, Sallford Flower Shop, F. W. Vanderbilt, Ogden T. Mills, Winthrop Sargent, Col. O. H. Payne, Benj. Willig, F. Heeremans, N. Harold Cottam, Frank Ryan, Burgevine Sons, A. C. Zabriski, J. Von der Linden and W. E. Bock.

BRITISH HORTICULTURE.

National Sweet Pea Society.

Full indications of the continued prosperity of this Society were given at the annual meeting, in London, on Oct. 20th. The committee's report referred to the prevalence of "streak." This has been a great plague in certain districts. To encourage those who are working to find a preventive or cure, the committee propose to offer the gold medal of the Society, and £10 presented by Mr. H. H. Perkins, to the first person who shall prove to their satisfaction that a real preventive or cure has been devised. Owing to the unfavorable weather, the trials held at the Burbage experimental station, Hinckley, Leicestershire, were a partial failure; to obviate this it has been decided to sow seeds this autumn instead of next spring. No awards were made at Hinckley by the Floral Committee, but the variety R. F. Felton, reserved last year for the Society's silver medal, was reported true. The award of the medal was duly made to Robert Bolton, of Warton, Carnforth, who sent the variety to the trials. The membership of the Society stands at a little under 1,100. The members learned with regret that C. H. Curtis, the capable secretary was compelled by business reasons to resign his office. The Society's gold medal is to be awarded to Mr. Curtis in appreciation of his invaluable services. H. D. Tigwell was elected secretary, and the other officers appointed were: President, Hugh Dickson, Belfast, Ireland; treasurer, Edward Sherwood; chairman of committee, F. W. Harvey (editor of "The Garden"); auditor, R. Gluyas. In the evening the members dined together, under Hugh Dickson's genial chairmanship.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SHOW AT MINNEAPOLIS PARK GREENHOUSES.

THE FIRST SNOW-FALL.

The snow had begun in the gloaming,
And busily all the night
Had been heaping field and highway
With a silence deep and white.

Every pine and fir and hemlock
Wore ermine too dear for an earl,
And the poorest twig on the elm tree
Was ridged inch deep with pearl.

From sheds new-roofed with Carrara
Came Chanticleer's muffled crow;
The stiff rails softened to swan's-down,
And still fluttered down the snow.

I stood and watched by the window
The noiseless work of the sky,
And the sudden flurries of snowbirds,
Like brown leaves whirling by.

I thought of a mound in sweet Auburn,
Where a little headstone stood;
How the flakes were folding it gently,
As did robins the babes in the wood.

Up spoke our own little Mabel,
Saying, "Father, who makes it snow?"
And I told of the good All-Father,
Who cares for us here below.

Again I looked at the snow-fall,
And thought of the leaden sky
That arched o'er our first great sorrow,
When that mound was heaped so high.

I remembered the gradual patience
That fell from that cloud like snow,
Flake by flake, healing and hiding
The scar of our deep-plunged woe.

And again to the child I whispered,
"The snow that husheth all,
Darling, the merciful Father
Alone can make it fall."

Then with eyes that saw not I kissed her;
And she, kissing back, could not know
That my kiss was given to her sister,
Folded close under deepening snow.

NUMBER, PLEASE?

The pole is ours—
With joy we snatch it!
We did it with—
Our little hatchet!

So sings Samuel George Sellers Washington Pennock—at the myrmidons of the telephone king—who tried to plant an obstruction near the entrance gate of his Lansdowne home. Samuel didn't appeal to law; he just ordered his boy to come around and cut the thing down.

"Thrice is he armed who hath his quarrel just,
But four times he who gets his lick in first."

"Ninety-eight per cent. perfect," shout the telephone people in their ads. Arthur Niessen thought it should read "two per cent. perfect and ninety-eight per cent rotten." He had my sympathy. I blow up and have a fit quick when anything goes wrong but the telephone in particular gets me going. I stay away from it all I can.

We get little chunks of wisdom unconsciously sometimes, as we walk along the street, talking with a friend. The other day with John Burton, for instance. "O, yes," said he, "the telephone's a great thing and we couldn't do without it but personally I prefer to telegraph a message." "Why?" "Well, for one thing, because you can stop when you are done talking, and don't have to say a whole lot of things you don't want to say, and that were better left unsaid." Sounds good.

G. C. Watson.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Rules Governing the Society's Jurisdiction of Rose Test Gardens, Adopted and Passed at Executive Meeting Held in New York City, Nov. 10, 1913.

The following rules of the American Rose Society shall be adhered to by any experiment station or park system accepting the authorization of the American Rose Society in its test garden for Roses.

There shall be submitted for trial not less than five plants of each variety of the bedding type, and not less than two plants of the climbing and pillar types.

Records shall be kept of each variety, stating name and number of variety, classification, parentage, age of plants, and whether worked on stock or on its own roots. Two-year-old plants are most desirable for planting.

Test varieties shall remain in the garden for at least two growing seasons, where they can be judged the second season if necessary. The after disposal of the plants to be optional between the exhibitors and the authorities.

Exhibits will be inspected by the judges appointed by the American Rose Society at designated times, and awards will be officially given according to merit. The authorities will take due percaution to protect exhibits from vandalism and dissemination, and give the garden every cultural attention possible.

Each variety shall be labeled by number until judged, when a painted label stating name or number of variety, the introducer, and the award, will be posted permanently.

Dissemination of Information.

All printed information relating to these Rose Test Gardens shall be subject to approval of the American Rose Society.

Whenever possible the fullest information relating to these gardens shall be given to the public, the American Rose Society reserving the right to use any information regarding these gardens, and to copy any reports regarding the same to use in its publications, and for use in other publications.

The permanent Rose Garden Committee of the American Rose Society shall in every way possible co-operate in the securing of plants and laying out of such gardens and assist with advice where desired, in the cultivation and care of these gardens.

American Rose Society Awards.

Medals and Certificates for new Roses:

A new Rose shall be considered one which has not been disseminated for a period longer than three years.

A gold medal is offered for the best new Rose of American origin and introduction, scoring not less than 90 points.

A silver medal is offered for the best new Rose of American origin and introduction, scoring not less than 85 points.

A gold medal is offered for the best new Rose of foreign origin and introduction, scoring not less than 90 points.

A silver medal is offered for the best new Rose of foreign origin and introduction, scoring not less than 85 points.

A gold medal is offered for the best new Rose of foreign origin and American introduction, scoring not less than 90 points.

A silver medal is offered for the best new Rose of foreign origin and American introduction, scoring not less than 85 points.

Any medal or certificate awarded for a disseminated variety shall be the property of the introducer of the variety.

Certificates of merit will be awarded to all new Roses scoring not less than 80 points.

No variety shall receive more than one award. All exhibits will be judged by the official scale of the American Rose Society.

The official scale of points for judging outdoor Roses is as follows:

Floriferousness, 20; Vigor, 20; Color, 15; Size, 15; Form, 10; Subtance, 10; Fragrance, 10.

It is further ordered that the complete scores of all the entries in the competition be filed with the Secretary of the Society before the award of any medal or certificate be confirmed.

The Executive Committee of the Society reserves to itself the right of selection of the judges who shall pass upon the exhibits in the competition for these medals.

The Executive Committee of the American Rose Society reserves to itself the right to amend these rules as circumstances may deem necessary.

AMERICAN SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the American Sweet Pea Society was held at the offices of Peter Henderson & Co., New York, on Tuesday, Nov. 18th, the vice-president, A. M. Kirby in the chair. Secretary Bunyard announced that the management of the International Flower Show had donated $250 for prizes to be awarded in the sweet pea section of the show to be held in the Grand Central Palace, New York, March 21st to 28th. George V. Nash, secretary of the Horticultural Society of New York was present and reported that the council of his society invited the American Sweet Pea Society to hold its annual meeting and exhibition at the museum in the Botanical Gardens, Bronx Park, June 27th and 28th, and offered $200 in premiums. Considerable discussion ensued, the result being that the directors were unanimous in their belief that Bronx Park was too far away from the center of New York City to suit the convenience of exhibitors and to insure a good attendance on the part of the public. The dates appeared to meet the approval of the board, but it was thought that, if it were possible, the American Museum of Natural History, 77th street and Columbus avenue, would be a much more convenient and desirable building in which to hold the exhibition. A resolution was passed to this effect, and Secretary Bunyard was instructed to forward a copy of same to the Horticultural Society, and was authorized to attend the meeting of the council of that society in December when, it was understood, the matter would come up for consideration.

The secretary presented a statement covering the financial affairs of the society, which showed them to be in good shape. The preliminary schedule of premiums for exhibits at the June exhibition was drafted, and changes were made in the conditions covering some of the usual classes.

The secretary was instructed to approach the various seed houses interested in the advancement of the sweet pea, with the purpose of forming a prize fund which would amount to $500 or more. Mr. Kirby for Peter Henderson & Co., Mr. Burpee, for W. Atlee Burpee & Co., and Mr. Bunyard for the house of Arthur T. Boddington, each subscribed $50 toward this fund. Lester L. Morse, for C. C. Morse & Co., of California also subscribed $25. Much enthusiasm was manifest at the meeting, and from the arrangements made and prospects as reported, the exhibition in 1914 should outrival all previous exhibitions of this society.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The St. Louis Retail Florists' Association held a meeting November 17, at Beers Hotel, with quite a good attendance.

At the meeting of the Minnesota State Florists' Association on Nov. 21st, C. W. Johnson, secretary of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, gave a lecture on chrysanthemums.

The Engelmann Botanical Club held its first meeting since last summer at A TULIP BED.

Bulb planting has been in progress for some time in the Department of Parks, Borough of Brooklyn. The accompanying picture is from a photograph which is on file in the office of the Department, showing one of last season's formal tulip beds. A suitable location for this monster flag, 100 feet long and 65 feet wide, was found at Seaside Park, at the end of Ocean Parkway, Coney Island, where people could enjoy seeing it. The flag consumed 33,000 tulip bulbs, 6,000 pansies, 1,000 daisies. The kinds used were White Hawk and Couleur Cardinal tulips for the stripes; the Union was made of Giant Emperor William pansies, and the 13 stars, each of them measuring four feet through, took an additional thousand Bellis perennis (Longfellow). The pole was planted with Improved Yellow Prince tulips to give a desired color contrast.

the Missori Botanical Garden. After the meeting they were escorted to the big conservatory to view the chrysanthemum show.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington, scheduled for Tuesday evening, December 2, will prove a very important one as there are many matters of grave importance to the trade to be brought up for action.

The regular monthly meeting of the Cook Co. Florists' Association, Chicago, was held Nov. 20th. A committee consisting of the president, secretary and trustees of the Cook Co. Association, was appointed to formulate a letter to the Chicago Florists' Club. Some fine begonia plants were exhibited by Peter Pearson. The December meeting will be held on the 11th, and all members having any Christmas plants to exhibit are requested to bring them at that time.

The regular meeting of the New London Horticultural Society was held on the 13th inst. It was fruit night and a good display of apples, pears and medlars was to be seen. Special mention could be made of those exhibited by Gustav Neumann, Alfred Flowers and Dr. Rogers. There were also some good chrysanthemum blooms, mostly late varieties and pompons. Stanley Jordan gave an interesting talk on his visit to England.

ANGIOPTERIS EVECTA.

Can any reader give me any authentic information respecting the history, native habitat, cultural requirements, etc., of the above? I understand it is a species of tree fern but do not find it listed in any of the ordinary horticultural works.

HORTICULTURE PUBLISHING CO.,

Gentlemen:—Re. Angiopteris evecta, I wish to state that this species is widely distributed throughout Asia, also occurring in China and Japan. It differs considerable in from what region it is imported. It has been introduced a good many years ago and is found generally in fern collections at botanical gardens or public conservatories. It is not a tree fern but makes a heavy crown something like an elephant's foot from which it sends out very large twice and three times divided fronds of thick leatherly substance. It is a plant that will reach large dimensions and needs a similar culture as any large growing fern. I have a large specimen of it in my collection, as it forms a fine object for exhibition purposes. W. A. MANDA.

TWO CATERPILLARS THAT HAVE TROUBLED FLORISTS.

A fern-destroying caterpillar is described in a new bulletin (No. 125) issued by the Government's Bureau of Entomology. The pest comes from Florida, and has made its appearance in northern greenhouses, particularly in the District of Columbia, Illinois, and Ohio, having undoubtedly been introduced there in importations from Florida.

The caterpillar has the same habit as cut worms, of cutting or severing portions of the fern plant, apparently destroying more than it needs for food. As it is always warm in the greenhouse where it works, the insect does damage in winter as well as in summer. It attacks the tender leaves, especially the growing tips of young fronds, thus checking any attempt or the plant to replenish its dying parts.

The moth that lays the eggs from which this caterpillar is hatched is seldom seen by day. When aroused it usually flies down under the benches. Many moths are caught in spider webs in dark corners of the greenhouses. The color of the larvae varies from yellow or bright green to nearly black. Its length is about an inch and a half. A cut in the bulletin illustrating both moth and caterpillar will assist the fern growers to identify it.

The District of Columbia fern growers have experienced much trouble in treating this pest. Finally, however, the insect has yielded to the method of hand-picking, which, although somewhat laborious, seems to be the most efficacious way of overcoming it.

Another caterpillar that attacks rose bushes and young trees is described in a new bulletin (No. 124) compiled by the same entomologist. Hand-picking is advised to control the ravages of this insect in case its work has not been too extensive, precaution being taken to use a glove to avoid being "stung." Bushes or trees may be sprayed with Paris green or arsenate of lead if there is no danger of poisoning human beings thereby.

It is only within recent years that this slug-like caterpillar has been known to injure roses. It has also been remarked that the larvae feed on wild cherry, oak, chestnut, hickory, paw paw, bayberry or wax myrtle, dogwood, plum, apple and pear trees.

The new bulletin contains a cut of the rose slug-caterpillar which will interest both rose growers and nurserymen. The caterpillar is described as attractively and strongly marked, and about three-fourths of an inch in length when full-grown.

FIREBLIGHT.

Fireblight is the most serious disease that attacks apple and pear trees, and occurs in nearly every part of the United States where these fruits are grown. When its cankers girdle the branches they cause the leaves to turn black, as though caused by a fire, and often to remain on the tree throughout the following winter. Fireblight is caused by bacteria, and myriads of germs are present in all freshly blighted parts of the tree and in the sticky oozo from running cankers.

While cutting out the infected parts and disinfecting them is the standard treatment recommended, the details of this work when done effectively are so many and difficult that it takes many pages of instruction and illustration to make it plain to the fruit growers. This detailed information is contained in Circular Bulletin No. 7, Crop Post Series No. 1, revised and brought to date by Professor H. S. Jackson, head of the Plant Pathology department of the Oregon Agricultural College. The Bulletin may be had free of cost by addressing a request for it to Secretary Experiment Station, Corvallis, Oregon.

List Swastika Brand Cannas

THROUGH the years and years of development under our Mr. Wintzer, the Canna has wondrously come into its own. It has bloomed out. It is the old thing glorified. From a small red bloomed sentinel, it is now the King of Bedding Plants, crowned by a riot of color blooms.

Of the eighty or more varieties that we have produced, fully a quarter of them have bronze foliage. To the large number of varying reds, pinks, yellows, and variegated combinations, we are now ready with a white. A fine, beautifully formed flower that is bound to be much in demand.

From now on, our Cannas will be sold and advertised under the name of Swastika Brand. To be able to name them and have them identified as the C. & J. productions, will be a special advantage to you in listing them in your catalog.

Send in your listing orders. Never have we had finer, fatter clumps or in such a variety. Order now and we will ship at your convenience.

German Notes.

A letter from a correspondent in Germany tells us that there they are having lots of rain in Hamburg—almost too much for the proper cleaning of lily of the valley which is still going on, and by far too much for the replanting of one and two-year pips for crop two and three years hence. Like the Holland bulb-growers the lily of the valley men in Germany have made enormous profits in recent years, in consequence of the constantly increasing demand. At Leipzig there has been no frost as yet (Nov. 7) and it is remarkable to see geraniums, dahlias, tea roses and other tender plants still in bloom. The harvest has been most satisfactory, and nursery stock, such as lilacs, roses, etc., has rarely matured its wood so well.

Germany is industrious and phenomenally prosperous, due to the saving habits of her people. Today in the country districts the houses are nearly all new; hardly any of the old-fashioned two or three-room thatched huts of twenty years ago now remain—then they were the rule.

Notes.

Des Moines, Ia.—After December 15th, The Iowa Seed Company, now located at 613-615 Locust street, will remove to 209-211 Walnut street, where they will have more room to handle their increasing business.

Announcement has been made by the Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., of an examination to be held in this city on January 7, 1914, to fill vacancies in the position of seed warehousemen to which is attached a salary of from $1,200 to $1,600 a year. Application blanks and other information can be secured from the Commission.

Members of the Maryland State Horticultural Society were given a noonday luncheon Nov. 19, as a feature of Maryland Week, by the seed firm of J. Bolgiano & son, under the auspices of the Baltimore Board of Trade, at the City Club. About 300 of the members attended, including a number of women horticulturists. City Collector Jacob W. Hook, chairman of the entertainment committee, was master of ceremonies. Roszell J. Brown, manager of the retail department of the Bolgiano firm gave a very interesting talk on the Relation of Good Seed to Good Horticulture, and to an extent his firm was going to accomplish this end, by maintaining a seed testing laboratory second to only the department at Washington. J. Henry Joyeux, field seed manager also made a most interesting talk as to the small quantity of cheap seed that is now being sold in Maryland in comparison to the quantities that were sold some years ago. E. P. Cohill made a short address and in conclusion offered three cheers for the Bolgiano dinner, which were given heartily.

THE GARDENER'S PLACE.

Apropos to the remarks of David Miller, (or shall we with pleasing familiarity call him Dave?) it must be admitted that many employers are ignorant in regard to gardening and why should not this be the case? "A little knowledge is dangerous" and we must forgive such for they know not what they do. Mr. McVeagh, when Secretary of the Treasury, said: "In every profession which uses a man's highest powers and lays rigid demand on his idealism and courage it is always safe to assume that up to a certain point these men can be overworked and underpaid because they are much more concerned with doing their work well than with being well paid for it. But when this imposition begins to reduce them and their families to poverty they do not, as workmen lower in the scale, go on strike. They quietly resign and seek some other occupation. It is a commonplace among professions in which idealism plays a part: this idealism is deliberately exploited to the disadvantage of whom it is exacted." This, I think, meets the gardener's case exactly and so long as conditions are as they are gardening must necessarily be a labor of love. Occasionally we hear that a gardener must be everything else besides being a gardener but let a gardener be true to himself and to his profession and he will have little occasion to fear any kind of employer—ignorant or otherwise. I heartily agree with David Miller that gardeners are studious, not with the thought of gaining distinction or passing examinations, but simply for the love of their profession and for their own satisfaction; surely the best kind of study.

Mr. Ebel's advice is well taken; watch your opportunity and move on if an employer is not satisfactory. Truly one is liable to be called a "floater" if one moves too often but then the floaters don't have such a bad time as some who would rather suffer any indignity than leave their situations. Certain it is that in moving frequently the gardener gains a varied knowledge which is extremely useful; indeed in factory life the floaters are considered the most skillful workmen and in my experience the same applies to the gardening profession.

Yours very truly,
VERNON T. SHERWOOD.

NEWS NOTES.

The Washington storekeepers are continuing their activity against the vendors of flowers who line the streets and offer their wares in many cases at less than the regular florists can purchase them. The florists have formed a temporary organization outside of the local club whose membership consists of wholesalers and growers as well as retailers, and have selected J. Louis Loose as chairman and O. A. C. Oehmler as secretary. They plan petitioning the District Commissioners in the matter, asking them to secure legislation which will require the street men to pay a license fee of $15 per annum, similar to that required of the storekeepers. Failing of action on the part of the Commissioners, the matter will be carried to Congress, which body makes all the laws pertaining to the District of Columbia.

CHICAGO NOTES.

Camellia plants with blossoms of a deep rose pink are particularly attractive as displayed in the store windows. They were grown at Frank Oechslin's.

Some of the down-town retailers report increased sales during the warm weather of last week, so it is again proven that "It is an ill wind that blows nobody good."

John Zeeh, West Madison street, Oak Park, has now a very pretty place and is both a grower and a retailer with well arranged store. Mr. Zeeh specializes in cyclamen from seed.

The begonia Cincinnati is steadily growing in favor with the retailers and makes a beautiful display in the windows. Its color and keeping qualities are both superior to the Lorraine.

At J. Kruchten's the Irish Fire Flame rose is being tried out this year. As a novelty it is taking well and the few blooms he has to spare always sell readily, short-stemmed stock bringing six cents.

The Land Show at the Coliseum is now in full swing. Joe Beaver, who has usually been in charge of the Chicago flower shows, has been assisting for many weeks in the preparations and speaks very highly of the exhibits which come from all parts of the United States.

At N. J. Wietor's they began cutting Sunburst in the summer and now there is a fine crop which will last till after Christmas if weather is favorable. Mr. Wietor is also much pleased with Milady and Mrs. Russell, though the wood is used for making stock, so few blooms can be cut. Next year these will be grown extensively.

Ernest Oechslin, on Madison street, River Forest, has his plant range nearly completed. There are 30,000 sq. ft. of glass and a fine new store occupies the west corner on the front. The place is now modern in every respect and Mr. Oechslin, like his brother, has an enviable reputation for growing fine plants. During the past summer the dwelling house was moved to another street and new greenhouses erected on its site, making the plant now one of convenience and well adapted to the growing of table ferns, Bostons, azaleas, poinsettias, cyclamen and other plants.

The kumquat, well loaded with fruit, to be used instead of orange plants for the holidays, is an innovation in Chicago. The difficulty and expense of securing well-fruited specimen plants of the otaheite orange, has made its use almost prohibitive and the two car loads of kumquats, which arrived here from the south last week, will give an opportunity to test its merits as a substitute. The plants are well branched, symmetrical in form, and while the fruit is smaller than that of the orange, it is more abundant. Some of the plants, 24 inches high, seen in the retailers' windows, carry from four to six dozen fruits.

Visitors: J. P. Golmis, Kansas City, Mo.; A. T. Bushong of Gary Floral Co., Gary, Ind.; Michael Segamo of Hammond Floral Co., Hammond, Ind.; August Kellner, Milwaukee, Wis.

Washington, D. C.—Fred H. Kramer, Leapley & Meyer and Gude Bros. Co., are among the interested merchants in the matter of securing better lighting for F and G streets, along which thoroughfares their respective stores are located. Work on installing a new system along Pennsylvania avenue is soon to be begun and it is hoped that the other two streets will receive attention next.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON As always, the Thanksgiving demand in Boston is all right, clearing up all the congested material that is fit to use and making a new standard of values for the coming weeks. Carnations are not doing as well as they should, however, in order to keep up to the record of past years. There are too many of them for the immediate demand. Roses are doing better, the new candidates bringing double prices, too, as compared with the old standbys, which is all right and proper. Chrysanthemums are not very fine as a rule, the rather warm weather having taken most of the nerve out of them already. Violets are slowly improving but it will require a couple of weeks of colder weather to bring them up to recognized standard. They are not over plenty, so the price stays at a respectable figure. Christmas plants are here already.

BUFFALO A full week of rain and cloudy weather and the market has finally got in such condition that prices are more satisfactory all around. The quantity of stock has shortened especially on the rose end and select stock touched the 12c. mark. Beauties are scarce and the prices also advanced. Chrysanthemums are enough and the quality good. Bonnaffon has been in heavy supply and has been the best seller, but mostly in medium grade and price. Lily of the valley, violets, lilies, stevia and Roman hyacinths are good. There are too many paper whites and too much smilax.

CHICAGO As the season advances prices are better on chrysanthemums though not by any means excessive. This week's sales will be the heaviest of the season, but there are still two weeks before the queen of the fall will be gone. With plants the same condition prevails, the late varieties only being left. Carnations are plentiful and are not expected to reach so high a price as on some Thanksgivings. Killarney and Sunburst roses are both very pale, the unseasonably hot weather of the past week having faded them out, but they are selling without a reduction in price. There is not a particularly large supply of American Beauties coming into the market now. Bouvardia, in pink and white, is here in limited quantity and quickly bought up. The warm weather caused some eastern violets to arrive in poor condition, but with the lower temperature quality is good and stock moves quickly. A few butterfly sweet peas and a fair supply of common ones are to be had. Stevia is not meeting with much demand and paper whites sell slowly. Green is in good supply.

CINCINNATI The market has tightened considerably in some lines. The demand from out-of-town is very strong. Bright, warm weather for the last week has brought on blooms very fast and probably enabled us to have an adequate supply for Thanksgiving. Quite a few of the flowers, however, were soft from the effects of the sun's rays. Chrysanthemum receipts include some very fine White and Yellow Chadwick and Mrs. Jerome Jones. Pompon receipts are also large. Rose cuts are growing in size. The demand for them, while good, was during the larger part of last week hardly strong enough to take up all. The American Beauty cut is small and receipts clean up quickly. Carnations are coming in better both in respect to numbers and quality. Other stock in usual variety.

NEW YORK The situation is somewhat improved in this market, prices being maintained fairly well on some items and the overwhelming surplus on others being now well under control. The Thanksgiving hustle will cut off the overstock of chrysanthemums which has been an obstruction in the way of the movement for better prices on staple goods. Quality on roses is improving, despite the abnormally high temperatures which have a debilitating effect on most varieties. Carnations are increasing in number but not advancing much in quality. The approved rose novelties will have a clear field this year and will bring sensational prices.

PHILADELPHIA The warm weather has been against the keeping quality and finish of stock and while there has not been a great deal of vim and life to the market still on the whole it has been fairly satisfactory. There has been some surplus, of course, especially in chrysanthemums and white roses. The former are now past the meridian but there are still plenty of good flowers around and will be for some time. The best now are Bonnaffon, Chadwick and Eaton—both yellow and white in each. A few Jeanne Nonin have just made their appearance. Prices on American Beauty and some other roses have hardened considerably and the quality has also improved. There are some very fine Russells to be seen now—length of stem especially, showing better than on the first cuttings. Jonkheer very scarce and hardly enough for the local trade. Carnations getting better all the time. These became a little more plentiful last week and prices held even. Early bookings for Thanksgiving week show the usual advance of about 25 per cent. Orchids are "scarcening" up a bit and bringing better prices. Gardenias and violets are at their best and very popular. New crop bronze galax and new crop boxwood sprays are features of the greens market. Forced pussy willows are also to be seen already.

ST. LOUIS The market was fine last week and the wholesale houses were well supplied with stock. Violets are fine and obtainable in any quantity. Chrysanthemums too are in heavy in all varieties and pompons are selling well. Roses are fine but not any too many. Carnations at last are coming in plentiful. These have been scarce all season but from now on there will be plenty. Other things normal.

WASHINGTON Considerable business was given to the local florists in the way of bouquets, etc., sent by the members of the Diplomatic Corps, of Congress, the Cabinet, and members of society to Miss Jessie Wilson, daughter of the President, on the occasion of her marriage which took place on Tuesday last. Practically every store in town got a share of this good luck and some very creditable pieces were turned out. The warm weather of the past week was unprecedented in the history of the city. It was almost as warm as in June and the market was flooded with stock. Prices took a decided drop in many instances although on some flowers they remained quite firm. Lily of the valley is in heavy demand and the better grades of roses and carnations are finding a ready market due to the demand created by the Wilson-Sayre wedding. This is also true of orchids of which many of the bouquets consisted. The quality of violets is not as good as it has been and the demand for this flower has decreased. Chrysanthemums formed the bulk of the business done on Saturday last when this popular "football' flower moved well. The florists are looking forward to better business conditions next month due to the many weddings and other entertainments already booked.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

Famous Frontiersmen, by Charles H. L. Johnson. This is another of L. C. Page & Co.'s popular books for boys. It comes at an opportune time, for any real live boy who receives this volume as a Christmas gift will not lack in appreciation. Stories of the adventurous lives and stirring experiences of the heroes of the border in pioneer days have been a never-failing source of delight for boys of all ages and this book which, by the way, is dedicated to the Boy Scouts of the world, is one of the better class, its tales being vouched for as true and its characters having been real actors in the long struggle between savagery and civilization in the early days of our country. This publication is uniform in style with "Famous Cavalry Leaders," "Famous Scouts," etc., by the same author. Price $1.50 net, L. C. Page & Co., Boston, publishers.

Making the Farm Pay, by C. C. Bowsfield. A good and useful book on an all-important subject. An enormous amount of information has been assembled in condensed form and trite language in its 316 pages. It is practical from first to last. It tells how to mix brains with the soil and get the most out of an acre.

Every phase of agriculture is considered,—the raising of vegetables, fruit, flowers, poultry and stock. Intensive farming and diversified farming are ably handled. The care of the soil, the treatment of farm diseases, the use of by-products, intelligently meeting the market demands and selling at the best price are a few of the important topics which are treated with great care.

In reading this book we have been impressed with the author's large view of country life; he grasps the relation of farming to the entire life of the nation, seeing it not only as a practical farmer but from the viewpoint of the statesman, the financier and students of affairs. By informing the farmer on the subject of market conditions he brings the producer and consumer closer together for their mutual benefit. By giving him the benefit of the latest agricultural developments and methods the author not only tells the farmer how to make more money but how to make his life more happy and comfortable, how to make the farm so attractive that his young people will prefer to remain there rather than seek the uncertain rewards of the city.

The book will be of immense value to every farmer, large and small; and any city man would add greatly to his store of useful knowledge by reading this valuable book. Published by Forbes & Co., Chicago. Price $1.00 net.

"The Spell of Switzerland," by Nathan Haskell Dole, published by L. C. Page & Co., Boston. A delightfully informal book of travel, with copious illustrations, so that the reader seems to be making the journey through the Alpine country with a chatty and well-informed companion. It is cast upon a slender thread of fiction, bringing in other characters besides the narrator, but this does not dim the clear descriptions and the effective bits of history and of poetry that are introduced, Byron, Coleridge, the Napoleonic crossing of the Alps, etc.

Lausanne has an especial charm for New Englanders, for its life and houses and some of its scenery are not unlike what can be found in parts of New Hampshire and Maine, and it is pleasant to find Mr. Dole giving considerable space to this charming part of Switzerland. Of course a literateur, like the author, would give a full account of Gibbon's sojourn at Lausanne. Lake Leman, Chillon's castle, Geneva, and equally of course a literary account of Jean Jacques Rousseau, pass in succession, and then the Alps. There is a fair amount of mountain-climbing in the book, but among the many illustrations we find none that pictures the horrors of Alpine accidents, such as are displayed in all the shop-windows at Chamounix, nor does our author dwell upon the many fleecings which beset the tourist, the girl with edelweiss, the maiden who sings Swiss folk-songs out of tune, the zither-players who lay in wait for one's small change in the ice cave, the man with a pistol who does not come to rob you by violence but by awakening the echoes in some chasm, the man with the eight-foot long Alpine horn; some of these are mentioned, but not in the grouchy manner in which most travelers mention them after having been bled of all their bits of coin. Altogether a very agreeable, graphic and reliable book of travel.

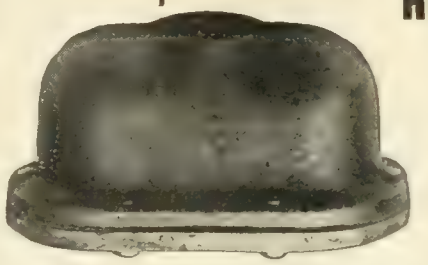
Obituary

Mrs. Avery.

Mrs. Avery, for the past two years a florist on Pico street, Los Angeles, Cal., died suddenly November 11th, from apoplexy. She was formerly from Chicago.

Charles W. Blatchley.

Charles W. Blatchley, whose critical illness with pneumonia was mentioned in our last week's issue, died on November 17, at Southington, Conn., aged 65 years. He and his son were engaged in the florist business with greenhouses at Milldale and store at Meriden. He leaves three sons and three daughters.



John De Wolf.

John De Wolf, at one time superintendent of parks in New York died of Bright's Disease on November 23, at Bristol, Conn., at the home of his brother-in-law, Nathaniel G. Herreshoff. He was 64 years old. Mr. De Wolf, who came of a distinguished family, was widely known as a landscape architect. He was in charge of the laying out of Prospect Park, Brooklyn. A sister survives him.

Harley James.

The news has just been received without particulars, of the death of Harley James at St. Georges, Bermuda. Mr. James has been mayor of St. Georges, for the past two years. He is best known to our readers as a leading shipper of Bermuda lily bulbs for many years. Personally he was a quiet-mannered, urbane and hospitable gentleman. In his business transactions he was honorable always. His death is a serious loss to Bermuda.

A Curved Eave Effect

LACK of side ventilation is a criticism of the curved eave house made by some gardeners. The wall vents do not answer their purpose.

That's why many of them prefer our good old stand by sill and gutter house with the side vents hinged to the gutter.

But cheer up! You can have a curved eave house with side ventilation and still not make a botchy looking job.

We have recently solved the problem.

Glad to send you particulars.

Clean Cut

IF you were to choose between a clean cut, neatly sharpened lead pencil and a blunt raggedy one; there isn't a bit of doubt which it would be.

When it comes to a greenhouse that is a splendid bit of light clean cut construction like the U Bar, in comparison with the blunt heavy construction of other constructions, you should very naturally always select the U-Bar.

But some of you don't—not always.

You don't, because of three reasons. Here are the reasons:

1. "You say other curved eave houses are just as light."

But are they?

Can you make yourself believe that a house with wooden roof bars, flat iron rafters and a heavy reinforcement at the eaves, can compare in lightness with a house that combines roof bar and rafter in one, especially when such a combination isn't any larger than the roof bar used in other constructions?

If such a thing is true, then two pounds don't weigh any more than one pound.

2. You say that "other constructions which cost less, will last just as long."

Well now will they?

Isn't it reasonable to think that a roof bar, that is first steeped in a chemical preservative and then encased in a galvanized steel U-Bar, so that absolutely none of it is exposed to the interior destructive conditions of varying moisture and dryness, will last longer than bars that are entirely exposed and only painted?

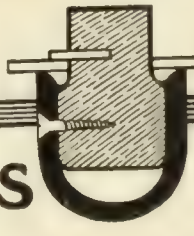
If they won't—then water isn't wet and fire doesn't burn.

3. You say the U-Bar house "costs too much." But does it?

Don't you expect to pay more for a six cylinder automobile than for only a four cylinder one?

Isn't it only logical that a house with a complete frame of galvanized aluminum coated steel, should cost more than one of wood and steel that is only painted?

Not only should it cost more, but be worth a good bit more than it costs.



These then are the three main reasons—and their answers.

If you are still in an argumentative mood, we would welcome the opportunity to carry the discussion still further.

Not that we are scouting about the country "looking for an argument;" but we know, that if you only knew what we know, about the U-Bar construction—no amount of clever sales talk could possibly talk you into having anything else.

Our next talk is going to be about "Jumbled Together." Watch out for it

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Christmas Azaleas

There are few more popular Christmas plants than azaleas, the bright colored sorts, such as Hexe and Mme. Petrick selling particularly well, although other colors are also desirable. We give them 60 degrees at night as soon as the first flowers begin to open, but a lower temperature will be in order if they promise to open by Dec. 15. The longer they can be kept at about 55 degrees or even 50 degrees before they go to the store the better. Any at all backward must have plenty of heat; 65 degrees at night is not too much. Spraying freely, hard forcing will cause the plants to make growths ahead of the flowers, and these young shoots should be rubbed off, as they check the development of the flower buds. Don't overlook the proper watering of the plants, especially when in the forcing house. They should never suffer on that account, as it is always sure to show bad effects.

Lilies for Christmas

All lilies intended for that date should be so far advanced as to have the buds begin to turn white twelve to fourteen days before Christmas. They can stand a temperature from 60 degrees to 70 degrees during the night and with a rise of from 15 to 20 degrees during sunny days. When they have their flowers well expanded they should be given a lower temperature, but remember they will not relish cold draughts, which will cause them to wilt. To properly harden them off, it is best to treat them gradually until you have them in a temperature of about 50 degrees, night. See that they are kept clean of fly, as there is nothing more unsightly than lilies with green fly on. Go over your plants often and give them water at the roots as they must not be allowed to become dry and see that the pots are all made clean by washing.

Manure for Florists' Crop

Florists all agree in giving a good grade of well-decayed barnyard manure first place among fertilizers for general use, but all experience the same difficulty in procuring it in a condition sufficiently decomposed for immediate use. They must therefore lay in fresh manure which at this time of the year is not hard to obtain. Pile it up and give it time to decay. In doing this it must be remembered that the shrinkage in bulk through decomposition is considerable, and that in laying up a supply for the entire coming season due allowance must be made on this score. Forked over once or twice during the progress of decomposition it will be in proper condition for use next spring. Horse manure, if not stirred up frequently, burns quickly and is then of little value. It should always be kept in a soaked condition by letting the hose have a play on it occasionally should no rains fall. Refuse or spent brewers' hops quickly but somewhat fiercely pass through the stage of fermentation and need no forking.

Propagating Carnations

While it is a little early to propagate most varieties, yet in many cases it is well to begin as soon as you can. There are varieties that grow slowly and need a long growing period. In working up a stock of some fine variety don't be over-anxious to get as many cuttings as possible, but rather try to get as many good plants as possible. A thousand weak runts are not nearly so good as a hundred fine, strong plants when housing time comes. Opinion seems to be pretty generally settled as to the proper cutting to take, the young shoots around the base of the flower stems, or the young shoots that grow after the flower shoot has been topped back. Both of these will make high-grade stock. Avoid the side shoots from up around the middle of the flower stem or the young flower shoots that have begun to lengthen out. When taking off cuttings try to select a uniform size and be sure they are well matured. When trimming them, cut back the leaves that stand outward, taking off one-fourth to one-third of the leaf, but never cut back the tip of young leaves that have not spread apart.

Soils for Winter

Make it an aim to have a good pile of soil hauled and placed under cover where it can be kept in a dry condition. Late fall is a very good time to haul earth, manure, sod and sand, and is the most propitious time for piling up, composting and storing bench and potting soils. Prudent and ample provision for the needs of the season now fully entered upon and that to follow should now be made. Success with any kind of plants under closely strained cultivation depends to a considerable extent on the kind and condition of soil in which they are growing. Soils and composts should never be allowed to run out on any place where plants are grown commercially; there should be at all times a supply of soils ready for immediate use and for whatever purpose needed. So seize the opportunity now and lay in a good supply for potting. Since it is well-nigh impossible to obtain soils fit for immediate use from any source save our own place of storage it is well to have this well-stocked at nearly all times.

Start Freesias for Easter

Now is the time to start freesias wanted in flower for Easter. It always pays to grow some in pans as they make a fine show for that date. Fill some 6-inch pans with a good rich compost of fibrous loam three parts, and one of cow or stable manure. In these you can place from 16 to 18 bulbs in each pan. Place in a house about 50 degrees at night. Water with care until they become well-rooted when they should have plenty. Later on they will stand a temperature 55 to 58 degrees.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Cyclamen; Decorative Greens; Flowering Plants for Christmas; Orchids; Winter Protection; Protecting Pansies.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Making a Vine Border

Making a new vine border is a thing which does not occur every year so when there is one or more to be made up see that the best material is put into it. These borders when made properly and the vine given proper treatment, will last a number of years, in some instances the life of the vine. They can be renovated—top-dressed or some of the soil taken from the front and replaced with new, but only on rare occasions is the whole border renewed and the old vines replanted. When the condition of the border is such that it has to be renewed entirely young canes are generally planted. In the early days of growing grapes under glass when gardening in general was not conducted on the scientific lines it is today it was not considered necessary to have the roots under absolute control, and no effort was made to restrict them from extending outside of the house and in some cases I believe one could say outside of the garden if they chose to roam so far. Later years saw borders (as we term them) being made with food or fertilizers placed within easy reach of the vine roots. We read of the carcasses of animals being buried outside the vineries to act as fertilizers. This was only coming into line to what is being done today only in a more scientific and practical way. The present era has taught us the many advantages of having all roots under absolute control and also of having them growing in the smallest possible amount of soil. The advantages derived from having them in the minimum of soil are—they will dry out much quicker in the dull weather, which helps to keep the soil sweeter and the roots are closely confined so that whatever food or stimulants are given only a small area has to be covered. Some growers, particularly in England, still prefer a border that is partly inside and partly outside, which suits some varieties better than the border that is inside altogether. These outside borders have to be protected over there during the winter months consequently are not to be recommended for our severer climate, especially for early work as the soil has not got a chance to warm up. Decided then that the border shall be inside entirely and that the roots shall be confined to that space the first thing in the construction of a new border is to see that the roots cannot get outside. If a new vinery is to be built provision can be made for this at the time the foundations are being got out. The outside walls must go down below what is to be bottom of the border; this (bottom) should be made after the style of a cellar floor, made of concrete nicely smoothed off, having a fall to a drain which should be in the center of the house unless it is large enough to make two drains necessary.

The next consideration is the drainage of the soil after it is put in. Broken and otherwise unfit for use bricks can be obtained from any brickyard at a small cost and they make the best drainage that can be put under a vine border. Throw these in roughly,—I say roughly because some have the idea they can be placed in better, but no matter how much time is spent on placing them they will never answer the purpose so well as when they are thrown in roughly. Let this "drainage" be at least ten inches at the highest points of the floor and keep it level from this which will make it necessary to add several more inches in the vicinity of the drain, according to what fall has been given the floor. An additional help to good drainage will be a few lines of drain pipes run through the bricks leading to the drain. One thing must be noticed when putting the drainage in—that is, if the wheelbarrows are allowed to dump in the same place all the time a quantity of fine stuff will accumulate there. The best way is to dump the broken bricks in and throw them into position sweeping the floor clean as new space is covered. It is best to drain the whole border at the start as it can be made in one job but it will not be necessary to make up the whole border at the start. Four feet will be sufficient. Have this partitioned off either with wood or a temporary brick wall. Place a green sod, grass side down, over the portion that is to receive the soil. This will keep the soil from working down into the drainage for some time. Now to the soil. Supposing this has been stacked in sod form, chop it down roughly. Soils differ so much that it is impossible to put any stated quantities of either bones or charcoal into so much loam. Heavy loam, again, will sometimes be benefited by the addition of broken bricks, about the size of a hen's egg, to keep it open. The charcoal can be left much larger than this. It will be best to have bones in two sizes, half-inch stuff and inch-and-a-half size. This makes the composition lasting. Have the heap thoroughly mixed and as the soil is being placed in the border have it kept level, otherwise if a heap is allowed in one place all the rough stuff will keep falling to the bottom and where two heaps join there will be a streak of rough stuff down through the border which will cause it to dry out irregularly. Let the soil be made firm as it is added and do not attempt to work it when wet. No border should be more than three feet in depth of soil.

Christmas Melons

Let the Christmas crop have all the feeding it will take and plenty of sunheat. Keep the night temperature up to the required figure. This will mean plenty of fire heat at times. Be ready to fight away spider on its first appearance. Mildew, too, will be troublesome if the ventilating is not done with judgment. Top growth will be none too vigorous just now and what is made can be left on to promote more root action.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Disbudding

Never neglect to go all over the plants at least twice a week and see that they are properly disbudded. There is considerable loss of strength and energy where plants are allowed to go undisbudded for a time, and that will mean smaller buds and the reducing of their quality. It is best to set aside certain days for this work,—say every Tuesday and Friday. If this is attended to on these days regularly, then there will never be any neglect. Collect all the buds that are cut off and put them away in the garbage can and not along the edge of the benches every here and there as is the custom with many growers. If that is done there will be no place for bugs to hide and breed. Anything that is green and has no poison on it makes excellent food for the various insects that infest the rose benches.

Syringing

With the darker days already here there will be more danger in syringing the plants, and growers who have kept their stock nice and clean from the very start will now have something to be proud of and very thankful for. There is something in knowing when a dark week comes that your plants are not likely to be eaten up by red spider just because you cannot syringe. When clear weather arrives, syringe as clearly in the morning as the temperature in the houses will warrant, this being usually around nine o'clock. As has been stated in these columns before, try to syringe so as to throw the water into the walks as much as possible, for this has an advantage in more ways than one. Not only will it keep all the surplus water off the bench, but it will also keep what spider has been taken off from getting back on the benches. It will also knock all or rather most of the yellow leaves into the walks where they can be easily swept up with the broom instead of having to be picked by hand from the benches.

Shaking the Plants

After a good syringing the plants should be well shook to take off all the water that will drop and thus help to dry them. A stick with a groove in it that will take hold of the wires will be all that is necessary in the line of tools. Plants that are on stakes can be tapped lightly with the stick, to take off the water that is hanging to the leaves. This should be done as soon as the house is syringed, for the noon sun will then have a chance to take away the balance of the moisture.

Ordering the New Pots

As the potting season will soon be here there is nothing better than going over your supply of pots to see just what will be needed in this line. Then with the figures all down it is easy to order the necessary number, and the right sizes. Better get them in early and you will be sure of having them on time.

Liming the Benches

Benches that have received a coat of lime earlier in the season will now need another as likely as not, and little harm will result if it is applied a little too soon. The plants will take it as they need it and there is little danger of their getting too much of it. We like to apply the lime to the benches and then leave it for a little while—say three or four days—if the plants do not have to be watered in that time. The lime will then cake a little, and remain on the benches for a long time and the plants will take what they want of it, for with each watering a little of it will be dissolved. Do not neglect to loosen up all the flat thin cakes that form over the surface of the soil, for these will not let water through, and will also exclude air to a considerable extent. Scratch these over very lightly so as not to disturb the roots and then let them stay. Needless to say the lime should be air-slacked and if it is freshly slacked in the cellar with the aid of a sprinkling pot, run it through a fine screen. Not a very pleasant job, I am sure, having done it many a time, but it is best for the welfare of the plants.

Supply of Bonemeal

Like pots, bonemeal is very essential to the growing of young plants and growers should see that there is enough of it on hand to mix into the soil at potting time. It should be as fine as it is possible to get it, and should be thoroughly mixed into the soil when it is used.

Stock Houses

As soon as you decide which houses are to be taken out to make room for the young stock, begin cutting the buds right down to the hard wood without leaving any eyes, and getting just as much stem as is possible. Two eyes left on the plants are not very much, but it is enough to make a No. 1 out of a No. 2, etc., so there will be a little gain by cutting the blooms away down. This of course would not do where the house will continue to grow on for there would soon be no wood from which to cut.

Exit the chrysanthemum

As the chrysanthemum season nears its close the wholesale flower markets are gradually emerging from the helpless and hopeless condition of congestion which has prevailed for several weeks past and a healthy tone is noticed throughout. This is not to be attributed to the departure of the "autumn queen" exclusively for there are other factors which exercise a more or less potent influence but the dealers are disposed to lay most of the blame for the demoralization of the fall trade to the intrusion of the chrysanthemum and they are probably justified in this. We hope to see a steady continuance of the improvement which appears to be quite general all over the country and which is so essential to the growth and prosperity of the florist business and allied interests.

Distribution of producers

As in every recurring period of accumulation for many years back we have again heard much this fall about alleged overproduction of cut flowers and the disposition of the "surplus." Our contention is, as heretofore, that there is no real overproduction and will not be for a long time to come. The trouble is due rather to inadequacy of means for distribution and the [illegible] to channels that are too narrow. From such a view point the close concentration of growing establishments around certain large cities is unfortunate. The reshipping of such perishable goods to any great distance is hampered by many drawbacks, well-known to all who have had experience either as shippers or receivers. The grower who locates his establishment at some central point where access is had to several centres of consumption has decidedly the best of the situation for with intelligent management he can to a considerable extent so control the distribution of his product as to minimize the demoralization and losses which invariably attend the overloading of any one market.

Undeveloped resources

Did you ever stop to consider what would be the added income to the florist trade of this country as a whole if all the commercially grown cut flowers which go to loss had been sold even at one-quarter of minimum market rates? One of our diplomatic representatives has said that the greatest undeveloped resource of any community is the people. The same may be said specifically as regards the flower business. All the flowers produced for commercial purposes are but a small fraction of what this great "undeveloped resource" would consume if more even distribution in fresh condition and at fairly stable prices could be brought about. It is not to be expected that the frequent gorging of the wholesale markets with material, due to weather or other causes, for which the dump wagon or an unloading at demoralizing prices are the only present alternatives, can ever be entirely eliminated but we believe that the chaotic conditions thus produced might be materially modified and methods of merchandizing brought under better control through more systematic planning and co-ordination of effort. It is superfluous to say that any policy which will increase the number of flower buyers and at the same time get the goods before them in attractive form and at dependable prices must result in great direct benefit to all concerned—not only to the grower, wholesaler and retailer, but to the greenhouse builder and a long list of other industries all more or less dependent upon the healthy growth of the flower business. Real co-operation between these interests for the express purpose of business development and improvement has never been seriously tried. Yet there are many men of ability, experience and high ideals in every branch and the unused potentiality in this other "undeveloped resource" is a force that is tremendous in its possibilities.

GRAFTING LILACS

In the issue of Nov. 1st reference was made to grafting and budding on the privet. This is a very poor stock, and in the Northern States it is worthless. We have had much experience in grafting. The root of the vulgaris takes well. It is not generally known that there are two distinct systems of roots on the common lilac. There are the laterals that sprout like the mischief and spread much like the Canada thistle. Then there are the tap roots which cannot sprout. The laterals are soft and quite pithy. Other kinds grafted on these take well. But you must use great caution or you will have a bad mix-up, for they are bound to sprout. You can graft the white varieties well enough, because you can see from the white color of the bud which is which. I have often grafted the Japan and Chinese tree lilacs on these laterals. They will push out their own roots in two years. Then take them up and cut off all the vulgaris roots and replant and you have them on their own roots. The tap roots have but little pith, and they are much harder than the laterals. Use these for grafting and you are safe, for they cannot sprout.

There are three kinds of the Rouen lilac—the red, the deep red and the pinkish white. These last are a little tricky. Some years they will bloom pink, and I have seen three twigs on one limb, and two of them had white flowers and one had pink ones. The roots of the Rouen do not sprout and you can readily graft any of the numerous vulgaris family on them. They are hardy and you will have no trouble with their winter killing. You can also graft the Rouen on the vulgaris roots, either the tap roots or laterals.

For years we have used the western green ash for grafting. Take one-year-old roots that are full of life and sap and graft them just as nurserymen do their apples on one-year apple roots. Use the lip grafting method. They are not always certain, but if you graft late, just as the buds begin to swell and use care to have scion and stock match and then wax the joint, you are pretty sure of success. As soon as grafted they should be packed in moist sand till planted, which should be done as soon as the ground settles.

The biggest thing in recent years I think is the Chinese tree lilac. This is a summer bloomer—always escaping the frost. It grows much faster than the Japanese. It is covered with a great mantle of snowy white blooms that are very fragrant. I think we were the first to introduce them in the West. Fifteen years ago we sent one to the publishers of The Fruit Grower, St. Joseph, Mo., and he reports it eleven inches through, and 25 feet tall. Across the way there are some of the same all growing in grass that are 7 inches through and 20 feet tall. These trees are destined to be a foot through and 50 feet high and for individual trees on the lawn or for avenues they are without a rival. They endure the heat much better than the Japs, for these had their leaves badly sunscorched in August, while the Chinese were fresh and green.

One of the largest firms in the West sent to me for some buds. I would not send them for there was nothing they could bud them on. Think of putting such a tree on a privet, or even a lilac bush! They are best raised on their own roots or on the green ash. We now save a bushel or two of seeds a year. They grow about a foot the first year from seeds and we have had them 3 to 4 feet in two years. They are quite slender and may need staking for a year or two. I forgot to say when you graft the vulgaris on ash roots they will throw out roots of their own in two years and will then naturally discard their stepmother roots and grow vigorously on their own. A dealer once told me he had purchased a beautiful lot of real purple tree lilacs. I told him there were no such trees. Soon after I visited the firm that furnished them and they were common lilacs budded on the privet and trained to tree form and every one had a borer in it. Borers do not molest either of the tree lilacs.

IDEAL GARDENERS.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

The contribution to HORTICULTURE by George F. Stewart, headed "Original Gardeners" bears earmarks which lead me to infer that the author had in mind some recently published remarks attributed to me, when he wrote the article referred to.

Surely to argue for the betterment or higher attainment of anything from the standpoint of idealism is not an unworthy trait. While I am not certain of a personal acquaintanceship with my critic, I have known of him through his "good works" in horticulture for several years, and notwithstanding his expressed opposition to established ideals, I am convinced that he is possessed of many cherished ideas to which he adheres steadfastly. His writing implies it.

That originality is a precious asset I quite agree. Originality and individuality go hand in hand and those blessed with these qualities have the advantage over the majority of mankind. As originality, individuality, and ideality are closely affiliated, the cultivation of ideals, to my way of reasoning, is as essential as the cultivation of flowers in order to gain perfection. Though the perfect gardener is not yet in sight, we have living examples of what he should be—but there is always something new to learn before he will reach perfection.

That it is necessary for the gardener to be "at the dirtiest end of the job on hand, to gain the confidence and goodwill of his assistants"—in this I cannot concur with Mr. Stewart, and I do not believe that he intended to have it read with that understanding; but rather that the true gardener does not regard himself beneath performing any work that he would ask an assistant to undertake for him.

I have never read Carlyle's book on clothes, so I am not familiar with it. That "fine clothes" would furnish the link necessary to create the closer relationship which should, but does not now exist, between so many gardeners and their employers was not my contention. I realize that "personal appearance" is less sustained by the wearing of good clothes than by the general bearing of their wearer. They who are the most fittingly clothed and who command the respect of all others are those possessed of sufficient strength of character to look all men squarely in the face. My allusion to "fine clothes" was simply a reference to an old gardener who would rather plod than manage, probably owing to his having faith in none but himself.

That there are many wide-awake gardeners is indicated by the more frequent appearance of discussions centering directly on the gardener, which should not be discouraged as it is a sign of progress. The discussions are primarily in the interest of the men who are striving to gain recognition, but who are handicapped by the notion that they are surrounded with unsurmountable obstacles to hinder their advance; and not for those who have made their mark; and who should participate more freely in the privilege accorded them by the horticultural press to expound their accumulated knowledge for the benefit of the younger men who have adopted gardening as their profession, and who seek every opportunity to learn from the leaders in it.

Divided opinions oftentimes bring salient facts to light and occasional spirited controversies may arouse the dormant senses of those who believe that there is no more to the profession of gardening than its mere calling.

A SUPERB NEW BEGONIA.

NEW LORRAINE SPORT.

OLD TYPE LORRAINE.

The difference between the new Begonia Florence Davenport and the old type of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine from which it sported at the greenhouses of A. M. Davenport, Watertown, Mass., is convincingly shown in the accompanying pictures. The photographs were taken at the same time, the plants being of the same age and grown along under identical conditions in the same house. The flowers are as large as those of Cincinnati, deeper in color than either Cincinnati or Lorraine, the leaves very thick and leathery and the habit of the plant so sturdy and short jointed that less staking is required than in any other begonia of this type.

PRINCE E. C. DE ARENBERG.

Among new rose claimants for favor the one we here illustrate has all the elements and promise of popularity. Its color is vivid crimson, pure and luminous and as to stem and foliage no rose can excel it and few can equal its broad, massive, dark green leaves. From personal experience, we know the blooms to be long-keepers retaining their purity of tone to the last. This rose, which is of European origin, is being introduced to the American trade by S. J. Reuter, Inc., and C. H. Totty, by whom it has been given a thorough and convincing test as to its growing and producing qualities. It has been well received wherever shown. John Young has the sale of the cut blooms in the New York market.

NEW RED FORCING ROSE PRINCE E. C. DE ARENBERG.

NEW WHITE CARNATION MATCHLESS.

This latest introduction by the Cottage Gardens Company is, like other varieties emanating from that concern, a superb production, the very acme of carnation improvement and eminently worthy of the position of honor we accord to it on our front cover page this week. Its excellent qualities of form and habit are well shown in the picture.

The next meeting of the New York Florist Club will take place on Monday evening, December 8. J. Austin Shaw for the essay committee promises talks by L. W. C. Tuthill on "Advertising, the Gasoline of Business"; Max Schling on "Successful Advertising" and Leonard Barron on "Advertising, Pure and Simple."

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS' CLUB.

November 20th, the second visiting trip was made and to the florists of the East End. The first stop was at Secretary Lemon Landis' place, where is grown everything for the retail store. At H. D. Rohrer's we saw the largest lot of Bonnaffon chrysanthemums grown in this section, and his usual good quality of carnations with his own seedling red holding up its record of last year. At Goldbach's we found a new man in charge and a decided improvement over last season. Here is an illustration of the good these trips do. It certainly acted as an impetus on the new man to have us note an improvement in the place over last season. At Siebold's we found the forty varieties of geraniums and the snapdragons working hard making cuttings for their owner. From there to Enos Kohr's was "some jump," but automobiles and street cars helped us to get there. Here through some unexplainable reason the carnations were not so good as last season. Mr. Kohr, being conservative, estimates he will get about one-third of a crop.

At the evening meeting we had Arthur Niessen of Phila. He advised us to pay more attention to the growing of flowers that keep and to be careful in packing them for shipment. He also brought many points from a business point of view and quite a lively discussion ensued. A canvass of those present by the Co-operative Buying Committee was made, and it was quite a surprise to find that in this conservative community orders have been placed for some 7,500 Matchless carnations, and almost that many Philadelphia. It is the intention next season to bulk all our orders, and there are prospects of our being able on our membership card to get a considerable reduction on all pipes and fittings from a local concern if we unite on our buying at that establishment. This will be worked out along other lines as we get experience.

A committee was appointed to arrange for a banquet in January and the meeting adjourned in peace and harmony about 9.45 P. M., to meet again December 18th.

CONNECTICUT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the meeting on Nov. 20th, President Huss gave a glowing account of the Westchester & Fairfield Horticultural Society's exhibition held at Stamford. A suggestion he made, which is well worth careful consideration by horticultural societies, was to the effect that at such shows there should be more than three judges, that is, instead of one group of three judges to have, say, three groups, making nine judges in all. This would greatly expedite the judging of all classes. It is an arduous task to select two or three prize exhibits out of eight entries when each exhibit looks like a winner, and it calls for extreme care in noting the points that count in carrying off a prize. SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS.

Department of Plant Registration.

Alfred M. Davenport of Watertown, Mass., submits for registration, the following Begonia described below: any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary, at once. Failure to receive objections to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Name, "Florence Davenport."

Description—A sport from the Lorraine; originated in our greenhouses three years ago; much more robust than Lorraine; foliage similar in size to Lorraine, but thicker and more leathery; very strong stems; color of flowers, darker pink than either Cincinnati or Lorraine; size of flowers fully as large as the Cincinnati.

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

At the regular meeting of the club on November 18, the following list of nominees for the several offices in the club for the ensuing year was made. President, W. J. Kennedy, Thomas Roland; vice-president, H. H. Bartsch; secretary, W. N. Craig; treasurer, Peter Fisher; executive committee, James Methuen, Geo. M. Anderson, Peter M. Miller, James Wheeler, W. J. Collins, W. J. Patterson, W. C. Rust, Eber Holmes, B. Hammond Tracy, F. J. Rea, W. J. Stewart. The meeting for the election of officers will take place on December 16. The landscape gardening classes meet at Horticultural Hall each Monday evening at 7 o'clock. No more students can now be taken for the present season's course.

W. N. CRAIG, Secretary.
W. J. KENNEDY, President.

FLORISTS' CLUB OF PHILADELPHIA.

The regular monthly meeting of the Club was held on the 2nd inst. Interesting exhibits of new roses and carnations with discussion on same was a feature. Louis J. Reuter of Westerly, R. I., exhibited two new roses, one a light pink sport from Maryland—a very fragrant, large flower; the other the lovely wine colored, new Prince E. C. de Arenberg. Matchless Carnation was shown in superb form by the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y.

The subject for the January meeting is in doubt. It will either be Geraniums, by R. Vincent, Jr., or Affiliation, by Adolph Farenwald. The essay committee have the matter under consideration and will decide. Interesting addresses were made by Louis J. Reuter on new roses and by R. Vincent, Jr., on things in general.

THE "INTERNATIONAL."

The Flower Show Committee for the "International" at New York next spring held a well attended meeting last Monday at the Grand Central Palace. The prospects certainly appear rosy in the extreme. It looks as if the retailers would support this exhibition, many having already engaged space. The plan to do away with prizes in this department seems to meet with their approval. They will take space and make displays to suit themselves, changing same as often as they see fit.

OLD PLANTS ADVERTISED UNDER NEW NAMES.

There has recently been a considerable amount of advertising, by the press and otherwise, of two beans for which highly extravagant claims are made, and for the seed of which exorbitant prices are being asked. One of these is being advertised under the name of the Shahon pea, with the absurd claim that on three and one-half acres this plant produced seventy tons of hay and three hundred and fifty bushels of seed.

The Shahon pea is nothing more or less than the plant properly known as the Asparagus bean, or Yard-long bean. It is a close relative of the cowpea—in fact, by most botanists considered a mere variety. In experimental tests with upwards of twenty varieties of Asparagus bean, this Department reached the conclusion that none of them could possibly compete with the better varieties of cowpeas as a forage crop. The stems, as a rule, are much more slender and vining, and the long pods, which lie on the ground, can not be harvested by machinery. None of these twenty varieties is as productive, either in herbage or in pods, as the better varieties of cowpeas.

The Asparagus bean derives its name from the fact that the young green pods, when used as a vegetable, have somewhat the flavor of asparagus. As a vegetable, the Asparagus bean may come into somewhat more general use than it has in the past, but as a forage crop it has but little merit. Seed of the Shahon pea, which apparently is the commonest variety of Asparagus bean—namely, that having pinkish-buff seeds—is offered by the advertisers at $5.00 a pound. The same variety is offered by seedsmen in France, where the bean is more or less commonly grown, for 25c. a pound.

Another plant which has been thoroughly tested, both by the Department and the Experiment Stations—namely, the Jack bean—is also being extravagantly advertised under the name of the Giant Stock Pod Bean, or the Wataka bean, the seed being quoted at $15.00 per bushel. This bean has been fully treated of in Bureau of Plant Industry Circular No. 110, which can be obtained from the Department free upon request. While the Jack bean produces an enormous amount of beans per acre, they are not relished by stock, and no satisfactory means of utilizing them has yet been discovered.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The St. Louis Florist Club will hold its regular meeting on Thursday, Dec. 11. The Ladies' Florists' Home Circle will meet at the home of Mrs. Geo. B. Windler, Wednesday, Dec. 10th.

The Horticultural Club of Boston had as its guests at the December meeting Mr. Vandermey of Lisse, Holland, and Robert Shoch, of M. Rice Company, Philadelphia. The dining room was adorned with large vases of a new unnamed rose from Alexander Montgomery and new carnation Alice from Peter Fisher. Mr. Montgomery's rose is a soft La France pink with petals beautifully recurving. It is a sport from a seedling.

President Farquhar who has just returned from a short European trip gave some interesting notes on the cultivation of lily of the valley pips abroad for export. Mr. Vandermey talked very interestingly on some phases of the culture and handling of Holland tulips, narcissi, etc.

For Those Who Want Only the Best Cannas

THERE is always a best in everything. It is a conspicuous fact that the best things in any line are those things to which an individual or a concern gives its best efforts. Nineteen years of Antoine Wintzer's life have gone into C. & J. Swastika Brand Cannas. We have backed him up with our entire confidence and unrestricted expenditures.

As a result, we have more than doubled the size of flowers; trebled the range of colors; lengthened bloom endurance; turned green foliage into bronze; won Europe's recognition by sweeping the prizes; secured the majority of American awards wherever shown in competition. As a result, the Swastika Brand Cannas are used more extensively than any other in the Government grounds at Washington.

If, then, you want these Swastika Cannas, grown with care for people who care, send for our price list and get your order in early. Several of the varieties are bound to be in great demand.

Rosea Gigantea. Flowers a soft rose to carmine pink, of giant size. Received award of merit from Royal Horticultural Society of England.

Shipments made at your pleasure. 10 for $1.50, 100 for $8.00, 1,000 for $75.00.

GARDENERS AND LOCKJAW (TETANUS).

It would seem that, periodically, we are subject to the above scare. Though usually it comes from some of the medical profession, this time it appears from one of our own number. There would not perhaps be occasion to make comment, except for the wrong premises taken by Mr. Jenkins in stating that James Brydon died from this infection. He died of a very different disease.

During the 36 years of travel among gardens and gardeners, the writer has never known of one of our number being infected by the Tetanus bacilli, though theoretically we are supposed to be particularly liable, having our hands in contact with the soil most of the time, frequently with scratches to boot. Cheer up, brethren, we don't die of lockjaw, even if the insurance companies do consider us a bad risk.

E. O. ORPET.

A. Reply to R. T. McGorum.

Mr. McGorum takes exception to some of my remarks in the November 22nd issue of HORTICULTURE on the above topic. He seems to think I am landing a sly, underhanded blow at the rose-growing industry. Nothing of the kind was in my mind when I wrote the article on "Tetanus," and I merely mentioned the rose thorn as one of the possible means of affording by its scratches an entrance for the germ or bacilli and I still adhere to that view, though we are all aware there is no cause for the shakes or panic as the chances are remote owing to the fortunate fact of our general powers of resistance. Still, the possibility of infection is an ever-present one, and while the precautionary measures are so simple it is only good common sense to observe them. That in spite of all the chances he has run, Mr. McGorum "has not died yet," we are well aware and we trust he will be spared to run lots more chances. If my article conveyed the impression that James Brydon died from the prick of a rose thorn, I am very sorry as I knew full well the particulars of his unfortunate death.

MARYLAND WEEK.

Bolgiano's Display at Maryland Horticultural Society Exhibition.

The Maryland State Horticultural Society's exhibition in Baltimore was a pronounced success in every respect. Not only were the exhibits more numerous and of higher quality, but the general arrangements for displaying them were better and real artistic harmony was a distinctive feature. The centre of the mammoth armory floor space was occupied with products shown mainly by members of the Baltimore Gardeners' and Florists' Club and a few private places. The chrysanthemums were probably the best ever shown by the local florists. Cut flowers, roses, etc., were magnificent, R. Vincent & Sons Co. had fine pyramids of hardy pompon chrysanthemums effectively arranged for color contrast. E. A. Seidewitz showed a number of handsome window and flower-box groups and plants. I. H. Moss had grand lot of dwarf conifers nicely grouped. Robert L. Graham some handsome designs. Among others who had grand chrysanthemums, cut flowers and rare foliage plants were George Morrison, Mrs. W. F. Cochran, Jr., Chas. Sweigert, Lehr Bros., Stevenson Bros., James Hamilton, I. H. Moss, P. B. Welsh, G. W. Lotz, John Cook, H. J. Quick and Edw. Kress. The arrangement of the floral and plant section was the most effective ever seen in the big armory and reflected great credit on the committee having it in charge.

Apples from all sections of the state, showing wonderful size, coloring and freedom from imperfections, such as timely and proper spraying produces, plainly indicated that this fruit is making a most surprising headway in Maryland. Vegetables from many counties of the state were also for excellence and variety another great surprise. Granges and Farmers' Clubs from several counties had booths filled with products from the farms of the members. These booths were quite a feature, and rivalry was intense, as there was a $100 prize for best booth. Some friction resulted after the judging of the booths, but was finally pacified. Potatoes proved that this crop is becoming a prominent one in the state, and the yield this season in some of the counties has been over 300 bushels per acre. Corn, as exhibited from many counties maintains the fact that Maryland is a quality-producing corn state.

The exhibit of nuts showed that increased interest is developing in nut culture. The death of Mr. Kerr at Denton, Md., a short time ago removed the pioneer of nut culture in Maryland.

The new president elected is Robert L. Graham of Baltimore, a prominent florist and a former president of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club. Prof. T. B. Symons was re-elected secretary.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

William J. Baker has two stores at present—one at the old place South Penn Square, the other at 12 South Mole street. The old location will be vacated January 1st to make room for a skyscraper.

Friends of Paul Klingsporn, late with Berger Bros., will be pleased to hear that he has been appointed manager of the Chicago Growers' Co. In his new sphere we are sure he will show the same keen business acumen, initiative and magnetism as made him a noted figure in the cut flower world of Philadelphia.

Visitors: B. E. Brotherton, Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. Catherine Bretz Cumberland, Md.; Chas. Vorkeller, So Bethlehem, Pa.; M. F. Hayden, Wilmington, Del.; C. C. Morse, San Francisco, Cal.; Louis J. CHICAGO NOTES.

H. Wittbold has given up his store at Randolph street and Wabash ave.

B. L. Chadwick, of New York, who started his business career in Chicago, is here and enjoying a visit with old friends.

The Corner Florist is the name under which Frank F. Storck opens a retail store at 29th and Cottage Grove avenue.

The holiday decorations of the department stores are lacking much of the artistic finish usually seen, being merely a mixing of red and green.

Poehlmann Bros. will have 75,000 lily of the valley to cut for Christmas. Their cut the year round now averages between four and five thousand daily.

Edward J. Hauswirth has severed his connection with Harry Rowe and is now taking up the wholesale end of the work. R. R. Rector, formerly with H. Wittbold, is now with H. Rowe.

The Chrysanthemum shows at the park conservatories are now over and the attendance at Lincoln Park was larger than ever before—so large in fact that counting had to be given up.

Some of the stores are refusing to take orders for holly wreaths this year. One of the prettiest wreaths seen is a sample one of spruce, loosely put together and with pine cones among the green. A small cluster of red ruscus gave the needed color. It was sent from the north woods.

The large department stores are offering colored ruscus, the velvet poinsettias and all the long list of artificial flowers and prepared foliage heretofore sold by the florists and seedsmen for the holidays. They are shown in very attractive ways and at prices which mean keen competition.

The closing of the Williams Flower Shop at Wabash avenue and Monroe street again proves how difficult it is to persuade purchasers to go down stairs. It is a good location and Mrs. Williams has for many years operated successfully the Atlas, so the fault lies in the stairs and the limited display that can be seen from the street.

Several changes have taken place in the officers of the Chicago Florists' Association. E. Meuret is now president in place of John F. Kidwell, resigned; C. H. McCauley is vice-president and treasurer and P. R. Klingsporn of Philadelphia is added to the salesforce. Mr. Kidwell will devote his time to his Wentworth avenue store.

Harry Rowe's store at Washington and Wabash avenue is turning out some beautiful wreaths all ready for finishing with cut flowers. There are many beautiful kinds and the advantages to a retailer in having a really artistic wreath all made up and ready for the finishing touches of fresh flowers seems to have met with an appreciative reception.

A few cases of holly were sold out in small lots for Thanksgiving, quality fair and prices averaged five and six dollars per case. The best advices obtainable here would indicate that the supply of really good holly will be limited, the same as last year, the bulk of it coming from the south and not having the keeping qualities of the eastern holly.

Poehlmann Bros. are now bringing in their stock from Morton Grove into Chicago in their two new auto trucks, which were delivered last week. They are large dark green cars and with their gold lettering make a handsome appearance. The run is made in about one hour. Plans are now under way for building at Plant "A" in the spring where, even with the present large expense of glass, there is not room enough, the plant business having taken sixty thousand feet from the carnation sections. The 263,000 carnation plants are, with the exception of a few Rosettes, made up of the old tested varieties. Though a good crop of American Beauties is being cut, the supply falls short of being sufficient for regular demand. At Plant "B" Killarney Brilliant is being tried quite extensively and so far is proving a success. Mr. Poehlmann says he cannot see that Killarney is deteriorating in the least.

Visitors: Jas. McHutchison, New York; Miss Kaber, of The Kaber Floral Co., La Porte, Ind.; B. F. Chadwick, New York; W. J. Farney, representing M. Rice Co., Philadelphia.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Florists' Club of Washington was recently formed when a number of ladies met at the home of Mrs. George C. Shaffer and elected Mrs. George H. Cooke as president and Mrs. Elmer C. Mayberry as secretary and treasurer. This meeting was devoted mainly to discussing the need for such an organization and the election. The ladies will get together monthly and in addition many social affairs may be looked for. The organizers of the club are Mrs. Cooke, Mrs. Mayberry. Mrs. Shaffer, Mrs. Oehmler, Mrs. Stauff, Mrs. Kimmel and Miss Waters.

Fire last week threatened to destroy one of the large warehouses occupied by F. W. Bolgiano & Co., on Golden street, near Tenth street, Southeast. It is believed that the fire was set by boys, a number having been seen to leave the building carrying baskets which they had stolen and which were later recovered by the police. The damage amounted to over $500.

The Department of Agriculture announces that Cuba and Trinidad have complied with the inspection and certification requirements of that department under the Plant Quarantine Act and have been added to the list of other countries which have previously done likewise.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON The market here is sustaining itself nicely. Chrysanthemums are rapidly passing and the receipts of other staples are not heavy. Carnations are in rather light supply and bringing better prices. Roses are enjoying a good strong call, maintaining published quotations with pleasing regularity. As to Beauties, the story has been as with other roses up to present time, but there are now some evidences of cutting shipping rates on this specialty by dealers in other markets and some unsteadiness is noted as we go to press. Violets are scarce—that is, the singles. Of the doubles there are not many but they are too many at that. Cattleyas are scarce but this market does not take kindly to any serious advance in price on that account, so they stay at old figures.

BUFFALO There were four very busy days in last week and in which a good quantity of flowers was consumed, especially chrysanthemums. It almost cleaned up all the growers had. While prices were not advanced to any great extent the sales were more in quantity and prices were within the reach of every one. There was a shortage in roses also colored carnations. White carnations had no call. Beauties were scarce early in the week and the price quoted a sharp advance but there was no demand, consequently the finest Beauties which have been seen for some time remained with the wholesaler and were carried along as an item on hand. Violets have had very little demand. Many dealers are not even handling them as there was no call.

CHICAGO Chicago market is literally under a cloud. Not a ray of sunshine for many days, but continued fog, mist or rain, and nothing better promised by the weather bureau. Roses are feeling the need of a change for they are apt to be kept too warm in the attempt to ward off mildew. The Christmas supply is causing considerable anxiety to the growers, but there is no accumulation left over from day to day, trade keeping up quite well. Violets are away down at this writing, Dec. 3, singles coming in ruined by the wet weather, and doubles, though many very good, finding no demand the past two days. Carnations are holding up well as to price and so far quality has not suffered so much as might have been expected, but a change in weather conditions would be a great relief at this time. Some large chrysanthemums and a few pompons are about all that are left in this line. The market has a larger proportion of white flowers this week than is desirable.

NEW YORK Thanksgiving business as a whole, was quite satisfactory to everybody. There was a sufficient supply of about everything to fill all demands. Top Beauty roses sold up to 50 cents. Lower grades were not so plentiful and cleaned up well. All colored roses were in brisk demand especially. The surprise was in the big receipts of violets and carnations. Colored carnations sold at excellent prices but, as usual at this time, white ones were a burden and the owners ought to be mighty well pleased that they finished up even as well as they did. The retail stores, when closing up time came, were still overloaded with white carnations, white chrysanthemums, white roses, stevia, paper whites, lilies, etc. Lily of the valley

TO GROWERS

Determining the financial responsibility of your consignee is as important as selecting the best flowers to grow. We have the best of references for the ten years we have been in business, from our bankers and our growers, which we will cheerfully furnish upon application.

We desire a few more shippers and if you consign to us we can assure you that we will most conscientiously endeavor to justify whatever confidence may be reposed in us.

was the only white staple that made any sort of a good record. Since Thanksgiving the pace has moderated somewhat but still the situation is quite satisfactory. Cattleyas are very scarce, labiatas being about finished and Trianæs still a future proposition with Gaskelliana holding the field at prices double those of last season at same date. Southern grown asparagus is coming in by the truck-load and, while selling well, the supply exceeds the demand. Bonnaffon is the chrysanthemum most in evidence everywhere.

PHILADELPHIA Thanksgiving week was pretty good here and would have been better if we had had the usual army and navy game. But notwithstanding; stocks were pretty well cleaned up and there was no great surplus. Towards the end of the week carnations sold better and prices held firm. The quality keeps improving—the leaders at present being Ward, White Wonder, Enchantress Supreme and Gloriosa. In roses fine crops of Beauty and Richmond are coming is and are selling well. Killarney leads in the pink rose section very fine although a little off color on account of the dull weather. White Killarney has the field all to itself. In the yellow class Sunburst, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Melody are very good. Gardenias are in moderate supply with demand excellent. There are still a few chrysanthemums around — mostly Jones, Eaton, Chadwick and Nonin. The only pink is Enguehard and so few hardly worth mentioning.

ST. LOUIS The Thanksgiving market was in good shape all during the past week. Of chrysanthemums the market had a good supply. They are now on the decline. The season on them has been good in both price and quality. The demand on roses, carnations, was also good all week, the former holding its own while the latter are more in quantity than the demand calls for. California violets sell out each day. Sweet peas are not yet in plenty but the few are of extra good quality and clean up easily. Most other things are more than the demand calls for.

WASHINGTON Business for the past week shows a decided improvement over the brand that has been so familiar in Washington for some time back. Thanksgiving Day business was the equal of any of the previous years. The dark and rainy days have greatly lessened the supply of carnations causing the prices to rise. Cattleyas, too, are very scarce and American Beauty Roses have advanced in price. The supply of violets is very heavy. Narcissus is among the new arrivals but is meeting with a limited sale as yet.

Personal

W. A. Bridgeman has severed connection with the new Thos. F. Galvin store in New York.

Harry Francis, formerly of Madison, N. J., but recently in Florida, is at the Post Graduate Hospital in New York City, to undergo an operation for appendicitis.

Mrs. Ella F. Belcher of So. Weymouth, Mass., and John G. Burrows of Onset, were married at the latter town Sunday, Nov. 16th. Mr. Burrows is a well-known florist.

We are much pleased to be able to report that James Farquhar of Boston who has been confined to his home by illness which for a time alarmed his friends is rapidly recovering and expects to be fully able to go back to business within two weeks.

William Hogg, employed in the bulb department of A. T. Boddington, New York City, was accidentally asphixiated by escaping gas at his boarding house last Sunday morning and is still unconscious at the hospital, with chances for recovery very slim.

James McLeish, the Newport grape grower, returned home Nov. 26 after a six weeks' vacation, visiting Scotland, his native country. Among the many places he explored besides Roseneath, his native town, was Edinburgh where he attended the horticultural exhibition, and reports great progress having been made in chrysanthemums, grapes and other things during his absence of twenty-seven years. Mr. McLeish was accompanied by Mrs. McLeish.

New York Visitors: Frank Holznagel, Detroit, Mich.; Louis J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I.; Mr. Myers, of Myers & Samtman, Chestnut Hill, Pa.

HARRY A. BUNYARD.

Few of our readers will need any introduction to the portrait which appears herewith. The energetic secretary of the American Sweet Pea Society is known from the Atlantic to the Pacific wherever a horticulturist is found. We are not bringing him forward at this time as a candidate for any office, although he's a good one, or because he has been doing anything sensational of late, but just to call attention to the fact that this week (Dec. 1) he is being congratulated by his friends on the 25th anniversary of his arrival in this country. Harry is (or was) an Englishman, but of course he couldn't help that. He was born in 1868, and came to America in 1888. He was employed for a time at Peter Henderson's, then went with Pitcher & Manda at Short Hills, being the first traveling man sent out by that firm and the last one to quit when they broke up. Shortly afterwards he accepted a position with A. T. Boddington which he has ably and industriously filled up to the present time.

He organized the American Sweet Pea Society and has acted as its Secretary ever since. He is just completing a three-years' term as Director of the S. A. F. In these positions of honor and other duties of like character he is a "live wire," endowed with quick perception and intelligent mastery of detail. Of a buoyant disposition and strong social impulses, Harry Bunyard has made lots of warm friends in the years he has been one of us and all will join in wishing him many happy returns of the anniversary he now celebrates and all the prosperity that can come from well directed industry.

Fortify Your Fertilizer

Did you see your fertilizer dealer and arrange to buy fertilizer containing at least as much as Phosphoric Acid? That is the real kind that pays you and the dealer. If you did not, you should at once ask your dealer to carry Potash Salts so that you may increase the Potash in the ordinary brands. To increase the Potash 1 percent, add 40 pounds Muriate or Sulphate of Potash to a ton of goods. A 200-pound bag will increase the Potash of a ton 5 percent.

POTASH

Try it once and see how Potash Pays.

If your dealer will not carry Potash Salts write us for Prices. We will sell any quantity from one 200 pound bag up.

PERSONAL.

P. Hamilton Goodsell, of New York, has been seriously ill with pneumonia for several weeks.

Paul Volquardsen, Newport, R. I., who has been seriously ill for many weeks, is still in a very critical condition with Bright's disease and other complications.

J. K. M. L. Farquhar, on his recent trip abroad secured a large variety of new hardy plant material among which is included the entire collection of lilacs at the Veitch nurseries, said to be the finest collection of own-root lilacs in Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Leach of North Easton, Mass., celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on Nov. 24, by entertaining a large number of relatives and friends at their home on Center street. Mr Leach was born in Jay, Me., 82 years ago. He was for several years engaged in the meat business in Chelsea, later being employed at shoemaking, and for the past 25 years has been in the florist business in North Easton.

Obituary

Thomas Jardine.

Thomas Jardine, a retired florist and landscape gardener, died Nov. 21, at the Odd Fellows' Home, Phila. He was 67 years old. Mr. Jardine was born in Philadelphia. He spent his life as a florist. He entered the home in May, 1911, and during the two summers he was there, lawns and gardens were especially beautiful with grass and flowers.

Edward Upton.

Edward Upton, a promising young man, has passed away at an early age. He was of the firm of Lilley & Upton, wholesale florists, Philadelphia, Pa., and later with the Leo Niessen Co. At one time he had charge of the distribution department of John Welsh Young. He was well-known and very well liked and we will all miss his genial personality.

Herbert G. Thomas.

Herbert G. Thomas, a well-known nurseryman in Springfield, Mass., died early Monday morning, Nov., 24, at the Springfield hospital, following an operation. Mr. Thomas was taken ill on Friday, and after an operation Sunday he failed rapidly. He was born in North Rutland, November 19, 1844, and spent his early life in that place. He came to this city 35 years ago and entered the fertilizing business with Nelson Adams of Springfield. After 15 years he retired from that business and took up the nursery business.

Mr. Thomas was an enthusiastic horticulturist and was also quite a genius for inventing things. He had invented several implements which are still in use around greenhouses.

William C. Crawford.

William C. Crawford, who for about fifteen years was manager of the American Rose Company, of Washington, D. C., died on Saturday last at his late residence at 11 S street, northwest. Mr. Crawford was a native of Philadelphia and was about fifty-six years of age. When a very young man he entered the employ of Pennock Bros., in the Quaker City, and it was while with this firm that he learned the florist business. He then went into business on South 15th street in the firm of Faust & Crawford. He later came to this city, returning to Philadelphia about ten years ago when he went with Robert Kift. Some time ago his health failed and as his son is employed by the Government, and his daughter is the wife of Frank Slye, a florist of Washington, he decided to go to Washington to live, taking possession of the S street house about a month ago. Mr. Crawford is also survived by his wife. His body was taken to Philadelphia and placed at rest in Fernwood Cemetery.

THE MEANING OF "1 INCH OF RAIN."

On every daily weather bulletin or chart the amount of rainfall at various places during the preceding 24 hours is printed in inches and hundredths of inches. In a general way the public understands that a rainfall of 2 inches in one day is heavy, and that one of a tenth of an inch is light, but no attempt is made to associate the linear measurement of the water with its equivalents in weight or bulk. This is necessary for a proper understanding of the actual quantitative value of the rain, and the few figures following may prove of assistance in making calculations.

An acre of ground contains 43,560 square feet. Consequently, a rainfall of 1 inch over 1 acre of ground would mean a total of 43,560 × 144, or 6,272,640 cubic inches of water. This is equivalent to 3,630 cubic feet. As a cubic foot of pure water weighs about 62.4 pounds, the exact amount varying slightly with the density, it follows that the weight of a uniform coating of 1 inch of rain over 1 acre of surface would be 3,630 × 62.4 = 226,512 pounds, or 113¼ short tons.

The weight of 1 United States gallon of pure water is 8.345 pounds. Consequently a rainfall of 1 inch over 1 acre of ground would mean 226,512 ÷ 8.345 = 27,143 gallons of water on the acre. This is equivalent to 603 barrels of 45 gallons each, and would be sufficient to fill a tank or pool about 20 feet square and 9 feet in depth. Should a farmer desire to build a cistern to be supplied by rainwater from a roof, he can, if he knows the annual rainfall of his locality, so construct his cistern as to make the best possible use of the rainfall. For instance, a rainfall of 1 inch on a roof of 3,000 square feet capacity would mean a total volume of 432,000 cubic inches, or 250 cubic feet, available for the cistern (loss from splashing, etc., not considered). This is equal to 1,870 United States gallons, or about 41.5 barrels of 45 gallons each, enough to fill a cistern 8 feet in diameter to a depth of 4.97 feet.

John Weston of Valley Stream, N.Y. Puts In His Good Word for L. & B. Houses

"The new Iron Frame house is most satisfactory. Of course, being a new house, I have yet to find out by experience just how it's going to turn out, but so far there hasn't been a quiver and we have had one or two pretty stiff blows. The chain operated apparatus works like a watch.
The heating plant is easily managed.
Altogether, it is, I consider, one of my best investments."

CRAIG QUALITY! The Largest and Best Collection of Christmas Specialties in the Country

PLANT BASKETS.

Our Plant Baskets have been so well received that they are now a very important feature of our Christmas business. All are first class, as to style of basket and filling. Nothing but highly-colored, well-grown stock is used, such as Dracaenas in variety, Crotons, Pandanus, Ferns, etc. On account of being filled early and becoming established, they are bound to give you and your customer satisfaction. Many of the baskets and window boxes are in two-tone effect. All baskets have zinc (not tin) liners.

CROTONS.

We have the largest and most complete collection of Crotons in the world, carrying for Chirstmas sales over 50,000 plants in over 400 varieties, all of the very highest quality and brilliantly colored.

5-inch pots, strong, $50, $75 and $100 per 100.

6-inch pots, strong, $12, $15, $18 and $24 per doz.

7-inch pots, strong, $24, $30 and $36 per doz.

8-inch pots, made up beautiful plants, $24, $30 and $36 per doz.

10-inch pots, made up, $5, $6 and $7.50 each.

12-inch and 14-inch tubs, made up, $10 and $15 each.

CROTON PUNCTATA.

One of the finest and most satisfactory varieties for basket work and centers of ferneries.

2½-inch pots, $8 per 100; $75 per 1000.

3-inch pots, $20 per 100; $150 per 1000.

4-inch pots, $25 per 100; $225 per 1000.

8-inch pots, made up, $18 and $24 per doz.

CROTON NORWOOD BEAUTY.

This variety is one of the best of our seedlings raised three years ago. This variety has an oak-shaped leaf and is brilliantly colored red, yellow and orange.

4-inch pots, heavy, $50 per 100.

5-inch pots, heavy, $12 per doz.

6-inch pots, heavy, $18 per doz.

CROTON CHANTRIERII MAJOR.

One of the best of the French introductions. Very large leaf, brilliant red and yellow.

4-inch pots, $6 per doz. 5-inch and 5½-inch pots, 75c., $1, $1.25 and $1.50 each.

CROTONS (Delicatissima, Golden Thread and Florence).

These varieties are indispensable for table decoration and we predict a great future for them.

2¼-inch pots, heavy, $25 per 100.

4-inch pots, heavy, $50 per 100.

5-inch pots, heavy, 75c. and $1 each.

6-inch pots, heavy, $15 and $18 per doz.

DRACAENA MASSANGEANA.

The variety with the golden stripe down the center of the leaf. This handsome plant is the best of all Dracaenas for the house.

4-inch pots, $7.50 per doz.; $50 per 100.

10-inch pots, $5 and $6 each

DRACAENA LORD WOLSELEY

One of the very most valuable Christmas.

2-inch pots, $12 per 100.

3-inch pots, very large, $25 per 100.

DRACAENA CRAIGII.

[illegible] We consider this variety the most beautiful pink Dracaena ever offered and one of the most striking in existence.

Strong plants, 5-inch and 6-inch pots, $5 each.

DRACAENA AURORA (NEW).

First time offered. Distinct, the coloring of a pinkish blending with light green.

Strong plants, 5-inch and 6 inch pots, $5 each.

PHOENIX ROEBELENII.

6-inch pots, $1 and $1.25 each.

10-inch and [illegible] plants, $10, $12.50, $15 and $20 each.

KENTIAS.

3-inch pots, 4 to 5 leaves, $15 per 100; $140 per 1000.

6-inch pots, 3 plants, heavy, 18 inches to 24 inches tall, $9 per doz.

FICUS PANDURATA.

6-inch pots, 2½ ft. tall, $2 each.

7-inch pots, 3 ft. tall, $2.50 each.

8-inch pots, 4 ft. tall, $3 each.

10-inch and 11-inch tubs, 5 ft. tall, $4 and $5 each.

Branch plants, exceptionally fine, $2.50, $3, $3.50 and $4 each.

FICUS CHAUVIERI.

6-inch pots, 18 inches to 36 inches high, $6, $9 and $12 per doz. Large plants, $1.50 and $2 each

FICUS UTILIS.

A species that came to us through the Botanical Gardens at Washington, D. C. The leaves are thick and leathery and are from 18 inches to 24 inches long, one-half as wide, of a rich, holly-green color, with midrib and veins of an ivory-white which stand out prominently.

6-inch pots, 24 inches tall, $3 each.

FICUS CRAIGII.

This variety is a greatly improved Ficus Elastica. It is close-jointed and the midrib stands out prominently, being ivory-white in color.

4-inch pots, 15 inches tall, $35 per 100.

6-inch pots, 18 in. to 24 in. tall, $6 and $9 per doz.

PANDANUS VEITCHII.

5-inch pots, $9 per doz.

6-inch pots, $12 per doz.

8-inch pots, $24 and $30 per doz.

PANDANUS UTILIS.

4 inch pots, strong plants, $25 per 100.

GARDENIA VEITCHII.

2½-inch pots, heavy, January delivery, $8 per 100; $75 per 1000.

4-inch pots, heavy, $20 per 100; $180 per 1000.

6-inch pots, heavy, $50 per 100.

6-inch pots, heavy, in bud, $9 and $12 per doz.

6-inch pots, heavy, in bud, will flower for Christmas, $2.50 each.

BERRIED ACCUBAS.

Beautiful plants, exceptionally well berried.

8-inch, 10-inch and 11-inch tubs. $2, $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4 and $5 each.

BOX WOOD.

Fall importations.

10-inch and 12-inch Bush form, $20 per 100.

12-inch Bush form, heavy, $30 per 100.

12-inch and 15-inch Bush form, heavy, $35 per 100.

15-inch Bush form, heavy, $40 per 100.

18-inch Bush form, heavy, $75 per 100.

24-inch Bush form, heavy, $18 per doz

Ball shapes, perfect globes, $1.50, $2 and $2.50 each.

Pyramids, 3 feet to 5 feet tall, $3, $3.50 and $4 each.

ABIES NORDMANNIANA.

7 inch and 8 inch, heavy, 75c., $1 and $1.25 each. Large tubs, $2.50 each.

NEPHROLEPIS TODEAOIDES.

London Fern. A good, strong grower.

2¼-inch pots, $5 per 100; $45 per 1000.

6-inch and 10-inch [illegible] $24, $30 and $36 per doz.

NEPHROLEPIS BOSTONIENSIS.

11-inch tubs, $2.50, $3 and $3.50 each.

NEPHROLEPIS ELEGANTISSIMA IMPROVED.

Care of Cyclamens

No matter how fine the plants may be they will not sell without a flower being open, while ordinary ones with a few blooms open will soon be cleaned out. Every additional flower carried by a cyclamen tends to make it more saleable. Plants which have a number of well-developed buds not quite out should be put into a house of about 50 to 55 degrees at night, as near the glass as possible and in full sun. Grown thus they are stocky and the flowers will not fall over the pots, as they do when grown too far from the light. On benches raise the most forward plants on inverted pots and spread the others out. Remove all decaying foliage and weeds and scratch over any scumminess which may gather on the surface soil. Be very careful not to overlook proper watering. There is nothing worse as a dispoiler of their beauty than allowing them to dry out at the roots.

Decorative Greens

The profit to be made out of all such greens as boxwood, laurel, holly, bouquet green, leucothoe, galax, ferns, etc., depends on the shape these greens are in when wanted. To have them in a nice fresh condition try a deep cold frame banked around on all sides with leaves or hay of sufficient depth to make it practically frostproof. They should be covered with material of some sort to exclude the light. They keep well when given a dark, moist place that is kept just above the freezing point.

Flowering Plants for Christmas

The best paying business is done in medium-sized and moderate-priced single specimens. Give all flowering plants that show proper expansion of bloom cooler quarters. Hhey will finish up into fine shape and will handle better in every respect than if kept in strong heat up to the last. It will require at least five or six days in a lower temperature to bring them into anything like proper condition to stand the store or house. To harden them off they should not be kept any warmer than 55 degrees at night and 50 degrees would be still better. Do not overlook watering whenever they need it and space them far enough apart so the light and air will have a chance to circulate through them.

Oncidiums

As these orchids go out of flower they should have a good period of rest which will help to ensure a free, healthy growth later. Help out their resting period by giving them a night temperature of about 45 degrees with about 10 degrees higher during bright weather, through the winter months. Keep a drier atmosphere, but sufficient water should be used on walks and under benches for the prevention of a harsh dry air. They delight in a position where they can have abundance of light during the winter months. Where it is possible suspend them as near the glass as you can. Give just enough of water at the roots to keep them in a plump state. Ventilation should be given with intelligence so as not to cause any draughts or sudden falling or rising of the temperature. It is well to give these orchids a good cleaning and sponging about once a month to keep down insect life.

Winter Protection

The loss suffered by florists every year in stock usually styled hardy is enormous. Many good things can safely be brought through the severest of winters by proper protection. Insufficiently established or newly planted stock is lifted by the action of frost, and dries up. The alternate melting and freezing of snow, enveloping and but partly covering the plants causes much damage. Be sure to have the soil surrounding the roots of the plant in a moist condition. This holds good with the perennials and shrubs, particularly with the newly planted stock. Wait until the ground forms a hard crust before putting on any covering. Much of all the covering done every fall is put in place too early and removed too late in the spring.

Proctecting Pansies

All pansies that are in frames will need attention from now on. Give them plenty of ventilation whenever the weather becomes anyway warm so as to prevent their starting into growth. During spells of very hard weather they will need some protection to keep the frost from going in too far, as it only tends to heave the plants out some. Keeping them from any great extreme either above or below the freezing during the next two months will aid greatly in producing fine strong plants by next spring.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Calceolarias; Carnations; Marguerites; Pandanus Veitchii; Sowing Fern Spores; Protecting Outside Bulbs.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Making Peach Border

The construction of a border for the growing of peach or nectarine trees is very similar to that of the vine. It is equally essential that the roots be under absolute control, not only from the standpoint of feeding, but if allowed to roam too much they only make a quantity of worthless wood. As is well known, the new wood has the production of next year's crop and if this is not right the following crop will suffer in consequence. All that was written last week respecting drainage of a border can be applied to the peach border. One difference to be found between a vine border and a peach border is that the former is made up in sections, about every second year seeing an addition, while the latter is generally made up all together. The system of training usually adopted in America known as the "cross-trellis" makes this necesary. The trees could be allotted a very limited space and restrained in it, which would be equal to being planted in a box but this would entail a lot of work and also look unsightly unless a false top was put on the whole border and covered over with soil.

The greatest difference to be found in the two borders is the composition of the soil. A vine will stand the soil enriching while the peach is best grown in a poor soil for the reason previously stated—too much growth. Chop down the sod heap roughly, add some rough charcoal and also some broken bricks taken from the same material that forms the drainage. These should have been broken up into pieces about the size of a hen's egg or a little larger; this will keep the soil open at all times. Notice that nothing has been said about stimulants or additional food for the trees. Have the material thoroughly mixed just as you would if there were a dozen different ingredients before placing it in position. Just a word about mixing soils. It frequently happens that we have to mix several wagon loads of soil at a time, which is not like having a small pile on the potting shed bench but one that takes time and labor especially if the heap has to be turned twice. Some will say at once that it is impossible to "mix" a heap of soil by only turning it once. They may be right and they may be wrong; it all depends on the men who are using the shovels. If they have the right idea in their heads it can be mixed at one turning and being placed in the wheelbarrows. On the contrary if they pick up a shovel full from here and dump it down there in the same solid lump as it was when they picked it up very little mixing will be done, but, if that same shovelful and all the succeeding ones are taken up with the idea of mixing, and spread out as it leaves the shovel, by the time it reaches the border the ingredients will be mixed at a great saving of labor. Make the peach border quite firm. It should be harder than a vine border.

Tying Peach Trees

This job usually comes after all the other more or less laborious work and to the writer has many pleasant reflections. Not only is it the last of all the winter work [illegible] the weather can do just as it pleases (as it usually does) and there will be nothing to disturb the peace inside. The work is interesting to those who take an interest in their work. It is like constructing a giant fan. Lay all the heavy wood in first, placing it in position and then making it secure with strong string. A piece of old hose pipe is the best thing that can be put between the tree and the trellis to prevent gumming in the summer time. These trellises get very hot at times through the summer and injure the tree,—a fact that must never be lost sight of. No two branches should cross each other and the smaller wood should be laid in so that if each one was extended on, it would not cross its neighbor. The whole should be evenly distributed each having room to grow and develop its foliage. A point should be made to keep the center of the tree open; fill the sides in well and the center will always fill up. It may seem a waste of good trellis room to have this space left down the center but it is well for the future benefit of the tree.

Light

At this season of the year with the short and often dull days which have a very great effect on all plant growth we can never have too much light or sunshine in the houses. Do we avail ourselves of all that is to be got? If the glass is in any way dirty it will equal a light shade which must exclude some of the light and sunshine. This should not be if the plants are to get all that is coming to them. It would be a big job to clean off some of the large houses through the country but the larger the house the chances of "drawing" seem corresponding less. We usually make a practice of washing all fruit houses thoroughly inside but seldom do we hear of washing the glass on the outside. Take a house of melons, for instance, growing through the winter months. Suppose this to be near a chimney that is continually throwing out smut through burning of soft coal. Wash the glass off and it will surprise you what a quantity of light is being excluded through allowing this corrosive matter to remain. At this season it may not be easy to find a suitable day for the job but there is sure to be a time when it can be got in and it will pay for the doing.

Turnip Tops

Turnip tops are often used in lieu of seakale. Sometimes, I have been told, they are substituted without the knowledge of the diners and pass successfully without being detected. This course is not always necessary for many will relish them with a due knowledge of what they are eating. They are very easily raised. All that is necessary is good large turnips, a small space in the forcing house where the light is excluded and the roots can be kept moist and syringed occasionally. Failing a house of this description place them under a bench in a house having a temperature of about 55 to 60 at night and keep them from the light. See they are kept moist at the root and also that they are syringed at least twice a day. It is an easy matter to forget things in these places.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ružička

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

The Xmas Retail Trade

On many rose-growing places there are prospects of a good retail trade which can be handled to good advantage by the growers. Have some nice cut flower boxes on hand as these appeal to the lady buyers, and do not make the mistake so often made, of wrapping the boxes on the outside with ordinary paper. This makes the cut flower box resemble a shoe box, which is not nice, and is no advertisement for the place and for the trade in general. As business will teach us, we must never lose an opportunity to advertise, even though it will not benefit us directly. If we can create a greater demand for flowers we should do so, for we shall be benefited by it in the long run. Do not try to ring in any inferior stock, as it will come back to you in the form of lost business in the future. Have all orders filled with the best possible stock, all fresh cut, that will give the buyers satisfaction. Where shipments are to go by express for any distance it is a wise plan to tie the roses to keep them from sliding around and breaking. Use good strong boxes so that there will be no danger of their being crushed, when the express companies pile other boxes on top of them. We have heard of one place that certainly had the goods, but, as one person remarked, their way of packing was so imperfect that it was useless to have anything shipped from there.

Greens With the Flowers

Always arrange the price of the flowers so that you will be paid for the green that you are asked to give with the cut roses. We find that people hate to pay extra for the greens, yet do not mind to pay a little more for the flowers themselves, if plenty of green is included in the price of the flowers. Try to have a good supply on hand at all times, as it is a great asset to retail trade. Plant all the nooks and corners where roses will not grow, and you are bound to have enough to last all through the season. It should be started as early in the summer as possible so that it will make plenty of growth before the cold weather sets in, after which it can just sit still, and be cut as needed. This will make very good green, too, for it will be much better than that which is not quite full grown. It is well to have a little of each asparagus, and some smilax. If you have the time and space put in a little of paper whites and other bulbs, the blooms of which will help very greatly to fill your retail orders, and can be used very nicely in making up designs.

Plants as a Side Line

Where the retail trade is handled at all, there is always an opportunity to sell a good many plants that can easily be grown in some of the cross houses that are hardly fit for anything else. It is surprising what a large number of different plants can be grown good enough to be sold, and at a good profit. Do not handle the very delicate plants as they will not prove satisfactory to the buyers who have a hot reading-room to keep them in. Better have only the plants that will stand all the misuse that they may be expected to encounter.

Care of Shaded Houses

Every now and then there will be a house on the place that is shaded by some other house, and necessarily will require a little different treatment than the other houses are receiving. The main thing will be proper watering, for the house will not dry out as well as the other houses, and will therefore take less water, and more carefully applied. Such houses should receive much less soil than any of the others, for if the benches are filled up full of soil, more trouble will be on hand. Syringe such a house the first thing, so that it will be drying off when the other houses are being syringed. Before watering make sure of the condition of the soil before you apply any quantity of the water. At times the soil will appear a little dry at the surface, where it will be real wet down in the bottom. At times it is just the reverse, and the soil will be real dry in the bottom of the bench, while the surface will seem quite wet. Do not let the soil get sour before you apply lime to the benches, for in a house that is shaded the soil will turn sour very easily, as the purifying rays of the sun will not reach it enough to help keep it in good shape.

Soot

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

The Inventory

The new year will soon be here, and with it will come more problems. Although the books on a rose-growing place will close in July, still there is nothing better than to make an inventory on the first of the year, and if one had been made the year previous, you can soon tell where this and that went, or at least know that it is missing. On a place where the inventory was a mystery, it was made when a new manager blew in, and the men who had always worked on the place were very much surprised at the amount of junk that had been lying around, and was never of any use. This was cleaned out, and at once the place looked more prosperous, as compared to the tumble down place that it appeared to be only a little time before. Get at it and make an inventory, and find out just what is there and what is not.

Our birthday

With this issue HORTICULTURE passes another milestone. Already nine years of age, it is no longer "the new paper" but begins to feel the dignity of maturity, as papers go. That HORTICULTURE has, during its nine years of existence, exercised an influence for good in the profession and industries it was created to serve and has creditably fulfilled its mission thus far, will hardly be questioned even by those whose desire for its success might fairly be represented by the zero mark. We cannot let this occasion pass without giving public expression of our gratitude to the hundreds of advertisers who have shown their faith in HORTICULTURE by their generous support and the thousands of subscribers whose unflagging interest in its reading columns and whose unmistakable approval of its principles and policy have touched us as one of the highest honors that could possibly be bestowed. HORTICULTURE has much to be thankful for, but first and best of all are the steadfast friends, far and near, who have done so much to make these nine busy years nine very happy years for the editor.

The holiday trade

The great closing holiday of the year approaches. Just what it may turn out to be in a business way for those of our readers to whom it means the most no one can predict, as so much depends upon weather conditions, both in the production and in the sale of the goods prepared for the occasion. Still, the inclement weather has now lost much of its terrors for the retail plant and flower dealer with the modern conveniences of telephones, autos and "telegraph delivery" and only conditions of unusual severity can prevent those who so desire from ordering flowers without discomfort and having them delivered when and where they please. We would urge those in the trade who read these lines, and who we must presume are all well-wishers of HORTICULTURE, that they carefully scan the advertisements in this number and give their business, as far as possible, to those firms who are herein represented. There are none better to be found. Most of them are well-known and their name and record is the best guarantee of their reliability and the quality of the goods they offer. Make them your first choice and let us all—advertisers, readers and HORTICULTURE—have a merry Christmas together.

In union there is strength

Our irrepressible friend from Roslyn, Pa., bobs up again this week with a reminder that, so far as he is concerned, "affiliation" is not to be permitted to go to sleep. Mr. Farenwald, we believe, is on the right track with his pet project. The discussion of affiliation between the various societies, clubs and associations is but the working out of one phase in the gradual development of the co-operative movement which has taken so strong a hold in and between all departments of business in recent years. Co-operation between growers, manufacturers, jobbers, wholesalers, retailers, advertisers, trade paper publishers, and all other interests which exist and prosper under the broad mantle of horticulture, and between the many allied organizations, means much greater efficiency for all. These agitations which are constantly being generated, on the principle of the ultimate betterment of all, through the help of each, mean much more than appears incidentally on the surface. They indicate, more or less clearly, a strong trend of sentiment in the direction of wider usefulness, and a higher standing for horticulture than ever before attained, through the great vitalizing force of well-ordered union. Realizing this, HORTICULTURE upholds and applauds Mr. Farenwald and any and all others who are acting to the same end, inspired by the same desire for the general welfare.

Affiliation Once More

It is quite a little while since I saw my name in print, so I am rushing in again. I am still doing business on the same old stand, Affiliation. I am going to keep after you, my brother florists, till you give up in despair and give it a trial. "Darn that little Dutchman! I will give him a chance. I am going to vote for Affiliation of our Club next January or February and see what comes of it. I see that he don't seem to want to give in and we may make him take his own medicine and then he may choke on it." Of course here is rather rough sentiment, brother, but I am willing to take a chance. Let's try it!

If you have read my paper on Affiliation last August you must remember that I called on all Florists' Clubs to bring this matter up in their January meeting for discussion and a vote on it in February meeting. Now, brother florist, have you provided for it? If you have not, call up the secretary of your Club and express your wish that it should be done. Have all members informed what is going to be the topic. If you have nobody in your Club who cares to champion this cause, have my convention essay of August read and discussed; it will give you the main points clearly stated. You may have read it and put it aside with not another thought, but here is a chance to put the searchlight of discussion on it. Pull it to pieces, get at the bottom of it, and then the truth—the need of Affiliation—will creep into your brain and then into your heart.

We who are taking from the storehouse of ages owe again something to future ages, so let us build up. The call is upon us to do something greater and better than has ever been done in our profession. Don't let us miss it. Get ready. August will soon be here, with it the Boston Convention. The Board of Directors of our National Society declared themselves in favor of Affiliation at Minneapolis. They will bring it before you in proper form for discussion and vote.

Brother florist, this is the biggest advance ever brought before the Convention since its birth. Will you be ready for it? I think you will! I hope to see at least a dozen clubs show their intentions to join the mother society before August. Of course, the more, the better. We should make our petition so strong that the Convention will ratify it with a rush. So let us get together and do something. We have been talking Affiliation for many years. We know all about the good results it had in other professions. It will do the same for us. Do your duty, brother.

A. Farmerald

Pointing The Way

A Christmas greeting from Philadelphia is in order to the readers of HORTICULTURE. We hope you have all had as good a year as we have down here. Business has been good and nearly everybody has prospered. From what we hear, the same conditions prevail in other parts of the country. We extend our congratulations to one and all.

We also wish to put forth a word of prophetic good cheer. A country that is growing at the rate of at least a million a year need be in no fear of business stagnation. We may have gluts here and there due to lack of facilities in distribution—and that is defective management and not inherent. We will find a way out—as grow we must—just so long as these United States continue to grow.

Let one go around and talk to the eagle-eyed captains of industry like the Hendersons, the Farquhars, the Dreers, and he will quickly become imbued with the fact that horticulture in America is but in its swaddling clothes. All the progressive houses are up against more business, better business—the public taste is improving; wealth is increasing. If there be faint hearts among us it must be from lack of energy and enterprise.

The writer has traveled thousands of miles during the past two months and interviewed many of the leaders and not one single doleful note has he heard anywhere but all look forward to even bigger and better times in 1914.

So we say to all—be of good cheer! Gird up your loins and get busy.

G. Wharton

Our Cover Illustration

The lovely floral basket, a picture of which forms the central feature of our front cover page in this issue, was a wedding gift from the National Association of Gardners to Miss Jessie Wilson. It was arranged by Gude Bros., of Mrs. George Shawyer roses furnished by Chas. H. Totty, and a cluster of cattleyas, vandas and cypripediums on the handle.

As an Advertising Medium Horticulture has NO superior.

Because they ALL read it. And they read it ALL.

CHRYSANTHEMUM NOVELTIES FOR 1914

By CHAS. H. TOTTY.

JAMES FRASER

MRS. R. H. BOGGS

WILLIAM VERT

MEUDON. An immense flower of bright pink. Won first for seedling pink at the Chicago exhibition, and also the Sweepstakes Medal for the best seedling on exhibition. It is a particularly strong grower and carries the foliage right up to the flower on an ideal stiff stem.

JAMES FRASER is an improved F. S. Vallis, with the exception that the color is deeper, but the flower is equally as large and practically the same shape, and the stem is perfectly stiff and the foliage is carried well up to the flower. The weakness in Vallis is in its stem, but in Fraser we have overcome that weakness and we feel sure it will be a very prominent variety in the exhibitions of the future.

MRS. R. H. BOGGS. One of the largest whites we have ever seen and the easiest to grow. When first opening the petals are delicately flushed with pink, but by the time the flower is fully developed it has faded to white.

MRS. PAUL MOORE. A beautiful variety with commercial possibilities as well as being a splendid exhibition sort. Has been certificated both as a commercial as well as an exhibition variety. Color is pure scarlet.

The Pockett varieties in crimson have been for years the leading exhibition sorts, the most notable example, of course, being Pockett's Crimson. In Wm. Vert we have the same blood and Mr. Wells says this new variety will eventually be "the" crimson, because everybody can grow it, it is such an easy doer.

MRS. ERNEST WILD. A chestnut crimson with a bronze reverse. This was one of the varieties certificated by the C. S. A. The foliage droops down to the stem and permits of the variety being planted very much closer than the average. It is by far the largest thing in its color, coming into bloom so early as October 1st.

The greatest advance this year in chrysanthemums is shown in the new singles. Gladys Duckham, which is shown disbudded, produced flowers more than 6 inches across. Phyllis Bryant, makes a wonderful plant in a 4-inch pot. The variety Gladys Duckham is white, and Phyllis Bryant sulphur yellow. They are both beautiful 'mums.

Another wonderful single variety is Golden Mensa. Its parent Mensa has made its own record as the best white single ever raised or cultivated. The golden variety is an exact duplicate of Mensa in every way except color, which is a pure golden yellow. This Golden Mensa should not be confused with Miss Lou Thompson which is also a yellow, but very pale color, not nearly so deep as Golden Mensa.

The gem of the collection, however, is R. B. Burge, which is a flower of the purest possible white with a bright yellow center—a magnificent contrast. The flower reminds one of a white Japanese anemone or water lily.

GLADYS DUCKHAM

PETITE LOUIS

The early flowering varieties were wonderfully fine this year in all sections of the country, and these illustrated are very good, though one could illustrate fifty kinds or more that would be just as good. Petite Louis, which was certificated at three or four club meetings during the month of October, will, if disbudded, produce a flower equally as large as a mid-season variety grown under glass. The color is a lovely shade of pink.

The Cranford varieties, in pink, white and yellow, while not, strictly speaking, new, have never really come into their own before. Grown out in the open ground they have, this year, made more money for us than any other variety we had on the place.

BRITISH HORTICULTURE.

A New Fertilizer.

In horticultural circles a keen interest has been aroused in a new process of soil fertilization discovered by Professor Bottomley, a well-known London scientist. The new process consists of peat which has been sterilized and then inoculated with nitrogen-fixing organisms. At Eton plots dressed with this prepared peat at the rate of one and one-fifth of a ton per acre, compared with plots which had received farm-yard manure at the rate of 80 tons per acre, showed an increase in lettuce of 27 per cent. and potatoes 41 per cent. At Chelsea the increase in radishes amounted to 54 per cent. Some interesting details of the experiments made at Kew and elsewhere were recently given by Professor Bottomley at a meeting of the Horticultural Club in London.

Experiments on Sterilizing Soil.

For some time some instructive experiments in the sterilizing of soil have been in progress in some market nurseries in the Lea Valley, near London. The soil is subjected to a steaming process; when this is efficiently done it has proved to be a success. Three partial failures have been traced to the growers using too small a box and too high a steam pressure. Another mistake made has been in sterilizing the tomato soils too deeply. The ideal depth is stated to be from six to eight inches. It has been demonstrated that a sterilized soil liberates plant food, and by cleaning the soil a more robust root system is developed.

W. H. ADSETT.

One of the most beautiful supplement plates ever sent out by The Gardeners' Chronicle, accompanied a recent issue of that journal—a picture in natural colors of Berberis Wilsonæ, one of the newer barberries from China, discovered by E. H. Wilson and chosen by him from among many as worthy to be named after his wife. The short-peduncled fruit crowds the young twigs in close clusters in great profusion, after the manner of Ilex verticillata, the branches arching gracefully under their weight of scarlet berries. It is a beautiful shrub and entirely hardy.

THE LATE WYMAN ELLIOT.

C. S. Harrison's Tribute.

The poet says:

"If a star were quenched on high
For ages, would the light,
Still traveling from the sky,
Shine on our mortal sight.
So when a good man dies
For years beyond our ken
The light he leaves behind him lies
Along the paths of men."

Goodness, nobility and sacrifice never die. They are woven into the woof of humanity to beautify and strengthen. They are the leaven which stirs our inertia and gives life to the masses.

Floriculture and horticulture have a marvelous transforming power. With the progress of the age these two callings lead the advance. A hundred years ago but little attention was paid to flowers. Now you see acres of greenhouses and thousands of dollars' worth of flowers at a single funeral. The beauty of the Lord enters in and transforms the souls of men. It has been my pleasure to meet some of the world's nobles. I visited Thomas Meehan, then an old man waiting by the river. He was a gentleman in the highest sense. Gentleness and light seemed to illumine his soul.

I spent a night with Samuel Parsons, author of the book on the rose. He was a friend of Whittier. He compelled me to go from the hotel at Flushing, L. I., to his beautiful home. What a visit we had. He picked out the gems of Whittier and read a new meaning into them. The influence of the flowers he loved radiated from his soul.

Another was T. C. Thurlow. How he loved his flowers. Their sweetness and fragrance illuminated his very life. We first got acquainted through correspondence. When I went east he insisted that I should make his house my home. We were of the same age. His home was in a field elysian. His children were brought up in a garden of delight. He was the father of the peony business in America and wrote the first article calling the attention of the public to those glorious flowers. No man had a greater influence on my life. He opened new vistas before me and showed possibilities I never dreamed of. He led me to the margin of a vast empire in which I have wandered ever since.

And here is brother Elliot. His beloved state never can forget him. How faithful he was to this society (Minnesota Horticultural Society) and its interests. We mourn, not simply the loss of a friend but a father. He was one of the charter members of this society. No man could do more for it. At the state fair and other exhibits he went far beyond his strength. We saw him wearied and worn and wondered how long he could sustain this strain. Doubtless it shortened his life. We honor him as a soldier of peace—not of war. He left no track of ruin behind him. The path along which he went is bordered with fruit trees bending with their luscious burdens. It is margined with bloom. A peaceful sky is over all. He died among his flowers. He was saved a long and lingering illness, too often the heritage of old age. He was speedily translated from his own charming grounds to the land where "Everlasting spring abides, and never-withering flowers."

How glad we are that he lived and that his life has been a benediction to his state and to this society. We have all been greatly honored in our membership. The world never has seen a finer exhibition of supreme devotion to the highest ideals.

Of our departed brother I can but say:

"And I am glad that he has lived thus long,
And glad that he has gone to his reward;
Nor deem that kindly nature did him wrong,
Softly to disengage the vital cord.
When his weak hand grew palsied and his eye,
Dark with the mists of age, it was his time to die."

BOSTON HORTICULTURAL HALL NOTES.

On Saturday, December 6, William Thatcher, gardener to Mrs. John L. Gardner, Brookline, made a special exhibit at Horticultural Hall, of Apbelandra aurantiaca Roezlii, a plant seldom seen hereabouts. It was awarded honorable mention. He also showed a number of orchids in fine flower, among them Cattleya Percivaliana and Dendrobium superbiens which were awarded first class certificates.

The money awards for prizes and gratuities for the year, amounting to $6,700, are now being paid.

A white sport of the Dr. Enguehard chrysanthemum from W. A. Weeks of Baker, Oregon, was sent in this week for examination by the Plant and Flower Committee and was favorably considered. A suitable recognition will be made pending further information regarding it.

The landscape gardening class at the hall on Monday evenings, under the management of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, is very successful this year. The interest in it suggests that the Massachusetts Horticultural Society might well undertake some educational work of a practical nature in other lines of horticulture.

A FABRICATION.

A rather sensational account has been going the rounds of the daily newspapers concerning the object and the results of Mr. Farquhar's recent visit to Europe. The facts were simply as stated in the last issue of Horticulture. The sum mentioned in the papers as having been paid for the Veitch lilacs was a preposterous exaggeration of which Mr. Farquhar declares he had no knowledge until he saw it in print and for which together with other unfounded statements the newspaper correspondent seems to have been alone responsible.

On Dec. 1 the florists of the Twin Cities attended a banquet to Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Wirth on his fiftieth birthday and presented him with a large hall clock as an appreciation for his work for and during the convention. It was attended by about 140 florists and their wives and was an enjoyable affair.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

PITTSBURGH FLORISTS' AND GARDENERS' CLUB.

The club met on the evening of December 2 in the Fort Pitt Hotel, Pittsburgh. It was expected that Mr. E. G. Hill of Richmond, Ind., would be present and speak on his specialties, the chrysanthemum and the rose, but at the last moment word was received that owing to other engagements he would be unable to meet with us.

However, the club had a very pleasant and profitable evening, there being a variety of exhibits of a high order of merit.

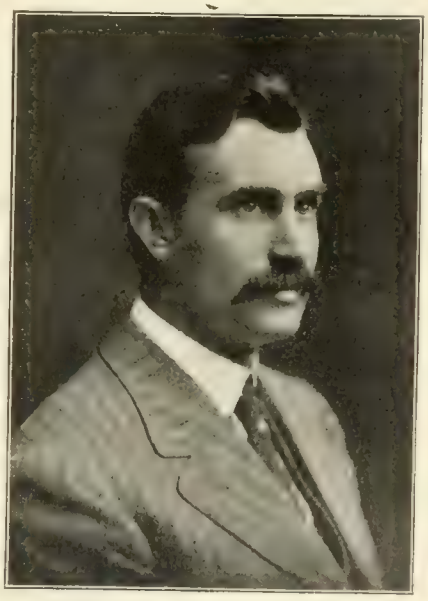
Awards: Bureau of Parks, for cypripediums and begonias a cultural certificate; Walter James, Homewood, a cultural certificate for begonias Cincinnati and Turnford Hall; T. J. Malcolmson, Sewickley, for group of crotons, a certificate of merit; Carl Becherer, Dixmont, mention for new hydrangea Montrose; Elliott Nursery Co., Springdale, special mention for collection of hardy shrubs and grasses; S. S. Skidelsky & Co., shipped by Michigan Cut Flower Exchange from Detroit, Mich., carnation Philadelphia, a first-class certificate.

The secretary read a letter from President-elect Wirth of the S. A. F., asking for the names of persons considered eligible for the position of State vice-presidents, and the club unanimously recommended W. A. Clarke, of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., for the position.

The representative of the Elliott Nursery Co. spoke strongly in favor of the use of the proper botanical names in sending orders for plants and shrubs to nurserymen, instead of the common names, which vary locally in the different parts of the United States, and which causes much confusion.

H. P. Joslin, Secretary.

WESTERN NEW YORK HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.



January is the fruit growers' month in New York State, and Rochester is their Mecca. For fifty-nine years the Western New York Horticultural Society has held its meetings, and the fruit-growing industry owes very much to the splendid accomplishments of this organization, which is both the oldest and largest association of fruit growers in the Empire State. The gathering of January 28th, 29th and 30th will be a memorable one, the program containing several attractive features. Among the out-of-state speakers will be the always-welcome Professor S. A. Beach, of the Iowa College of Agriculture; Dr. Lipman, director New Jersey Agriculture College Experiment Station; a Michigan peach-grower, etc.

A large aggregation of spray rigs, etc., is already arranged for. Liberal prizes are offered in the competitive class for fruits, such as a solid silver cup, several large cash prizes for boxed fruits and collections, and the usual cash prizes for single plates. Those wishing further information regarding the fruit entries should at once communicate with John Hall, secretary-treasurer, 204 Granite Building, Rochester, N. Y., also for copies of program when ready.

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

The December meeting, on Monday evening last, was an unusually large one, there being about 150 members and others present. Election of officers was one of the important items in the order of business. It had been generally understood that Mr. Bunyard was going to withdraw from the field as a nominee for president, thus leaving Mr. Duckham as the sole candidate, but he did not do so. The election resulted as follows: President, William H. Duckham (by 60 to 42); vice-president, Henry Weston; secretary, John Young (re-elected); treasurer, W. C. Rickards (re-elected); trustees for two years, Jos. A. Manda, Chas. H. Totty, F. H. Traendly.

Brief addresses were made by the candidates elected. Two applicants were elected to membership and there were five proposals. William Kleinheinz, Paul Huebner and Robert Pyle were present from Philadelphia. Edward Sceery, of Paterson, N. J., who had been a member for twenty years, made his first appearance and was introduced to the members and made a most interesting speech, saying that the reason he was there now, willing to take up the work which he had neglected so long, was on account of the recent National Flower Show, held in New York, which had caused such widespread interest among the retail florists of the country.

Max Schling made a delightful address on "Modern Advertising," and the secretary was instructed to write him the thanks of the club and appreciation of his remarks as to what the New York Florists' Club was doing for the retail florists of the country. There is no question but what Mr. Schling's address made a big hit. While some of his ideas may not meet with the approval of everyone, they are, nevertheless, very interesting and certainly very sincere. Owing to the lateness of the hour, Mr. L. W. C. Tuthill's paper on "Advertising, the Gasolene of Business," was postponed to the January meeting.

The new rose Hadley was exhibited by A. N. Pierson, Inc., and scored 89 points and received a preliminary certificate. S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., exhibited the new rose Prince E. C. de Arenberg, which scored 85 points, receiving a preliminary certificate. The same firm exhibited the new rose Lady Ann Borrdsell, which scored 82 points. The Michigan Cut Flower Co. exhibited a vase of the new carnation Philadelphia. This shipment did not arrive in the best of condition and the committee requested to see it again. Philip F. Kessler exhibited four vases of orchid-flowering sweet peas, receiving a vote of thanks for same.

Wallace R. Pierson addressed the meeting in behalf of the American Rose Society, stating that that Society had agreed to co-operate and make their exhibition at the coming Spring Exhibition in New York, and urging all growers to put their shoulder to the wheel and make this the grandest exhibition of roses made in this country. He had already received the promise of large exhibitors from the west and middle west.

NEWPORT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of this Society was held on the evening of December 9, with a very good attendance of members. The following officers were elected: President, William MacKay; first vice-president, John B. Urquhart; second vice-president, James Bond; treasurer, A. K. McMahon; recording and financial secretary, William Gray; sergeant-at-arms, William F. Smith; executive committee, Andrew S. Meikle, Richard Gardner, Alexander MacLellan, Bruce Butterton, Samuel Speers, John T. Allan, Alexander Fraser, C. M. Bugholt and James Robertson; auditing committee, Herbert Bliss, Bruce Butterton and W. S. Sisson.

The pleasant features of the meeting was the harmony among the members and the very satisfactory reports of the officers covering the work of the year, the treasurer's statement showing a much larger cash balance than the Society ever had before.

A rising vote of thanks was given Andrew S. Meikle, the retiring president, for his very efficient work during the three years he filled the office.

J. Robertson.

MINNESOTA STATE FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

At the recent meeting of this association there was a fine exhibition of chrysanthemums and awards were made as follows:

LaCrosse Floral Co., diploma; L. S. Donaldson Greenhouses, diploma; Minneapolis Floral Co., certificate of merit for chrysanthemums, also for carnations; Woodend Farm, certificate of merit; Holm & Olson, certificate of merit; Minneapolis Park Greenhouses certificate of merit.

Gust. Malmquist, Sec.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS.

Department of Plant Registration.

F. H. De Witt & Company, of Wooster, Ohio, submit for registration the Geranium (Zonal Pelargonium) described below; also Pelargonium hereunder described. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed names, is requested to communicate with the Secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Name of Geranium—"John G. Meyer."

Description—A cross between L'Aube and Jean Oberle. The trusses of bloom are very large. It is a semi-double, pure white with any trace of color. Small foliage. Both habit and foliage like its parent, Jean Oberle.

Name of Pelargonium—"Eastern Star."

Description—A cross between Easter Greeting and Graf Zeppelin. Ground color, wild rose pink, with five large reddish brown spots, edges scarlet lake. This variety is somewhat remontant. It is a dwarf compact grower and quite free in bloom.

Public notice is hereby given that as no objection has been received or filed to the registration of the Cannas Jessica, Benivolio, Horatio, Lafew, Gonzabo, Mercutio, by R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., same becomes complete.

No objection being filed to the registration of the Cannas Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Golden Gate, Wintzer's Colossal, Jane Addams, San Diego, by The Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., same becomes complete.

No objection being filed to the registration of the rose "Hadley" by the Montgomery Company, Inc., Hadley, Mass., same becomes complete.

JOHN YOUNG, Secretary.

Dec. 8, 1913.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., registers the following varieties of chrysanthemums with the Chrysanthemum Society of America.

Golden Climax. Seedling of C. W. Johnson's. Pure golden yellow, perfect color. Full double, true Pompon type; 1½-1¾ inches in diameter. At its best first week in November. Makes a fine spray without disbudding. Medium height, stiff stem, good foliage. Shown in collection winning Hitchings cup, New York, 1912, and in winning collection, Chicago, 1913. Winner as Best Vase of Yellow Pompons and variety, Chicago, 1913.

Western Beauty. Seedling of C. W. Johnson's. Silvery pink, full double; 2¼-2½ inches in diameter; wide petals a little more loosely arranged than the type. Naturally throws a perfect spray. Tall erect grower, stiff stems, foliage good. Season second week November. Best of its season and color for commercial cutting. Shown in winning collection, Chicago, 1913. Especially brilliant under artificial light.

Golden Harvest. Seedling of C. W. Johnson's. Bronze, tipped and brightened by golden yellow; very bright attractive color. True Pompon type, 1½ to 1¾ inches in diameter. Medium height, throws good sprays for cutting. Stems stiff, season first week in November. In the winning collection, New York, 1912, and Chicago, 1913.

Golden West. Seedling of C. W. Johnson's. Golden yellow of the small button Pompon type, very compact. Unusually good keeper. Flower 1-1¼ inches in diameter; dwarf stiff stem. A striking flower, perfect for pot culture and should be received with as much favor as the old variety Baby; more dwarf and compact than the latter. In the winning collection, Chicago, 1913.

CHAS. W. JOHNSON, Sec.

LENOX HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the above society was held in the Town Hall Dec. 6. The treasurer's report showed the society to be in a sound financial position. The following officers were elected: President, A. McConnachie; vice-president, Frank Butler; treasurer, A. J. Loveless; secretary, G. H. Instone; assistant secretary, J. Mair. A. H. Wingett was again elected as delegate to the State Board of Agriculture. A. H. Wingett, Mr. Loveless and M. Instone were appointed as committee to draw up a report of the society's transactions for the past year to be submitted to the State Board of Agriculture. F. Heeremans, E. Jenkins and Frank Butler were appointed as lecture committee. Various other committees were appointed and it was agreed to change the annual meeting from December to November. It was decided that the society hold its annual ball some time in January as usual.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

Thomas Roland wishes it understood that his nomination for the office of president of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston was without his knowledge or consent and that he is not a candidate.

The Houston (Tex.) Florists and Nurserymen met on November 22, and perfected their organization. Officers were elected as follows: H. H. Kuhlman, president; Robert C. Kerr, vice-president; S. J. Mitchell, secretary, and George M. Cosh, treasurer. The following executive committee was elected to serve in connection with the president as chairman: John J. Boyle, C. L. Brock, I. M. Johnson and C. H. Blecker.

The Minnesota State florists had charge of the evening meeting of the Minnesota State Horticultural Society, which held its annual meeting in Minneapolis Dec. 2 to 5 inclusive. Aug. S. Swanson read a paper, "Flowers for Everybody's Garden," Mr. Farrar read a paper on Sweet Peas and Mr. Reid gave an illustrated lecture on "Rural Landscape Gardening." Premiums were awarded as follows:

L. S. Donaldson Co., first, on palms, ferns and blooming plants; Minneapolis Floral Co., second; Merriam Park Floral Co., third. For roses, Minneapolis Floral Co. received first and Riverside greenhouses second.

HORTICULTURAL WHYS AND WHEREFORES

By Edwin Jenkins, before the North Shore (Mass.) Horticultural Society, Dec. 5, 1913.

"Every why hath a wherefore." Shakespeare.

Mr. President and Members. My plea this evening is for thought, meditation and observation, a plea to everyone to try and satisfy himself with the reason for his every act connected with his work. Many men who dwell within the ranks of horticulture go through life without knowing, or caring very much to know, why they do many (even of) the simplest of every-day operations. That some of these men are quite successful growers I am willing to concede, but I think you will all agree with me when I affirm that did they but add some deep and correct reasoning to their practice they would be still better cultivators, broader men and more likely to earn the respect of their employers and their associates.

In the development of my topic I have asked some questions and I have answered them to the best of my knowledge, but with all humility, realizing that there is more than one side to most questions and that the other side may be more nearly the correct one than the one advanced by the speaker. Here and there, I may ask a question but attempt no answer, trusting to learn from you, or, at the very least, to set some one thinking. Some may regard my "Whys" as trivial, but to those I would say, Remember that this is a plea for thought regarding the simplest actions and operations, with the idea of forming such a habit of mind that we shall be everlastingly questioning; believing that such a habit of mind, once developed would not only result in better and more intelligent work but would lend an added interest to our occupation, making work a greater pleasure, thus benefiting alike the worker and his employer.

Why Water Plants?

Let us commence with one of the simplest kind of questions—Why do we water plants? Because they need water or moisture you will say, and this is perfectly true, but does that tell it all? Is there not something deeper that the man with the watering can or the hose should have a thorough grip upon before he can water with brains as well as water? Should he not realize that the roots of all plants are of the nature of a sponge and can take up no food whatsoever except that which is held in solution in water? He should understand that before the plant reaches the dust-dry stage the roots have ceased to take up water, because the soil particles have the power of withholding from three to ten per cent of water from the plant and therefore that amount of water may as well be non-existent as far as the plant is concerned. He should know that the vital actions of the roots cease near the freezing point, hence the necessity of shading frozen plants, as they will perish of starvation should the sun or a drying wind have free access to them during the time the roots are inactive through low temperature. He should further realize that among the other evils of letting plants get too dry is the production of cracks in the soil, as this cracking will break many of the fine root-hairs which are the feeders and needless to say will give a severe check to the pant. And so this very subject of watering might be enlarged upon as to fill a volume, but enough.

Why Ventilate Greenhouses?

Why do we ventilate the greenhouses? First, to regulate the temperature, and secondly but no less importantly to set the air in motion. This motion of the air has an invigorating, stimulating, life-giving effect upon plants as it has on animals. Heretofore we have been taught that air that has been used was to some extent chemically impure and therefore injurious to plants and animals, but the latest and best scientific information assures us that it is largely a matter of cooling and setting the air in motion. This being the case, there are times when we might regulate the temperature of a greenhouse without the use of the ventilators, yet for the well-being of the plants it is desirable to operate the ventilators and keep the temperature to its proper level of fire heat.

Why Damp Down?

Why do we wet the greenhouse walks and floors, or, in regular greenhouse parlance "why do we damp down?" Not to keep down red-spider, I hope, nor because we were told or made to do it during the days of our apprenticeship. There is sound good reason for damping down such houses as are occupied by plants whose native habitat is the shaded, humid, tropical forest because we must supply the heat they require artificially and as this is usually of such amount that the air becomes too dry so we must likewise supply humidity by artificial means. But because this is true of some plants and some greenhouses it does not follow that damping down is desirable in all greenhouses; far from it. It may be stated as a general proposition that rose, carnation and chrysanthemum houses are sufficiently supplied with atmospheric moisture by the regular waterings and syringings; in fact, we should be very glad of some means of drying the air to some extent at times. Diseases of tomatoes grown inside as well as all the various fungous diseases which affect other plants are easier held in check in a fairly dry atmosphere than in one reeking with moisture. Damping is generally overdone. Exception might be taken to the above statements about not damping rose, chrysanthemum and carnation houses and this applies to very hot, dry days; on such days damping has a very beneficial effect, first by cooling the air, which cooling is almost independent of the temperature of the water used for damping as it is the work done by turning the liquid into a gas which absorbs the heat of the atmosphere, another beneficial effect of damping the houses on extremely hot days being that by moistening the atmosphere we cut down the transpiration of water by the leaves, and transpiration goes on more rapidly at such times than the roots can supply, which causes wilting and sometimes burning, though the plants be ever so wet at the root.

Why Certain "Aspects?"

Why is it important to give a certain aspect to a greenhouse and the correct pitch to the roof? I introduce this subject because it seems to me highly important that every gardener should have this well fixed in his mind as he may be called upon any time to select a site for a greenhouse, and should he make any great error in this selection and the greenhouse be built, nothing but trouble and dissatisfaction will follow for all time. Generally speaking, the good firms of greenhouse builders will, by suggestion or otherwise, see that most houses are correctly placed as regards aspect, but although this is so, it should be nevertheless a part of every gardener's knowledge to know what is the right aspect. For those plants that make their growth and finish between, say March and November 1st, a house running north and south and, of course, facing east and west, will be very satisfactory, especially if of the even-span-roofed type. Such houses make good graperies, peach houses and chrysanthemum houses but for winter growing of roses and carnations houses running east and west are best, though not exactly east and west but with the southerly side facing about twenty degrees east of due south. This slightly eastern aspect is of great importance to the rose grower as his house catches the early morning sunshine which enables him to shut off the fire heat sooner and likewise get his syringing done at an earlier hour, giving the plants a better chance of drying before night; further, scientists claim that the photosynthetic effect of morning sunshine is greater than that of the afternoon and also that we get more sunshine in the morning than we get in the afternoon, all of which favors the house with an aspect that is a little east of south. So much for the aspect. We now come to the matter of pitch or slope of the roof. Theoretically the roof of a greenhouse for the winter growing of plants should be as nearly at a right angle to the sun as possible during the darkest winter months, November, December and January. This, of course, is a counsel of perfection as there are good practical reasons why it is impossible, for our houses would be too high and narrow, but generally speaking, the roof should be as steep as possible and at the same time conform to the general structural requirements. For this latitude a pitch of about thirty-six to forty degrees on the south and fifty on the north is a very good one, but the main ideas to grip are, that the steeper the roof the greater the amount of light which will reach the plants and that as we go north a steeper roof is required than would be needed to give the same amount of light at a point further south. A very good feature of steep roofs is that the snow slides off them in winter especially where there are no gutters on the house.

Why Two-Inch Wrought-Iron Pipes?

Why are two-inch wrought-iron pipes to be preferred to four-inch cast-iron ones for heating greenhouses with hot water? Because in any given number of feet of radiating surface we have only half the quantity of water to heat. This means more rapid circulation and economy; then there is the fact that we can more readily place two-inch pipes without being in the way, and there is the ease with which any changes can be made and, all the threads and fittings being standard, repairs can be easily done. The only good about the cast-iron pipe is its greater freedom from corosion; it will generally last longer than the wrought-iron.

Why Must Night Temperatures Be Uniform?

Why is it more important to keep uniform temperatures at night than during the day? This I conceive to be a question seldom asked and perhaps more seldom answered. Night temperatures are such as experience has shown are best suited to keep the plants as inactive as possible during darkness, without giving the growth too much check. The optimum temperature being given for any kind of plant, let us consider the result of deviation in either direction, up or down. Take any variety of the rose, for instance, whose optimum temperature is 58 and suppose the night temperature to be allowed to fall to 54 or 55 for any length of time, what will be the result? It will result in shorter stems, fewer flowers, and if it is at the critical period in the fall of the year some varieties will go to sleep and will be hard to awaken for a month or two. On the other hand, suppose the temperature be allowed to run up to 62 or 63, then we get longer but weaker stems and flowers which will not keep so well, besides through forcing the plants we lay them open and make them more susceptible to the attacks of all kinds of insects and diseases. These ill effects are likely to be more pronounced when the temperature see-saws up and down, high one night and low the next; naturally, ill effects increase in proportion to the amount of deviation from the correct temperature.

It has ever been my experience that, other things being equal the best stock was grown where they were most particular about keeping correct night temperatures. Now, variation of day temperature is not so important because, in the main, variations are caused by the sun, and if the heat runs up in bright sunshine causing more rapid growth, so likewise is the sun's power greater to keep pace with the heat and to enable the plant leaves to go through their elaborate chemical operations, thereby assuring quality of growth as well as quantity.

Why Plants Turn to Light?

Why does a plant appear to draw towards the light when growing in a window? It is because light retards growth, the stem on the plant growing in the window is shorter on the side next the light and longer on the side away from it, hence the lean.

Why Do We Feed Plants?

Realizing that air and water are the two greatest factors in plant growth, yet when we talk of feeding we generally mean supplying some of the various mineral salts which are supposed to be deficient in the soil. We feed nitrogenous substances to promote and increase growth; phosphatic substances for fruitfulness and early maturity and potash for quality, such as high color and flavor in fruits, scent in flowers, etc. Every man using a fertilizer should know something of its ingredients, chemically, and should know what he is feeding for and whether the particular fertilizer he is using is likely, in the nature of it, to bring about the desired results.

Why Prune?

Why do we prune? Some don't, and others do but partly, but a man should have, if he would prune intelligently, a clear idea of the objects of pruning, which are—first, to so thin out the weak and superfluous growths as to give a maximum of light and air to that which remains to the end that it may become fruitful, strong and healthy. Secondly, to maintain the proper size and form of the tree. Summer pinching or pruning seems to be especially valuable in the production of fruit buds. When a man is pruning a mixed border of flowering shrubs he must ask himself which are spring flowering and which are fall flowering, or, better, which flower on last season's growth and which on the new growth as it makes all the difference in the time and the manner of their pruning. The same applies to the pruning of some of the climbing roses as against the teas and hybrid perpetuals, but this is not a treatise on pruning, but a suggestion for use of thought and questioning in this as in other things. But here is another question on pruning. Why do we root prune? and the answer is, "we don't," or at least very few of us do. And my personal opinion is that it is not worth the labor as the same object of promoting the production of fruit buds may be attained by methods less laborious and just as sure.

Why Mulch?

Why do we mulch? The primary purpose of mulching is the conservation of soil moisture by cutting off evaporation, and of course, when we mulch with manure we are indirectly feeding the plants too. Heavy mulching is a mistake as it will prevent the sun heat from warming the soil and if it excludes the air will cause denitration which is apt to undo much of the good that might rightly be expected of this operation. In the fall we mulch newly transplanted trees because their roots are not in such intimate contact with the soil as to be able to take up sufficient water and so by mulching and preventing the ball from freezing and keeping it fairly moist at all times those roots that are able to perform their functions will keep the plant or tree going until the advent of better growing conditions in the spring. Nature attempts to mulch many trees in the fall, especially the low-growing evergreens, but in our zeal to clean up we are apt to rake them out and thereby rob the evergreen of a much-needed protection for the winter. Many evergreens die during winter and early spring from lack of water, because the ground is frozen deep and the roots cannot take up water, while at the same time the sun is strong and perhaps there is a cold drying wind. Were these trees heavily mulched with leaves the frost would not go so deep, thereby allowing the roots to supply water and in many cases valuable trees would be saved.

Why does the grass grow so much more luxuriantly on the lawn in spots where mushrooms have been growing than elsewhere? I attempt no answer but merely note the fact in the hope that some of you might furnish the explanation.

Why Drain Land?

Why do we drain land? We drain land to remove stagnant water and to lower the natural water table to such depths as we believe to be conducive to the healthy development of plant life.

Why is from three to four feet the best depth to lay tile drains? Only a short time ago a prominent gardener while giving a talk before one of the horticultural societies condemned the idea of draining so deep and argued that depths around thirty inches were sufficient, because the drains were then nearer to their work, as if their work was at the surface. This is a subject that only comes up occasionally and gardeners are not often called upon to lay out and construct systems of drainage, but I am firmly convinced that it should be a part of every gardener's education to know the correct principles of land drainage, and, because of the general confusion of ideas which seem to play around this subject, I trust you will excuse me for taking a little time in dealing with it. From three to four feet is advocated because, after nearly a hundred years of experience and experiment the world over, in all kinds of soil, under a great diversity of conditions, and at depths ranging between one and eight feet, the balance of authority is in favor of the depths mentioned. Forty-two inches is better than thirty because it gives another foot of living, growing, inhabitable soil, for it must be known and understood that a soil filled with free stagnant water is a dead soil as far as the great majority of plants are concerned, in fact all with the exception of a few aquatic and semi-aquatic plants. You have all seen a tree that was dug out of, or even blown over in swampy land and noted that its roots seldom or never go down more than a foot or so,—at any rate, to no greater depths than that to which the water recedes during the summer. At depths greater than four feet the cost of the work increases at a greater rate than the benefits accrue, but the greater the depth the greater the amount of water a drain will discharge in a given time. As four feet is the limit of capillarity in all but the very closest grained soils we do away with the cold of evaporation which is what keeps our soils cold and makes them so late in spring. Some might say if you cut off capillarity our soils would get too dry through not getting the benefit of the water raised from lower depths by this means, but this is a false alarm as four feet of well drained soil will hold between the soil particles about twelve hundred tons of water to the acre, which is nearly one-third of our average annual rainfall and enough for any crop; besides this would be replenished by every rainfall. Then there is the fact that rains bring down nitrogen amounting to several pounds per annum, as well as carbonic acid, which has a solvent effect on the soil. Now, experiments conducted by unimpeachable authorities have shown that shallow drains carry away much more plant food than the deeper drains do, simply because the rain is filtered through a greater depth of soil into the deep drains.

Drains are not put down from three to four feet to protect them from any possible action by frost, as in countries where frost hardly ever goes in a foot these depths obtain, though in the New England climate there is danger to shallow drains through heaving of the soil, as in resettling there is a chance of disturbance of the alignment which would be fatal to the drain, and some very soft tiles may go to pieces through getting frozen, as you have seen soft bricks do. On the score of economy the deeper drains have something on the shallow ones, as the shallow drains, to be effective, must be closer together, which will entail a greater cost for tile and which will more than offset the extra foot or eighteen inches of digging in the lesser number of deeper ditches. I might quote the late Colonel Wearing, who was perhaps the greatest drainage engineer that this country has ever had, and Josiah Parkes who was for many years the drainage engineer to the Royal Agricultural Society of Great Britain. I say, I might quote these and other eminent authorities at considerable length to support my contention that shallow drainage is wasteful, inefficient, and therefore wrong, but for fear of wearying you I will desist. There is, however, one other question on drainage that I wish to ask and answer, which is:

Why Is Porous Material Harmful?

Why is it harmful to put crushed stone, gravel or other porous material in direct contact with tile drains? First, because the best authorities on drainage condemn it, some of them going so far as to advise the use of good stiff clay for the first foot over the drains. Secondly, because you are aiming to have the water flow up into the drains from the bottom and not percolate in from the top. Third, because water with free material such as gravel to pass through rapidly down to the drain will carry a lot of fine silt which may get into the drain and cause serious trouble. Then, if further reasons are wanted, there is the cost, which would be a serious item on any large job and, besides, it would be spending money on something more apt to do harm than good.

Why the Talk?

Mr. Arnold Bennet deplores the general tendency of mankind to let their mental machinery rust in their cranium. If anything I have said this evening shall be the means of stimulating any one of you to do a little more serious thinking of the "whys and wherefores" of your daily work, I shall feel abundantly repaid for any little effort that I have put forth in coming before you this evening.

TWO USEFUL GARDEN PERENNIALS.

LUPINUS POLYPHYLLUS ROSENS.

Lupinus polyphyllus roseus is a fine pink flowered form of the well-known dark blue lupin of the gardens. The picture shows the stately beauty of the plant when in bloom in mass effect and the characteristic digitate foliage which is attractive at all times. These lupines are of the easiest culture and perfectly hardy.

Iris siberica is, as its name indicates, a native of northern Asia and one of the hardiest. The forms are many as to color, the type being lilac blue and pale violet. A rich, deep and moist soil and abundant sunshine are to its liking and what may be expected of it under such conditions is well shown in the accompanying illustration.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

A paper read by C. W. Johnson, Secretary of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, before the Minnesota State Florists' Association.

The chrysanthemum both from a commercial and exhibition standpoint is a very important factor to the florist, whether he be a grower, a retailer, or a commission man. The young plants and rooted cuttings are also a leading feature with most of the wholesale plantsmen.

The Commercial Standpoint.

In presenting an article of this character to a body of florists, the feature of first importance is to take up the subject from a commercial standpoint. The commercial qualities of chrysanthemums are looked upon from slightly different angles by each branch of the trade. The growers' point of view is that the variety must be a good grower, easy to produce from, that it will develop a double flower of good color from each bud section; not so heavy in foliage that it will require extra space to grow it; it must be medium dwarf and 99 per cent. of the flowers come perfect. The flowers should be pure in color tone and not susceptible to damping or spotting of the petals, and, last but not least, they must have a good substance and keeping qualities so as to travel long distances without damage. A close, compact flower is considered to be of greater commercial value than a loose, ragged one. The commission man does not have the question of habit or growth to contend with. His main point of view is the selling value and the keeping qualities of the variety. These are also very telling points with the retailer, but color is one of his main considerations. Every man who sells flowers knows the value of a pleasing shade of color. It must have life enough in its tone to harmonize with the different furnishings that are used in decorative work. White, yellow and pink are the colors most in demand, but the light bronzes and maroons are beginning to be used more and more each year for special work or occasions.

Growing Commercial Blooms.

I will now take up the growing of commercial cut blooms. Let us start with the end of a chrysanthemum season, or the latter part of November. Select for the stock plants the strongest and cleanest of the stools that do not show any signs of leaf disease. If a bench is available in a light house where the temperature can be held around 45 degrees at night, and where abundant ventilation can be given on every favorable occasion, it is the best place that can be had to carry over the stock plants. When a bench as described is not at your command, then the stools should be put up into shallow flats, working plenty of soil down between each stool, so that the roots will have something to work on to produce abundant cuttings. We sometimes see the stock plants put up in flats and set underneath the benches for three months or more. This is a serious mistake, because under such conditions the stools cannot possibly throw up anything more than a spindly cutting, beside being nests for woodlice and many other insects. It is just as important to give your stock plants plenty of light and care as it is to give the bench plants good culture. A number of growers follow the method of taking off the suckers during October and November, potting them up into 2½-inch pots. When well-rooted and established, plant them out on benches in good, live soil, and as they begin to grow, take off the tops for the first batch of cuttings. The plants that are left will then begin to send out from each joint shoots that are the very best of material for cuttings; also at the base of the plants numerous suckers will shoot out which also make fine cuttings and root easily. Stock plants of this character will continue to produce cuttings until very late in spring so that by following this method a large number of plants can be worked up from a small amount of stock. The care of the stock plants during the winter is very important. They should be kept in a moderately dry condition at the roots and given plenty of air on every favorable occasion, with a low temperature maintained at all times. Very little propagation for commercial stock is started before March, which means that the stock plants must not be treated too liberally with water or subjected to a high temperature, or the wood for cuttings will stretch out and become spindly.

Propagation.

The next item of our subject is the taking of the cutting and its propagation. It has been said that a cutting as thin as a darning needle, if given good culture afterwards, is just as good as a stronger one, but I have not found it so. I am a firm believer in starting out with the very best material available and rather than take a cutting too thin would give it more time to gain strength. It seems hardly necessary to touch on the question of trimming the cuttings. Suffice it to say that when they are trimmed back a little more strength is given them to root out, also they take up less room in the cutting bed. Provide a sharp, clean sand for the propagating bed and make sure of ample drainage to carry off the water freely without letting the sand through the bottom of the bench. Our plan is to cover the bottom of the bench with ¾-inch limestone, which acts as a drainage, and prevents the sand from washing through. The location of the propagating bed is an important point. A few of the varieties need a little higher temperature to root them, but the majority are better off if allowed to root slowly. A sand temperature of 54 degrees with an overhead temperature of 50 degrees throughout the body of the house we have found best suited for them. The best time for starting the propagating depends on the variety, its season of blooming and, to some extent, the grade of stock desired; also, if early propagation is carried on, whether the young stock in the rush of spring business will receive proper care and attention. Varieties like Ivory and its sports, Polly Rose, or any of the other dwarf growers which take a long season to make stems, should be propagated the latter part of February or early in March. The very early flowering varieties, Golden Glow and Smith's Advance, when wanted for August or early September flowering and can be planted early before becoming hard, should be rooted ready to take from the sand by the middle of March. They can then be potted into 2½-inch pots, transferred into 3-inch between April 15 and May 1, and be ready to be planted into the benches about May 20.

Early and Mid-Season Varieties.

The main section of the early varieties which mature their flowers early in October, should be ready for potting from the sand the first week of April. This will allow for them to be given another shift into 3-inch pots early in May and planted into the benches the first week in June. A list of good commercial varieties for early October flowering are: Polly Rose (white), Unaka (pink), Monrovia (yellow), Mlle. Arlette Dubois (white), Virginia Poehlmann (white), Donatello (yellow), Pacific Supreme (pink), White and Pink Ivory, Mlle. Clementine Touset, Yellow Touset, Ramapo, Mme. day and Mrs. H. W. Buckbee.

The mid-season, or all varieties that mature their blooms between October 25 and November 15, are next in order. Taking this section as a whole as regards their propagation, they will average more perfect and larger blooms from April-rooted stock than from any other, but let me emphasize the great importance of caring for the young plants directly they are rooted, because a few days either way in the time of the plants' propagation is not of such a vital importance as is the care that is given them afterwards. The mid-season varieties that have stood the test are so well-known to you that it is needless for me to enumerate a list of varieties, but there is one point that I feel I should bring out, and that is, we are drawing the lines too close on color. There is altogether too much of the sameness as regards color among the chrysanthemums grown for commercial purposes and we find that the people are demanding a few of the other colors besides white, pink and yellow, such as light bronze, maroon, old gold and the red and crimsons.

After-Culture.

As I have mentioned before, after the young stock has been potted from the sand give them as natural a treatment as can be given. Do not overwater or allow them to become dustdry. Do not force by high temperature or close conditions. Keep them clean of every kind of insect and give them plenty of ventilation on every favorable occasion.

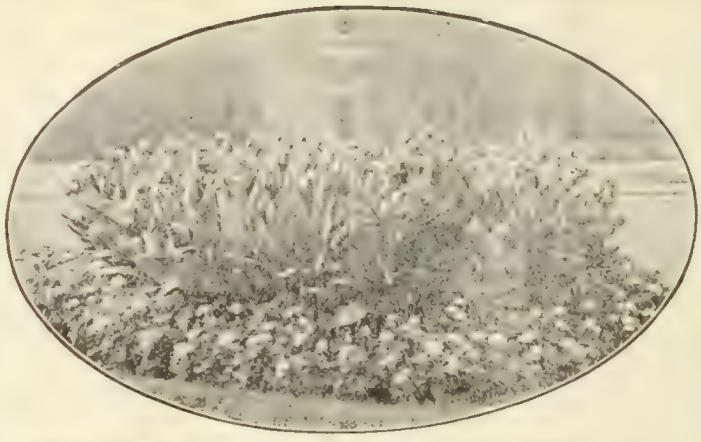
WALTER MOTT'S NOTES BY THE WAY.

Parkersburg, W. Va.

Chas. P. Dudley took advantage of the chance to secure a fine store in the centre of the town on a long lease and has fitted it up in the latest style. There are really two stores in one, which enables him to carry a big stock. As president of the Chamber of Commerce he has an excellent following.

J. W. Dudley Co. report a good Thanksgiving business and are preparing for a busy Christmas with a choice stock at the old stand.

Wheeling, W. Va.



A short time ago, when Arthur Langhans purchased an old colonial mansion in the Fifth avenue residence district, it was the general opinion of the trade that he had made a bad move. Subsequent events have proved the opposite, as the location is ideal for the business. A handsome store, with a frontage of 13 feet and ceiling 17 feet, affords every opportunity for making attractive displays. A show house and small range at side and rear contains a fine assortment of stock for the holidays. Mr. Langhans reports a shortage of stock.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

The absence of bright weather is seen in the faded color in both pink roses and carnations, being neither pink nor white and lacking in substance. A few bright days are hoped for to improve the stock for holiday trade, which promises to be fully up to the average. Already the stores are decorated—some very artistically—but the writer was impressed by the quantity of artificial stock seen, particularly in some where the windows did not differ from a Woolworth store. With the counterfeit article so strongly in evidence, it surely must affect, to some extent, the sale of the real thing. The argument that the goods cost less and there is more profit in handling than with live stock may sound feasible at first sight but rather short-sighted on reflection. The substitution of artificial for real palms for decorative work was primarily responsible for the almost disuse of any in favor of ferns and it will doubtless be their fate whenever they are imitated to the same extent.

We learn from an item in the New York Times for December 9, that Henri Beaulieu, a well-known French seedsman of Woodhaven, N. Y., has been missing since September 13, on which date he was discharged from a hospital after undergoing medical treatment. Mr. Beaulieu was absent for a long period once before, but turned up finally, having been in France, and it is hoped by his friends that he may yet come to light in the same way on this occasion.

Swastika Brand Cannas
Are Used Exclusively By The Government

IN the beautiful Capitol grounds surrounding the Governmental buildings of this mighty nation, C. & J. Swastika Brand Cannas are used almost without exception. The reason for this seeming partiality is best sized up in a letter from the Department of Agriculture, a phrase from which reads: "We want only the best Cannas obtainable." That our soil here is particularly fortunate for growing Cannas, you would at once recognize could you see the thousands of fat heavy clumps we dug from our fields this Fall. Over eighty varieties of our own producing we now have—twenty of which are bronze foliaged. If you want some of these C. & J. Swastika Brand Cannas that are grown with care for people who care, then order early. We cannot otherwise guarantee to give you full quantities in all the kinds you will want. Orders placed now, held for shipment when you wish.

REGULATIONS GOVERNING PLANT IMPORTATIONS.

Federal Horticultural Board.

For plant exportation to the United States, the regulations under the Plant Quarantine Act (Circular No. 44, Office of the Secretary of Agriculture) establishes the following classification:

1. Countries which maintain nursery stock inspection and certification, in accordance with the regulations drawn under the Plant Quarantine Act.

2. Countries which do not maintain nursery stock inspection and certification.

Countries of the first class only are open to commercial importation of nursery stock, and no restriction is placed on the amount or character of nursery stock which may be imported from such countries, except as to such nursery stock as may be excluded under specific quarantine.

Nursery stock from countries which do not maintain nursery stock inspection will be admitted into the United States only for experimental purposes and in limited quantities, under special permit, through the particular port designated in such permit. (See regulation 5). Such nursery stock must also, before delivery, be opened and examined at port of entry by an inspector of this Department, and cannot be entered unless it is found to be free from plant diseases and insect pests.

Importers are therefore urgently advised to limit their application for strictly commercial imports to the countries listed below. Any country not now on this list will be placed there as soon as this Department has been officially notified of the compliance of such country with the regulations governing inspection and certification.

Countries Now Open to Commercial Importation of Nursery Stock, With Official Seal of Each.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

Albert F. Esch had an exciting time last week when fire, originating in a paper warehouse adjoining his property, threatened to destroy his entire place. The wind blew the flames in his direction causing the glass in one of the houses to become hot and when hit by water, nearly every pane in one of the houses broke. In addition, water undermined the foundations and considerable of the masonry was washed away. This house was filled with lilies ready for the Christmas business, and a large quantity of ferns and palms, some of which were being held in storage for a local florist. The damage amounts to between $750 and $1,000. This is the third misfortune that has befallen Mr. Esch during the last four months. During a recent heavy hail storm his property was badly damaged and shortly after that his boiler gave out, necessitating the installation of a new one.

Washington florists spent a very pleasant evening at an entertainment given at the Elks' Home by Kallipolis Grotto, an organization of which practically every florist in this city is a member. Among those who participated were William F. Gude, George Shaffer, Adolph Gude, Fred H. Kramer, O. A. C. Oehmler, Edward S. Schmid and I. Rosnosky of Philadelphia.

Fred H. Kramer's greenhouse looked something like a jungle last week during the cat show. There was something doing every minute, for if one of the cats was not trying to make its escape, another was trying to claw out someone's eyes. The average daily attendance was about 500 people and this should result in quite a lot of additional business for Mr. Kramer. At the poultry show, held in connection with the cat show, William F. Gude delivered the welcome speech, Edward S. Schmid lorded it over the judges, and a number of other florists mixed up in the scheme. The pressing of a button at the White House by President Wilson caused the lighting up of the hall, the draping of a flag bringing into view a large collection of American Beauty roses, the opening of the show.

The free distribution of seeds by the Government, which frequently resulted in crops of vegetables on front lawns where only grass and flowers were supposed to grow, will be discontinued if Congress adopts a recommendation of the Secretary of Agriculture contained in the book of estimates. The "reform" is expected to arouse a wail of protest that may prevent its adoption.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Hamlin has instructed the officials at the various custom houses to return to the post offices at which received, a number of packages of nursery stock shipped from foreign countries either through ignorance or in violation of the plant quarantine act. This stock is to be sent back to the original shippers.

CHICAGO NOTES.

Christmas Plants.

The stock of plants in and about Chicago will mean even more to the local trade than in former holidays, which is saying a great deal. Year by year, the plant sales have crept up till, to walk into the down-town retail flower stores, Christmas week, one would almost wonder if cut flowers were being sold at all. This year, nearly a month of warm, cloudy or rainy weather has reduced the cut of first-class flowers, and the shipping trade will probably consume by far the greater part of them, leaving the local sales more dependent than ever upon plants. Poinsettias will lead, with azaleas closely following. These were so far along that the unseasonable weather has had little effect upon them. The supply is probably larger than in any previous year, as it has gained each year for the past ten The poinsettia sells at sight, the only choice being the best-shaped plants. In azaleas, the bright colors are the sellers, as usual, and there is little demand for the white. Of all the azaleas sold during the entire winter, probably Simon Mardner and Mme. Petrick form the greater part. Cyclamen are affording the growers much concern, for they are very difficult to bring into bloom without sunshine. There is some good stock, however. Begonias have grown greatly in favor recently, and Glory of Cincinnati seems in the lead in popularity. There does not appear to be the demand for berried plants that existed from three to five years ago in this market. It seems impossible that ruscus, statice and prepared ferns could sell in place of plants, but such is the case. The hampers of live plants, usually the most expensive of the florists' offerings, are now reproduced in smaller effects, by a basket of red or green, filled with colored ruscus, statice, cones, etc.

One of the large retail stores sells plants in hampers from numbered samples, which avoids all confusion and litter in the store. Each style is numbered and the list with description of each kind is kept, so stock can be easily replenished as it is sold out.

Some fine lead pencils are being distributed by the Chicago Carnation Co. to its patrons.

California holly is booked to arrive in Chicago a week before Christmas. It was very satisfactory last year.

As the holidays draw near, the plant growers seem more cheerful than the cut flower men, though they are having their troubles also, coaxing blooms without sunshine.

Hardy phlox is reported by A. L. Vaughan to have bloomed in his yard early in December. Outdoor violets and dandelions were also in bloom and a Chicago newspaper had a picture of children gathering them.

Ilex verticillata, commonly known as winter berries, are missed from the market this year. The hard frost followed by continued warm rain softened the berries. Princess pine is not seen in the usual quantity, and holly so far is not of very superior quality.

Visitors: Charles Balluff, of Hill Floral Co., Indianapolis, Ind.; C. Lund, Wausau, Wis.; Rentschler Bros., Madison, Wis.; Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Reicher, Michigan City, Ind.; Wm. P. Craig, Philadelphia, Pa.; Mr. Leidiger, of Edlefsen & Ludiger Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; A. Schutz, Hammond, Ind.; Mr. Sarros, Chicago Heights, Ill.; Henry Ilg, Winnetka, Ill.; F. L. Henry, Watseka, Ill.

The New French Hydrangeas

The dormant stock which we now have stored in cold frames is in prime condition to force for Easter, or to bring on slowly for Memorial Day and Spring sales. If you have no stock of these, you will make no mistake in taking advantage of this offer, you will find them good sellers.

AVALANCHE. A splendid large white with a well established reputation; an easy variety to force.

BOTANISTE PELTEREAU. Enormous flowers of a pretty mauve rose.

BOUQUET ROSE. Large trusses of rosy amber turning to bright pink; a favorite with all growers.

DENTELLE. Entirely distinct, deeply fringed flower of a creamy white color; it is not suited for forcing, but for Decoration Day and later flowering it is very valuable.

FRAICHEUR. Very large, regularly shaped flowers, white, delicately suffused with rose, very free flowering.

GENERAL DE VIBRAYE. A favorite wherever seen; very large heads of bright rose colored flowers, a splendid early forcing variety.

LA LORRAINE. Very large flowers, pale rose, turning to bright pink; has become a general favorite during the past two years.

MME. A. RIVERAIN. Superb bright rose color; very vigorous and floriferous.

MME. E. MOUILLERE. Probably the most popular white variety on the market today, an early easy variety to force.

MME. MAURICE HAMAR. A delicate flesh-rose color, a vigorous grower, the individual flowers as well as the trusses being very large. One of the easiest to force early.

MME. RAYMOND. Large trusses of perfectly round flowers of a transparent white, passing to a tender rose.

MME. AGNES BARILLET. A splendid white; a grand variety for a 5 or 6-inch pot plant. From our own observation we are inclined to consider this the best of all the whites.

MLLE. RENEE GAILLARD. Very large panicles of milky white, irregularly dentated flowers. One of the best growers says that this should have been awarded the Silver Medal given to Mme. Emile Mouillere.

MLLE. DE TREMAULT. As the result of our own trials we are convinced that this variety is the best very large flowered white yet introduced. As free flowering as any, of splendid erect habit, producing flower-heads as large as the old popular Otaksa.

MOUSSELINE. A beautiful mauve-rose with cream-colored centre; the flower heads are large and held erect; a fine acquisition.

MONT ROSE. Immense panicles of clear-flesh rose, entirely distinct, one of the best very early flowering varieties.

MONS. G. RENAULT. Very large flowers of a bright rose with carmine reflex; very free and easily forced.

ORNAMENT. Large pretty mauve-pink flowers, very free flowering.

RONSARD. Flowers and trusses very large, of a beautiful rose-tint.

SOUVENIR DE MME. E. CHAUTARD. One of the very best, of splendid erect habit, very robust, medium-sized heads, of bright rose-colored flowers; one of the very best of the Bouquet Rose type.

SENATEUR HENRI DAVID. Another splendid rose-colored variety, with red reflections, flowers produced in immense large heads on the style of La Lorraine, but an earlier bloomer.

Made any move yet to maintain a sufficient supply of Orchids for the coming months? If not, then let me advise you to do so, for there will be more Orchids used during the season of 1913-1914 than in any two previous seasons. All indications point to this and I am prepared, as in the past, to take care of all customers who speak in time.

SEED TRADE

The new seed and implement store of Burnett Bros. at 98 Chambers street, New York, is now well arranged and makes one of the most convenient and attractive stores in the city, while the location leaves nothing to be desired. The building, which Burnett Bros. occupy entirely, consists of five stories with basement and sub-basement with elevator service from basement to top. Fertilizers are stored in the sub-basement and the packing rooms, insecticide and sundries departments occupy the main basement. The store with its show cases, seed bins, etc., which occupies the street floor, is spacious and well fitted up, the rear being devoted to offices. The four upper floors are devoted respectively to poultry supplies, incubators, etc., vegetable seeds in bulk, grass seeds, garden implements and tools.

The firm is composed of George and Samuel Burnett, who have been so associated since 1905. George Burnett, the senior partner, has been identified with the New York seed trade for upwards of a quarter of a century. His two sons, William J. and Robert Mann Burnett, are now associated with their father and uncle in the store—one in the office and the other on counter trade. Both these young men have enjoyed a good education and are graduates of the Spencer business college, and give every promise of capability to handle this growing business when the time comes for their elders to pass on.

We have just been informed that Senator Gronna of North Dakota, expects to have a public hearing in February, on Senate Bill 480, to Regulate the Sale of Seed in Interstate Commerce, before the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry in Washington. This bill is a very drastic proposition and it should, and doubtless will, be strenuously opposed by the seed trade. All those interested should send to Washington for a copy and study its provisions carefully.

W. J. Collins, formerly employed by Jos. Breck & Sons Corporation, has recently accepted a position with Carter's Tested Seeds, Inc., Chamber of Commerce Building, Boston. This is a branch of the firm of Jas. Carter & Co., London, England.

Luther A. Breck has been admitted to the Joseph Breck & Sons Corporation, and has been chosen vice-president of the company. This young man is the fourth generation of Brecks in this old established Boston house.

HEARING ON POTATO QUARANTINE.

The Secretary of Agriculture has called a public hearing at the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., at 10.00 a. m., December 18, 1913, in order that all persons interested in the importation of the common, or Irish, potato from Canada and Europe may be heard concerning the establishment of a quarantine, to be effective January 1, 1914, forbidding the importation of potatoes from these foreign regions. The contemplated quarantine extends to all parts of Canada and Europe the quarantine at present in effect against the British Isles, Germany, Austria Hungary, Newfoundland, and two islands belonging to France in the St. Lawrence River, called Pierre and Miquelon.

The reason for considering the extension of the present quarantine to all of Europe and to Canada, is the belief that it is necessary in order to prevent the introduction into the United States of the powdery scab (Spongospora subterranea) and other diseases which would seriously affect the potato production of the United States. This disease is reported to be widely prevalent in Ireland and Scotland and in other sections where there is this year a large crop of potatoes.

The powdery scab disease resembles the common scab, which is found widely distributed in this country, although the two diseases are readily distinguished by several characteristics. Affected tubers first show rounded, blister-like spots, a sixteenth to an eighth of an inch in diameter. The skin over the pustules soon breaks, revealing a dark-brown, powdery surface composed mostly of spore balls which serve to propagate the disease. The spots later enlarge and deepen, and frequently coalesce, forming large areas of diseased tissue, which makes the tubers unsightly and greatly reduces their market value.

Powdery scab is introduced into uninfected areas through the use of infected seed potatoes. Although practically unknown in the United States, traces of it have been found in one or two instances and it is important to maintain a close watch to see that it does not become established and further distributed.

The contemplated extension of the quarantine and the call for the hearing are simply coincident and have no direct bearing on the representation made by Mr. T. P. Gill, Secretary of the Irish Department of Agriculture, that potatoes from Ireland be admitted to this country. Mr. Gill's representation was that the danger from the potato wart, which was one of the major purposes of the previous quarantine order, had been so controlled in Ireland that potatoes could be shipped from there without danger of the spread of the potato wart. The members of the Federal Horticultural Board, however, have found that the existence of the powdery scab involves an even greater menace to the crop of this country. As a result, they feel that even if there were no danger from potato wart the quarantine against Ireland would have to be continued to guard against this new disease.

A NEW METHOD OF SUB-IRRIGATION AND DRAINAGE.

Lewis S. Woodruff addressed the Boston Market Gardeners' Association at the meeting held December 6, on "Drainage and Sub-Irrigation."

Mr. Woodruff is the inventor of a new method of combined drainage and sub-irrigation which has aroused considerable interest by reason of the results shown in increasing yield of horticultural land. It reduces the labor of intensive cultivation and, according to those who are using it, absolutely eliminates all danger from prolonged drought.

After enumerating the reasons why drainage pays and explaining some of the scientific effects that drainage has on the texture and plant food supply of the soil, the speaker described his system. He declared that there was no meadow so wet or no hillside so dry that they couldn't be brought to the precise scientific degree of moisture required for the production of the maximum crop. The new system was described as a series of subterranean wells which are so connected by metal pipes that they will be emptied simultaneously at any time that water fills them to a certain height. Water is free to run into or out of these wells through their open bottoms, and subirrigation is afforded to dry lands by supplying water to the upper unit of a series. When the water rises to a certain level in the first well it will run into the next one below, and so on until the whole row of wells is filled. This results in the formation of a subterranean lake under the whole field. The water from this underground lake rises by capillary attraction from one soil particle to another in thin films and keeps the area above it damp all the time. Every once in a while this lake is withdrawn by a sort of syphon action which starts up whenever the water in the wells gets too high and continues until all the wells in the entire system are drained dry. Thereupon the process is repeated.

Mr. Woodruff explained that the sudden removal of the lake draws air into the spaces in the soil vacated by the water. A constant breathing action is thus obtained. He pointed out clearly the advantage of this manipulation of the water and the air within the earth and went into considerable detail as to the resulting improvement in the texture, life, richness and healthfulness of the soil.

SUCCESSFUL ADVERTISING OF A RETAIL FLORIST.

(Read before the New York Florists' Club, by Max Schling.)

"Advertising for a retail florist is a very stretchable expression. Advertising in the broad every-day way in daily papers can hardly be utilized for our regular trade. Our business is a personal business. A young man buys flowers for his mother, for his sister, or what in most instances is much more important to him—for his intended; or a husband for his wife, or they place orders for dinners, weddings or other occasions, where they not only want to have the flowers sent a short time before they are utilized, but where they have to depend that something pretty is delivered on time. They must have a certain amount of confidence in the ability of the business man. The people to whom we mostly cater, the well situated, who are mainly the supporters of the florist business, will not buy for their important occasions flowers to be sent to their friends or relatives from an advertisement, except in a very few instances. They want to have the feeling that their friends shall not be disappointed in what they are sending to them; they do not want to have a decoration for an important dinner from some one stranger, running a chance that it might not be nice; they cannot send the flowers back fifteen minutes before they are used, and order different flowers somewhere else; and the young man will not order a bridal bouquet in a strange place or where he is uncertain whether he might get the very best for his purpose and for his money. To make his work known to these people and to get new customers, a retailer has only one advertising, and that is demonstration.

To demonstrate how our flowers keep, how our flowers are sent out, how our flowers are packed, to demonstrate our goods to people who we think should know what we are able to do with our flowers, to people who have influence in society or who have large circles of friends, and especially people who would appreciate attention—such people we have to pick out, and if they do not come to us we have to go to them, and if we cannot go to them ourselves we simply send our messengers to them, and let them demonstrate for us. By messengers I do not mean the kind of two-legged individual whose time we can buy for a few cents in a telegraph office, but instead of spending four to five hundred dollars a month for advertising in daily papers, we simply should watch the market a little closer, and any grower who is overstocked with inexpensive flowering plants or any kind of flowers from the wholesale market which are plentiful at a reasonable price, we should buy for this advertising money and send it out, put up with as much taste as possible in little baskets or boxes, to people who will appreciate little attentions, who will speak about them to their friends, who will show their visitors flowers sent to them from their florist, who may not be big customers themselves, but who will bring others, and it's rarely the case that these little attentions are lost.

This way is open to every florist. It not only helps himself in his business, but it also helps to clear the market at times when it is overflooded, or, if he himself is overstocked it keeps his place clear from over-surplus. It is the very best advertising matter there is, except one, which is less expensive, which brings more admirers of his work because he can then show his real good work; it brings him more prestige, because the press without being paid for it, gives a full account of his labor, and this better advertising is the exhibitions.

I do not speak only about personal experience. I have exhibited a great deal in my life, more abroad than in the United States, and I have seen small firms grow to big firms, only through the right kind of exhibiting, and I have seen firms to be known all over the country over night, just because they knew when to draw the attention of the public to their products. The time given to me for this address is limited, and so I have to stop, but I would like to particularly draw the attention of our fellow members to one fact, that our successful advertising is plain demonstration; that the only way open to us to demonstrate on a larger scale is our exhibitions; and therefore, I believe that we retailers should support the clubs much more even the grower, because we have much more to gain from these demonstrations, and the least thing we can do is to put all our surplus strength to the task to support the grower, and open the gate to successful advertising for both.

A BENEDICTION.

You won't know why that title until you come to the last word of this brief manifesto. Everybody knows Robert Craig. But all don't know how his two boys, William and Robert, are keeping abreast of the times. Not content with growing the finest collection of Christmas plants that can be found in this vicinity—cyclamens, poinsettias, begonias, ardisias, skimmias, and all the beautiful foliage and flowering plants peculiar to Christmas, they have prepared a benediction to the feast in the shape of made-up baskets, pots and pans, beautifully and artistically arranged. This is really an inspiration to the retailer and the benediction part comes in at the wind-up of one's visit. You have ordered everything you need and you are through. That's the point where the "benediction bunch" gets you. Once you see them: "Sure, I want a dozen of that and two dozen of that, and—." Well, we leave the rest to your imagination. Bless you, my children.

Obituary

Francis Goble.

Francis Goble, for many years well-known to the trade in Kansas City, died suddenly at Excelsior Springs, Mo., recently. He had been in failing health for some time.

Mrs. F. Warendorf.

Mrs. Fanny Warendorf, one of the oldest florists in New York City, died on Monday morning, December 8. We have no particulars of Mrs. Warendorf's life, other than our meagre personal knowledge. Cruel misfortune struck her during the Civil War, when her home in the South was destroyed, her property all confiscated and she came North with her boys to start life anew with a courage that was as admirable as it was rare. She worked and her sons worked and the names of Fleischmann (her first family) and Warendorf are interwoven into the history of the New York flower business for a generation.

Mrs. Warendorf was a very sweet little lady, beloved of all in the trade for her industry, integrity and her graceful personality.

A SHIPPING CENTRE

Albany, New York, is the logical distributing centre for a very large flower consuming section. Facilities for transportation, north, east, south and west are unexcelled, and when to this fact we add a first class supply and a thorough knowledge of the wholesale flower shipping trade, you can understand that

A MODEL FLOWER STORE.

The new store of the Rentschler Floral Co., Madison, Wisconsin, recently opened, is pronounced, "the handsomest and most complete retail florist's establishment in the state." The equipment is modern in every detail and from basement to ceiling all fixtures, refrigerators and ice machine, were purchased direct from one manufacturer.

All woodwork is oak-stained forest green, with white marble trim; the ceiling is beamed and stained to match the fixtures. Across the back of the store is the large refrigerator display case with three full length doors. This refrigerator has five large drawers in one end, for the storage of ferns and violets. The interior is lined with French plate mirrors in the back and sides and has a white enamelled ceiling and white tile floor. The doors of the refrigerator have three thicknesses of polished plate glass and are fitted with nickeled hardware. Above the refrigerator, going clear across the store, is an attractive art glass partition.

There are two large, glazed wall cases, as well as a customer's desk with plate glass stationery compartments, a marble top working counter and refrigerator display counter for showing small cut flowers. The side walls are panelled and fitted with numerous full length plate mirrors.

The floor is tile and a large work room is provided in back of the refrigerator. The work room has a rear entrance, so that supplies can be brought in without going through the show room.

Refrigerator and refrigerator display case are cooled by a 1½-ton United Ice Machine. The ice machine is of such a capacity that a large storage refrigerator can be cooled in addition to the present equipment.

That it is a great advantage to the florist to be able to purchase direct from one manufacturer store fixtures, refrigerators and ice machines, seems to be clearly shown by this beautiful store outfit.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Roses have been scarce for the past week, but the outlook for the coming few weeks is excellent and the quality of flowers now being received is very acceptable. Prices are following the quality upward on all roses, and fancy things like Killarney Queen, Russell and special Sunburst readily bring prices rarely equalled by tea roses in any recent years. American Beauty is in fair supply and very nice quality. Carnations are particularly good stock, now that chrysanthemums have seen their finish, and the quality is beyond criticism. Pink Delight is forging ahead and taking the place so long occupied by Enchantress. Violets are very scarce and are bringing record figures, the doubles selling up to $1.00 per 100 and singles $1.50, with no Christmas quotations less than $2.00, which is a rather dangerous proposition, judging from past experience. Southern spray asparagus is being received in heavy invoices, but much of it is heated in transportation and drops its foliage, yet even at that it has broken the market badly on the locally-grown product.

BUFFALO Trade was much on the quiet side during the past week. There was plenty of everything. Chrysanthemums are still in the market, mostly Nonin, Dean and the Joneses, though the sales have not been of the best. There are plenty of carnations and more of the white than colored; the same in roses. Narcissi are still an over-supply and sales very weak. This has been the poorest season on record for the sale of narcissi. The wholesaler and retailer cannot move them at any price. Violets are plentiful and not selling. Lilies are moving a trifle better. Holly and other greens are in the market and busy times are soon looked for.

CHICAGO Since Thanksgiving very few days have seen a normal amount of business. There has been no special demand for cut flowers, locally, and as the unseasonable weather has been general, the shipping trade has fallen off likewise. Then the quality of the great bulk of stock coming in was not at its best and buyers were cautious about investing. Much concern was felt for the Christmas stock during the rainy spell and the change to cooler weather on Sunday, the 7th inst., was hailed with joy, though a hard wind was blowing and no sunshine appeared. Roses are, in general, rather a doubtful proposition, for no one can tell just how the warm, damp weather may have affected the buds now on the plants. Carnations were inclined to be a little soft, but the drop in temperature has saved the day for them, though there will not be any too many to meet the demand. Violets are picking up again and miscellaneous stock is fair. The shortage in Beauties continues, and it is not expected to ease up till after the holidays. There is plenty of green, including some holly of fair quality.

SPECIAL ROSES

FOR CHRISTMAS TRADE

We will have some special Killarneys (pink and white) and My Marylands of unusually choice quality, splendid large, well colored buds, long stiff stems, at $20.00 and $25.00 per 100. Also plenty of short and medium lengths.

CINCINNATI The cold and more or less cloudy weather of this week has caused a general shortening of the receipts, and, as a consequence, has brought about better market conditions with higher prices in a number of items. Yet, although the supply has been cut down and at that probably only temporary, it is fully adequate for present requirements, for the demand is not large. Roses are in a good and sufficient supply. American Beauties are still far short of requirements. The carnation supply is good and most all stock of any good quality is proving good property. Chrysanthemums are about out of the market. Only a few of the late varieties coming in. Narcissi are in an over-production and the market is glutted with them. The call for violets is picking up, but is none too good as yet. Lilies are plentiful and find a fair market. The demand for lily of the valley and orchids has fallen off somewhat since the fall wedding season is over. Sweet peas sell well. The decorative green market shows a good call for wild smilax.

ST. LOUIS This market since Thanksgiving has been in good condition. The weather has been rather too warm for the retailers. At the wholesale markets we find plenty of roses in all varieties except Beauties. Carnations are in great plenty. Violets became scarce owing to the warm weather. Chrysanthemums are at an end for this season. All the general variety of stock is in fine and plenty of it.

Flower Market Reports

NEW YORK

Business since our last issue has been rather erratic. The demand up to and including Saturday of last week was very good. Since then it has been rather quiet and this condition may be expected to continue until the Christmas activity begins. Roses are enjoying a very lively market as compared with other staples, and the demand for novelties and choice grades should be very encouraging to those growers and dealers who are trying to uplift the business in an enterprising and progressive way. Violets are very much in the dumps here, some days selling out at prices not fit to quote. Carnations are coming into their own, now that the chrysanthemums have got through. Lilies have doubled in selling price and now bring returns that will yield a decent profit to the grower. Cattleyas are very scarce and will so continue until the Trianaes get well under way. Southern smilax is now an over-supply and the prices realized are only about half of what has been considered normal. Roman hyacinths sell well, but paper white narcissi are slow at low figures. Reverting to the roses, the centre of interest seems to locate around Taft, Ward, Sunburst, Shawyer and Killarney Brilliant.

PHILADELPHIA

Conditions have remained rather stable for the past week. While the influx of stock was rather less, demand seemed to slacken off also. On Monday there seemed to be quite some difficulty in filling orders, with the usual peevish result among uninformed retailers. Perhaps we should not say uninformed, but the "don't-wish-to-be-informed." Anyway, the "kicks" were there, but the wholesalers are used to that. Tea roses were more plentiful. Carnations were scarcer. Chrysanthemums are pretty nearly a past number, Nonin and Eaton are the best, with a few belated Bonnaffon not much good. Single violets have become more plentiful and prices took a sudden drop. Doubles seem to keep on a pretty even keel. Nothing of interest in the orchid market. Supplies are less and demand seems to correspond. In the minor items like lily of the valley, bouvardia, mignonette, daisies and snapdragon the supply seems to be excellent, but there is nothing that calls for a waste of printers' ink in that connection. The price of timothy seed seems a much more important subject. The outlook on the sweet pea market is very encouraging. These are very good now and bid fair to improve both in quantity and quality right along. Maidenhair fern seems to be in better demand. Adiantum hybridum has advanced to $1.50.

John Young advertises the finest roses in New York market. We have seen them and think the claim is well-founded. They are grown by Reuter, Westerly, R. I.

PERSONAL.

J. A. Muller, representative of the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., sailed on the Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Thursday, Dec. 11, on a business and pleasure trip to Europe.

All will regret to learn that a tinge of sorrow has come into the home of Peter Duff, Orange, N. J., at this time especially, his mother-in-law having met with a severe stroke of apoplexy.

John W. Everitt and wife sailed on the Lusitania, last week, for a two months' visit to the old home at Herts, England. His last words before sailing away were Merry Christmas to all the "boys," especially those at Glen Cove, L. I.

Alex. Mackenzie, for the past ten years head gardener to Percy Chubb at Glen Cove, L. I., has this week taken charge of Mrs. J. P. Morgan's estate at Cragston, Highland Falls, N. Y. This will give Mr. Mackenzie more chance to show his well-known abilities as an all-round gardener.

A WORD TO THE WISE FROM

FOLEY

Some few months ago my many good friends were advised of my temporary inability to properly handle business entrusted with me on account of track elevation.

It now affords me great pleasure to advise you that the latch string will hang out as in "Ye olden times" at our new location, where we expect to be shipping goods about January 1st, 1914. We are now ready to make you estimates, sketches and suggestions. Kindly write us advising your requirements.

Thanking my old friends for many favors shown in the past and asking a continuance of same in the future, I remain,

Yours truly,

Here is the Hot Water Boiler You Have Been Looking For

KING IDEAL BOILERS

25% More Efficient

On account of the T-shaped sections (see cut) there is a greater proportion of the heating surface exposed to the direct action of the fire than is possible in other boilers.

About 85% of the work done by a cast iron boiler is accomplished by this directly exposed heating surface.

The King has 25% more of this directly exposed surface—so it's 25% more efficient.

Let Us Tell You More About It.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE FOR 1913.

David F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture, on December 8, published his annual report for the year 1913. The report, which contains only 58 pages, differs from previous reports in that, instead of merely reviewing the agricultural situation, it presents in summary many broad economic questions. Throughout the report strong emphasis is placed upon co-operation between the Department of Agriculture and other Federal departments and the state agricultural agencies to promote co-ordination and eliminate duplication of effort. The keynote is getting the Department's information in all fields more directly and in more valuable form to the people. It is recommended that the congressional seed distribution as now conducted be discontinued, and that constructive work in securing and distributing new and valuable seeds and plants be substituted.

Plan to Reorganize the Department.

To promote co-ordination, allow greater latitude in carrying out of projects, and to establish a more logical handling of regulatory work and research, investigation and demonstration work, the Secretary will ask the Congress in the coming estimates for authority to prepare a plan for reorganizing, redirecting and systematizing the work of the Department as the interests of economical and efficient administration may require. This plan would be submitted in the fiscal estimates for 1916. It is believed that the Department can best carry on its functions and carry its information to the people it seeks to serve, probably by having its work conducted in five or six main groups such as a research service, a regulatory service, a state relations service, a rural organization service, a forest service, a weather service, and others as special occasion might warrant.

Marketing.

In many directions further production waits on better distribution, and the field of distribution presents problems which raise in very grave ways the simple issue of justice. Under existing conditions the farmer does not get what he should for his product; the consumer is required to pay an unfair price, and unnecessary burdens are imposed under the existing systems of distribution. No one can see offhand just what part of the burden is due to lack of systematic planning or inefficiency, economic waste, or to unfair manipulation. The report outlines the projects in this field as covering marketing surveys, methods and costs of marketing, including available market supplies in given production areas, demand at consuming centers, cold and other methods of storage, marketing systems and prices, and costs of wholesale and retail distribution of farm products. Other studies in this branch include: Investigation of transportation problems and the elimination of waste in shipment, study of city marketing and distribution, study of grades, and finally, co-operative production and marketing.

Increases Recommended.

Increases in the appropriations for the next fiscal year are recommended as follows:

$250,860 for extending the work of eradicating animal diseases, feeding and breeding live stock, and for dairying and the enforcement of the meat-inspection law.

$45,660 for the introduction and breeding of new plants, the control of plant diseases, and for improving the methods of crop production, especially cereals.

$143,577 for the classification of agricultural lands and the survey of homesteads in the national forests.

$60,441 for extending investigations of the handling, shipping and storing of poultry, eggs and fish.

$24,420 for investigating fertilizer resources, soil fertility, and the chemical and physical properties of soils.

$71,000 for extending investigations of insects attacking deciduous fruits, cereal and forage crops, and forest trees.

$90,000 to enforce the migratory-bird law.

$57,000 for gathering crop forecasts and estimates.

$113,500 for road management and road building and maintenance.

$144,000 for investigations of the marketing and distribution of farm products.

$50,000 for live stock and other demonstration work in the sugar-cane and cotton areas in Louisiana.

A decrease of $37,340 is made in the funds of the Weather Bureau, made possible by the increased efficiency shown in handling its work.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

The Oleson & Lunden Company, of Plantsville, Conn., has filed a petition of bankruptcy in the United States District Court. For more than ten years the company has been carrying on the florist business in Plantsville. Judge Thomas Welch is handling the affairs of the company at present, and it is expected that a settlement with the creditors will be made in the course of time. The firm was made up of John Oleson and Philip Lunden.

An Interesting Development

MR CLARK WITBECK of Schenectady, wanted flowers any time and all the time.
The only answer to that was a greenhouse. So we built him the 50 feet wing this way.
Then he wanted more flowers, so the other wing was added and now he grows so many, that he sells a goodly lot.

In telling you this, we had in mind several instances where the owner allows the gardener a percentage on such profits. It may be your employer would do the same if you should suggest his building more houses, with that in mind.
It's just a suggestion, but worth trying.
Our catalog yours for the asking.

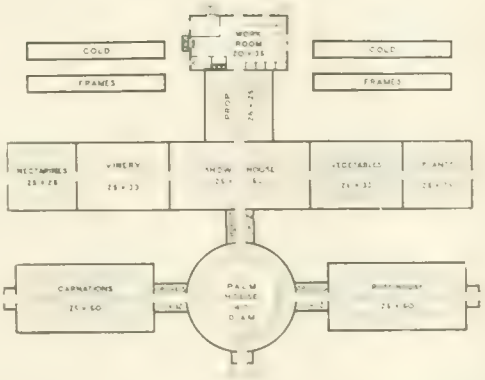
Jumbled Together



IF there is one thing more than another that will make a greenhouse cost too much, it's a jumbled together plan.

Such a plan costs too much, for three well defined reasons.

First: It multiplies the erection costs because of its complications and uncontrollable construction difficulties.

Second: It makes the heating both expensive to install and costly to operate.

Third: It makes working the houses unhandy, difficult, requiring more help.

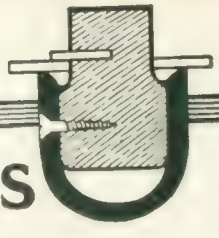
In attempting to get "something different"; or "something original"; gardeners and superintendents are frequently led into inducing their employers to adopt badly jumbled plans.

If you could sit right down in this chair by my desk and look over with me the plans of the houses both large and small erected by this company for the past five years, you would be tremendously impressed by their absolute practicalness and striking simplicity.

Simplicity and practicalness have always been noticeable characteristics of U-Bar work.

This is so, even when it comes to big schemes like the St. Louis Botanical Gardens costing hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Take this plan shown of a range at Pittsburgh—see how perfectly balanced it is. How downright practical.



As president of this company, I am a crank on first having the plan right. Furthermore, I shall continue to be a crank. Associated with our company is an architect of enviable reputation, who contributes knowledge and experience in securing to the building itself, those choice touches here and there that are so distinguishable a feature of U-Bar houses.

Our representatives are not only thoroughly grounded in greenhouse matters, but also are technically familiar with flowers and shrubs, so that when desired they will gladly be of assistance to you in giving the greenhouse a setting worthy of a U-Bar house.

Yes U-Bar houses cost more—but they are worth all they cost— and more.

Send for catalog—or send for us—or both.

SOMETHING WE WANT YOU TO KNOW

If you are a grower of Chrysanthemums you have grown the varieties sent out by Elmer D. Smith & Co. of Adrian, Mich. If you feel as we do you'll buy their novelties for the reason that you don't dare not buy them or you'll miss something. When Chrysolora was sent out you remember you ducked at the price and got in late and the other fellow beat you to it.

We have the Eastern agency for Elmer D. Smith & Co. and their novelties will be disseminated by us in the future simultaneously with the western delivery from Adrian, Mich. All these novelties are described in our catalog which is yours for the asking. Placing orders with us means the same date of shipment from a nearer shipping point.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Calceolarias

These plants have now arrived at their season of most rapid growth and those which seemed to stand still during the hot weather are now growing apace. Calceolarias are cool subjects and succeed best in a house with a temperature of 45 degrees, kept well up to the light and supplied with plenty of fresh air. A low temperature, as long as frost is held away, in their case is no hindrance to progress. Never attempt to grow them in a warm house or they will speedily become weak and sickly and the prey of their arch-enemy, green aphis. When potting use a light compost; one containing half loam and flaky leaf-mold, with a little old cow manure and sand added will suit young plants. The leaf-mold can be reduced and more cow manure used at the final potting.

Care of Carnations

From now on the subject of watering is one upon which volumes might be written and yet not be fully covered, as among a large number of growers many different conditions are daily arising that cannot possibly be met by any arbitrary written directions. The best time to water is in the early forenoon of a bright day, at which any necessary spraying to counteract wilting or syringing to destroy spider, should be done. Sometimes every indication points to a fair day, when by eleven o'clock, the sun is obscured and plants have been wet by spraying. This is a bad position in which to be caught, but the best must be made of it. Use every available means that can be employed to dry out the surplus moisture as soon as possible. Under no circumstances close the ventilators and raise the temperature. There must be a circulation of air and this is best accomplished by having on a crack at the ridge. The night care and supervision will now give the grower more or less worry until he gets his winter staff into full training again.

Marguerites

In order to flower these plants well they should be allowed to become pot-bound. Marguerites are now making rapid growth, and as the pots are well filled with roots they will like plenty of water and feeding twice a week. When doing any repotting, use a tolerably rich compost, comprising two-thirds loam, one-third screened dry cow manure, some soot and fine bone. Ram the soil firmly in the pots. The present is a suitable time to put in a good batch of cuttings. A propagating bench which will root carnations or chrysanthemums is equally good for marguerites. These cuttings, if kept potted along, will make nice, bushy stock in 6-inch pots by late spring. Plants in pots for Easter flowering will still need some pinching. This may be discontinued after January 15. Give them any necessary repotting using a rich compost, and be sure to always give them an abundance of water at the roots.

Pandanus Veitchii

A decorative subject of rare beauty and considerable importance commercially is Pandanus Veitchii. If too much encouraged in its growth, it rapidly gains size and vigor but at the same time loses in great measure its fine variegation, to which much of its value is due. Pandanus Veitchii, even without excessively high culture, gradually throws off its silvery coloring as it grows older and attains size. It is hard to keep these older plants in good shape and after they have reached a size beyond the seven or eight-inch pot and the greater part of their foliage has reverted in color to a green of undesirable tint, it is time to put them out of commission. By cutting off the top or crown of these old plants as far down as the wood is soft and flabby, we induce the remaining stumps to put forth quite a number of highly colored side shoots and suckers from the roots. When these have gained some substance and strength, they are taken off, if possible with some roots already formed, and potted into small pots using very sandy porous loam. For winter temperature keep from 65 to 70 degrees at night.

Sowing Fern Spores

Now is a good time to make a sowing of spores for the filling of fern pans, small vases, etc. The seed pans should be thoroughly cleaned to insure that no germs of moss or fungus are left. A great deal of what is known as damping off has its origin from this source, being the work of a minute fungus. Fill the pans about one-third full with crocks, larger ones in the bottom and those on the top finely broken, and over this place a layer of moss, then fill to within an inch and a half of the top with ordinary potting soil. Over this place half an inch of soil which has been subjected to a baking process long enough to kill all vegetation in it. Use a compost of loam, leaf mold and sand in about equal portion. The surface soil in the pan should be pressed down and made as smooth as possible. A good soaking of water should be given and allowed to drain off before sowing the spores. Sow these thinly—I may say very thinly. Don't cover the spores but place over the pan a close-fitting pane of glass. The glass must be turned frequently to prevent the moisture from dripping which would throw the spores all in little bunches. Start in a close atmosphere from 60 to 65 degrees.

Protecting Outside Bulbs

All bulbs that are planted outside in our northern latitude will need winter protection of long coarse manure, litter, leaves or evergreen boughs. This should not be spread over the beds before the ground is frozen quite solid and where the winter is mild it can be left off entirely or until such time as the severe weather sets in. Bulbs that are in flats and are stored outside will need also some protection as we get hard weather.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Sweet Peas; Easter Lilies; Mignonette; Orchids; Propagation; Starting Bulbous Stock.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Planting Vines

Prior to planting in the borders all vines are grown in pots from which they can be removed at any season if due care is given them. It is not wise to transfer them during the growing season for not only is there a big risk of burning, etc., but the roots have to be left cramped up just as they were in the pot. This is not a desirable way to have them. Although they will make other roots through the border it is by far the best to have the first strong roots spread out near the surface. The age of deep planting of the vine has passed. It is recognized by all that it was a mistake to bury them away down deep, the reason for which is very plain. Have the roots near the surface and all feed that is given them can be used without having to wait for it to work its way down through a quantity of soil. To get the roots straightened out will be quite a job if not gone about right. It is an easy matter to shake the soil off some things that have roots of no great length but it is surprising how long the roots of a well grown vine are, even in a small pot. If you attempt to shake these out some are sure to get broken. The only way to accomplish the job with a minimum of breakage is to wash out the soil and straighten out the roots at the same time. Soak the ball first and then force the water into it which will take little time to remove most of it. The network of roots must then be worked out carefully with the fingers. When ready for planting take off the top soil about four inches deep and spread the roots out evenly similar to the branches of a peach tree. Be very careful when placing the soil on them as any roughness will nulify all the pains that have been taken. Use the finest soil that is to be found first so that it will get down between the fine roots. If there is a quantity near the bottom of the cane shake the whole thing which will cause some soil to work down. Do not plant too close to the wall; remember the cane will soon be a rod of some size and leave plenty of room for this expansion. Ram over the border before it is watered.

Planting Peach and Nectarine Trees

What has been said about planting a vine applies to the planting of peach and nectarine trees. These are not always grown in pots; some are trained as they grow in the open ground and generally they have better roots for planting than pot grown stuff. These will have been chopped off with a spade or shovel and to ensure their healing up at an early date cut them again with a sharp knife. These subjects will have much shorter roots than the vine at the time of planting but the same care is required and the same method adopted to free them from the soil and the maze of network formed by the roots in a pot.

Stem Troubles of Melons

To those who do not have to combat these troubles all the following will seem unnecessary. There are some soils and localities that seem endowed with just the right ingredients to grow melons to perfection without any trouble whatever. Then, on the other hand, there are those soils of a very different character and something or another seems to crop up from time to time to worry the grower. I know of an instance where two estates joining each other furnished these very conditions between them. It was no trouble to grow melons on the one while the neighbor had all the trouble that was possible. No, you could not say it was the way they were handled for the same thing has prevailed for years with different men handling them. Personally I put it down to the soil, but after several more years of experience I would like to try them over again. The old proverb says "Never trouble trouble until trouble troubles you." Another one we all know is "never look for trouble" but where stem trouble prevails I would suggest we do look out and use all the preventives we know of. In the first place, my opinion is that some of it is brought on by planting too deep either when repotting or planting in the border. Do not bury the ball a fraction of an inch if it can be helped for while a few more roots will grow out of that portion of the stem between the seed leaf and the top of the seed pot they will be worthless if the stem goes wrong. At this season of the year the advantage of planting on the small mounds will be demonstrated for it will keep the stem drier than if it were planted on a level border. Do not water over these stems in dull weather, which will keep it dry excepting when syringing. If the first two or three whorls of leaves are gradually cut away so that the sun's rays may play on the stem it will seldom go wrong and if it does in dull weather it is the very best thing to dry it up when we do get sunlight. If decay sets in during one of the dull spells (these are generally the times it shows up) scrape off the decayed portion down to good tissue with a piece of wood which has been made to resemble a knife. This is better than using a knife especially if it is caught in time. Bad cases can have the decay cut out to half the stem and they will generally heal. After removing this decay rub in some newly slacked lime with the finger; this will help to dry it up. Doubtful cases can have some lime blown on to them which will often be enough to arrest the progress of further decay. A close watch should be kept at this time of year or some plants will be lost. Rose growers are up against it at times but there is nothing more perplexing than to get stem trouble in a melon house and know at the same time there is a little spider getting ahead. Add to this several days dull weather—cold perhaps making a quantity of fire heat necessary and consequently more moisture is needed and you may be excused for scratching what may someday be a "bald pate."

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur C. Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Fumigating

With the houses in full bloom, and many buds just showing color care should be exercised not to use any fumes too strong. Have them only moderate, and in fact weak, and sooner fumigate a little oftener. Tobacco stems should not be used at all, especially in houses where white roses are in bloom. They will be the first to show the poor centers, although the colored varieties will bleach soon after exposure. Where spraying takes the place of fumigation, the same rule should be applied, and the spray not used the full strength. Rather use it moderately strong and oftener. The main thing is, never neglect to fumigate or spray, but keep right at it to keep the insects down, and not give them any chance at all to gain a foothold. Once they are established it will take a great struggle to free the plants of them again. It is well to aim to smoke before the plants are to be syringed—that is the night before. The syringing following will help clean out the pests. Have the plants quite wet, for should the air be too dry the smoke will not be so effective, and at the same time it will be more harmful to the plants and flowers.

The New Year

The new year will soon be here, and with it many new resolutions that we will pledge ourselves to keep, only to break them the very first week. It is well not to make too many, only a very few, and then stick to them like glue. Have them all read so that when they are carried out the whole place will be the better for it. Thus let one be: Resolved, That there shall not be any overblown roses the coming year. Then live up to it. Often on the average place many roses are ruined because of improper cutting. Others can follow, and be made to suit the prevailing conditions.

Planning and Planting

There is nothing better than having all the planting plans made in advance, and if they have not been completed as yet, now is the time to do the planning. No doubt the houses will be planted in much the same way, with the same varieties, and yet there may be houses that do better when planted to a different variety once in a while. Among this year's novelties we find a few that promise to be very good and are well worthy of a trial, even on a small scale, although after seeing some of the varieties growing at the places of the firms that send them out it may be safe to plant them quite extensively, as the market seems to take the new varieties much better than the old, if they are grown well. The reason for this can only be given as the people's taste for something different all the time. Many of the well-to-do customers will not mind the prices as long as they can get something out of the ordinary.

The Propagator

The time will soon be here now when this house will be the busy end of the place; so it is well to make away with the work as fast as is possible. Whatever is to be done will have to be done sooner or later so better do it at once and have it over with. Have the sand in place after the benches have been well whitewashed, and turn the heat on a few days before any cuttings are to be inserted. In many places there will be a large amount of cuttings already in the sand but as a rule the real busy time does not start until after the turn of the year. Where only a small number of plants are wanted, it is well to wait until the end of January or the early part of February before making any cuttings. If they are made too early the care of the plants for the long time will amount to a considerable figure. Then, too, the wood will have a little more sun into it, as the days will be longer, and as a rule it will root much easier.

Care of Propagating Wood

By this time you will know which plants are to furnish you with the wood for the coming year, and to save a lot of trouble it will more than pay you to exercise especial care to keep this wood absolutely clean and free from all insect pests, as well as all plant diseases. Select the houses that have bloomed the most, as there is nothing better than to add the floriferous quality to the plants as much as possible.

Cover Illustration

Eremurus himalaicus, which forms the subject of our cover illustration this week, is easily the regal flower of the spring garden. A group of these stately plants against a background of conifers or other dark foliage adds a character and dignity to the garden which no other plant can rival. The picture was taken in the Mt. Desert Nurseries, Bar Harbor, Me., which fact is a good guarantee of the hardiness of this plant.

A new star

The veteran rose hybridist, John Cook, [illegible] the name of Francis Scott Key for his latest introduction in seedling roses. The author of the "Star Spangled Banner" [illegible] of this recognition and we hope the rose which is [illegible] may, by virtue of its sterling qualities, attain to a glory as bright and fadeless as the immortal verses written by Francis Scott Key one hundred years ago.

"Going some"

The aggregate number of printed pages comprised in the Christmas and Anniversary Numbers of the four weekly trade papers last week was 468. Approximately speaking this represents 750 columns of reading matter of more or less useful quality and an investment of not for from $5,000 in advertising. The number of tons of white paper required for printing these four issues, if computed, would be a further astounding revelation as to the growth of horticultural trade journalism in the United States within a period of a few years. Nearly $1,000 a day for advertising in the florists' trade and industries directly dependent upon it, even in an exceptional week, is "some money" and certainly represents some business and enterprise. What commercial horticulture in America will yet grow to nobody can predict, for the growth has been steady and there is nothing to indicate anything but an indefinite continuance of seemingly exhaustless development.

"Safe and sane" Christmas

And now, Christmas once more. Bright skies and moderate temperatures have prevailed quite generally and there is a large and fairly adequate crop in sight of all the good things florists are wont to place before the buying public for the proper observance of that joyous anniversary. That being the case, why try to make the buyer pay more on this than on other days for the same goods? Why continue to furnish the daily papers with the foundation for preposterous stories about the prohibitive prices of Christmas flowers? Why be a party to any attempt to perpetuate the antiquated folly of "cold storage" flowers which has cost the flower growing industry so dearly? Cut it out for good and forever and the cut flower will come to its own not only for Christmas but for the days and weeks that follow, for the public will then have no cause for complaint and resentment because of any conviction that they have been imposed upon with half decayed refuse or outrageous prices.

Anglo-American Exposition

We doubt very much whether the horticultural profession in this country are aware of the extent and importance of this event which is to come off in London (Shepherd's Bush) from May to October, 1914, or whether many of them have even been apprised of it. Its avowed intent is to celebrate the centenary of peace and progress in the arts, sciences and industries of the United States of America and the British Empire. The American executive offices are in the Woolworth Building, New York and the American Industrial Section is located in the Commercial Museum, Philadelphia. The list of names of officials connected with the enterprise, in England and this country, is a very representative one, including the captains of industry, education, science and art in all sections. We note [illegible] as a member of the Horticulture, Arboriculture and Forestry Committee. Although the only representative from this country on that committee, we know that Mr. Manda will fill the position with ability and zeal and with honor to the country he represents.

Very Important

Advertisers and correspondents, please note that, because of Christmas happening on our regular press day, all communications for next issue must reach this office one day earlier than usual. Electrotypes, photographs, etc., should be sent under letter postage.

MRS. ERNEST WILD

CRANFORD PINK

A TALK ON FLOWERS.

Extracts from a paper read by C. S. Harrison, before the Minnesota Horticultural Society, at Minneapolis, December, 1913.

Flowers have become indispensible both in life and in death. The vegetable garden feeds the body, the flower garden feeds the soul. What a contrast in funerals between the present and the past. Sixty years ago a funeral was the most sombre thing which we could imagine. The coffin was home made, filling the house with the sickening odor of paint and varnish. Everything black and sombre. This month we laid away my beloved sister. The room was richly decorated with the gifts of friends. Flowers on the beautiful casket. Flowers everywhere—emblems of the everlasting spring into which she has entered. At the grave what a mass of them! By the modern appliance of lowering the coffin which is covered with beautiful blooms it slowly recedes from view, and our last look at the loved one is a vanishing among the choicest things that earth affords.

Flowers work marvelous transaction in character. Some years ago in Chicago I saw a drunken Amazon being taken to prison. Six policemen had all they could do. She was the strongest woman I ever saw. She was making ribbons of some of those fine uniforms. Finally they landed her and she was like a caged tiger in her cell. A quiet little woman saw it all and pitied Wild Mag. She went to a florist and bought a bouquet of fragrant roses, and they were delicately done up in a nice box with tissue paper. She went to the jail and wanted to see Mag. They told her it was no use. She would be torn in pieces. But she went in. The demon woman saw her and with terrible oaths she said, "You get out of here or I will throw you out." "No," said the visitor, "I love you, Mag." "You lie, there don't anybody love me, the whole world hates me and I hate back again. Now you get out." "Not yet," said the quiet little woman. "See what I have brought you." Then she undid her package and when Mag breathed the sweet perfume, and saw those lovely blooms, her woman soul came to her and she wept like a child. "The beauty of the Lord had conquered" and the visitor put her arm around her neck and their mingled tears watered those flowers.

Interest the boy in the most beautiful things the world affords. Don't expect him to get all his education in the barn yard; awaken his interest in the front yard, if you will have a gentleman and not a boor. Let the daughter associate with the most beautiful, charming and best dressed companions the world affords and she will be pure and refined.

Every Family Should Have Their Own Flowers.

There should be a succession of them—a procession of beauty from early spring until the late frosts of autumn. First come the crocuses, tulips and hyacinths. The columbines are a numerous family and they are very charming. They have a marvelous variety of color. Some are early; others, like the chrysantha, are very late. The great Oriental Poppy is a splendor. It is a flame, and a large bed of them is like a miniature sea of fire. Though not satisfactory as cut flowers, they are among the most showy for out of doors. We come to the Iris, which is the coming flower. First, because in the large collection of hundreds of varieties there are all the colors of the rainbow and the widest range of beauty of any of the flower family. Some of the newer sorts defy description. Their rich veining and tracery, those delicate tints, the radiant reflex like that of the finest silk, the blending of those harmonious colors, make them peerless. It is the most heroic flower of all. For two years we have had fearful weather. Last summer we had 30 days with the mercury soaring to one hundred and up. The hot winds were blowing like the blast of death. Peonies wilted, phlox fainted, but though we had but two inches of rain in five months the brave Iris never winced. We dig and ship in August. The ground was perfectly dry, but the Iris roots were fleshy and plump. They have the faculty of gathering the moisture and holding it. The Japanese are worthless in the West. Let them alone, unless you screen them. The Rhizomatous or the German and closely allied group are fully as beautiful and need no coddling either summer or winter. There is an increasing family of the Siberian type. There are 30 kinds in this group and more to follow. These are the tufted varieties. These flowers are bound to win. Their fascination is resistless. I am a busy man, but when my iris are in bloom I go visiting them, drawn day by day by their matchless beauty and they seem glad to see me and put on robes of splendor, fairer by far than the raiment of a princess. We keep 180 kinds and know something about them.

The Peony.

Our modern peonies are mostly from the Chinese Albiflora. I need not speak of the wonderous beauty. A field in full bloom is one of the finest spectacles the world affords. It is like a section of Paradise let down to earth, while over the whole there float billows of fragrance. Generally they are free from disease, but of late importations from France have a mysterious plague which hampers their growth and prevents their blooming. They are the most uncanny looking affairs—club footed, with no fibrous roots to feed the plant. Cut off all the root and just plant the bud and you may dodge the difficulty.

Our great trouble with peonies is they will take their time to come to their best. Take Karl Rosenfield, for instance. This is probably the best of the deep reds. It bloomed gloriously at home where it was born, but it has been a sore disappointment when sent away. The more robust and grander the peony the more time it takes to bloom. This one should have four years to come to its best. The Baroness Schroder, one of the finest on earth, will often bloom freely the first year. I saw a row of them in full bloom among many others that had hardly a bloom at the same age. The worst abuse I ever had was from a man who bought some high priced ones and because they did not bloom the first year he made the air thick with maledictions. Then he sent me some blighted buds. There had been a heavy late frost that had nipped them and he seemed to think that I had done it. When there is danger of a late frost, throw burlap over your plants, for some of them cannot stand the strain. There is a great change of late years in the quality grown. Most of the leading growers are discarding the old sorts and raising only the best. Too many kinds have been thrown on the market. Father Terry named one hundred when he should have named only ten. Another prominent grower has placed several new ones on his list which should have remained in obscurity. We have originated about thirty new sorts. But we dare not put them on the market until more fully tested. Young peonies will lie like the mischief. They promise great things and won't make good. I had one glorious, variegated double one which was a splendor, but ever after it bloomed an insignificant single one, not worth ten cents. I had one that bloomed at first pure gold and ever after it was a muddy pink. I had one immense, radiant one—the finest, by far, among one thousand blooms. There, said I, "is $100," but it never kept its promise. There is dishonesty among peonies. That is one trouble with propagators. They will have a fine new one, and without waiting to see whether it is honest or not, they will go to propagating it and they multiply a lot of sore disappointments. There are 2500 named sorts—nine tenths should be eliminated, for we now have some splendors. Mons Jules Elie, Marguerite Gerard, Livingstone, Lees Grandiflora Rubra, Asa Gray, Albertre and a large number of others are of exquisite beauty and fragrance. It costs to get them started. In multiplying, don't cut the roots too small. It discourages the plant and it takes years to attain blooming size.

The Phlox.

The Phlox loves cool, moist weather. They can be multiplied with great rapidity. First, by seeds. Save the seeds before the pods pop open. Keep the seeds dry and crush the pods. Then plant them. If you wish to clean them, throw them in a tub of water. The seeds will sink like shot and the chaff will rise on the top. Dry them immediately if you are not ready to plant, or if you wish to sell them. Plant always in the fall. They will not grow if planted in the spring. Cover with about a half an inch of light earth or sand and see they do not dry while germinating. They love the slush and slop of spring and glory in adversity. 2nd. You can multiply rapidly from the roots. Take a sharp spade, run it straight down half way, and then turn it square and cut off the roots. The roots you leave in the ground will put a head on themselves and there will be a great mass of them. Seedlings bloom the first year, these do not. Take them up in the fall and plant them out and next year you will have fine blooming plants. You separate the stools you take up and plant them out and in a year you will have fine showy plants.

ANGLO-AMERICAN EXPOSITION, LONDON (SHEPHERD'S BUSH), 1914.

The Court of Honor by Night

The object of the Anglo-American Exposition is to celebrate in a fitting manner the hundred years of Peace and Progress between the English-speaking peoples since the treaty of Ghent in 1814. The Exposition will be held at Shepherd's Bush, London, between May and October of 1914, and will demonstrate in a practical manner the progress which has been made by the British and American people in every branch of civilization during that century, and will place on view in chronological order the great achievements of that epoch—from inception to perfection—showing not only how each nation has improved on its own inventions, but also where both have worked hand in hand to perfect the creation of the other. Thus there will be unfolded the rich treasures of a hundred years of British and American art.

A hundred years of the history of the two nations—their famous Statesmen, Authors, Artists Inventors, Philanthropists, Financiers, Merchants Manufacturers and others. Men and women who have helped in the advancement of civilization and in making each nation what it is today will be represented, with such objects of historical interest as are associated with them and their times.

A hundred years of progress in Education, Science, Literature, Inventions and Productions, Improvements and Comforts in Social Life, Betterment of the conditions of Working Men and Women.

Schedule of the Horticultural Committee.

2. Herbaceous Plant Growers of the whole of the season, May to October.

3. Fruit Trees, Ornamental Trees, Climbers and Shrubs not grown for their flowers, and Hardy Flowering Shrubs for the whole of the season.

4. Growers of Rhododendrons, Azaleas, Flowering Shrubs, Sweet Peas, Dahlias, Sub-Tropical Plants, Chrysanthemums, Fruit Trees in pots, for a period of about two months each in succession.

5. Roses, for the period of the Exposition.

The Court of Honor. Groups of Palms, Bamboos, Bays and other decorative plants in pots and tubs, to be arranged in artistic groupings around this court.

"A" Section, Court of Arts. May-flowering Tulips which must be in bloom by the opening of the Exhibition; the first week in May.

"B" Section. To be followed by Sub-Tropical Foliage and Flowering Plants. May flowering Tulips, to be followed by suitable flowering plants.

"C" Section, in Front of Building No. 21. American Trees, Shrubs, Lilies, etc.; and on the island in front of this building, Bamboos and Grasses.

"D" Section, in Front of Fine Arts Palace. Climbing and Dwarf Roses.

"E" Section, Elite Gardens. Roses.

"F" Section, Court of Progress. The centre plot being an existing sunken garden, to be an English formal garden, six [illegible] on either side surrounded by tiered ledges being devoted to herbaceous plants showing artistic grouping effect; certain of the plots of this Court being reserved for Rose Gardens and others for Rhododendrons.

"G" Section. Ornamental Trees and Shrubs.

"H" Section, Back of Building No. 21. Ornamental Trees, Rock Gardens, Glasshouses, Summer-houses, Horticultural Sundries, etc.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The monthly meeting, Tuesday evening, December 16, brought out a very large attendance of members, this being election night. There was no contest except for members of the executive committee, all of the other officers of last year being renominated and unanimously re-elected, viz.: President, W. J. Kennedy; vice-president, Herman Bartsch; secretary, W. N. Craig; treasurer, Peter Fisher. An amendment to the by-laws, increasing the executive committee from five to seven members, inclusive of the president and vice-president, having been adopted, the business was to choose five out of the eleven names on the ballot and the winners were Peter M. Miller, Geo. M. Anderson, James Wheeler, W. C. Rust and W. J. Collins. During the counting of the votes the time was given to talks by several members on the approaching S. A. F. convention in Boston. Stirring addresses were made by J. K. M. L. Farquhar, P. Welch, Thomas Roland, Wm. Sim, M. A. Patten, F. E. Palmer and W. J. Stewart, and much enthusiasm was aroused by the optimistic views expressed by all the speakers.

The following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, Death has taken from us one of our most useful and valued members, Edward Leroy Pierce; therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That we hereby express ourselves of loss in his separation from us and from his life work for the profession which we follow.

Edward L. Pierce was a gentleman of sterling character, a progressive business man, a genial companion and an interested and loyal member of this Club.

We join with his family and business associates in their sorrow; their bereavement touches our hearts, and to them we desire to express in these few inadequate words our deep sympathy in the loss of so good a man as our late fellow-member, Edward Leroy Pierce.

On the platform the following exhibits were displayed: Azalea Petrick's Superba by Breck-Robinson Co.; Calanthe Harrisii, a lovely white variety, by Weld Garden; Begonias Lorraine, Cincinnati and Lorraine sport by A. M. Davenport to show the distinctive character and superiority of the latter; Mignonette, Patten's strain, by T. J. Grey & Co.; seedling zonal pelargonium by John Walsh; Carnations Gorgeous and Alice by Peter Fisher.

Eleven new members were received. The landscape gardening class was reported to be filled to fullest capacity with eager and enthusiastic pupils.

ST. LOUIS FLORIST CLUB.

This club held a very fine meeting last Thursday afternoon. The attendance was large and a great deal of interest was displayed during the proceedings, which took up the entire afternoon. The Publicity Committee made a good report of their work so far, but were not yet ready to report on the advisability of holding a spring flower show. They were given until the next meeting to make such a report. All other committees made final reports and were discharged with thanks. All outstanding bills were ordered paid.

The most interesting feature was a discussion led by Walter Ogle on Profits on Carnations and Greenhouse Expenses. After his figures were displayed on the blackboard, everybody were on their feet to cut it into ribbons. This brought out points that the members wanted to know, and everybody was pleased at the conclusion. The question box also featured in discussions. The New Year meeting comes early—January 8th, at 2 o'clock P. M.

NASSAU COUNTY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., Wednesday, December 10th. This being the end of the financial year, the most important business was the reading of the financial report for the past year, and election of officers for the coming year. S. J. Trepess, treasurer, read the report, which, considering the heavy expenses for this year, was very favorable. President C. F. Brown then resigned the chair and called upon James Duthie to install the new officers, who were as follows: President, Henry Gaut; vice-president, William Grey; treasurer, Ernest J. Brown; recording secretary, Ernest Westlake; corresponding secretary, Harry Jones; trustee for three years, James Holloway; executive committee, Valentine Cleres, James McCarthy, Walter McKinley, James Gladstone, Herman Boettcher, Hy. Goodband and Oscar Bjorkgren.

The awards for the monthly competition were as follows: Lettuce, Pierre Charbonniad; violets, Herman Boettcher; poinsettias, Percy Chubb.

The annual dinner will take place in February, 1914. The next meeting will be at Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, on Wednesday, January 14th, at 2 P. M. Competition carnations, 12 white, 12 pink, and 12 any other color.

HARRY JONES, Cor. Sec'y.

COOK COUNTY (ILL.) FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

The December meeting of the Cook County Florists' Association was held on the 11th inst., a week earlier than usual, on account of the nearness of the holidays. R. Karlstrom, representing W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., was a visitor and briefly addressed the club. Two new names were proposed, John J. Walsh and Paul R. Klingsporn, both of 176 North Michigan avenue, the latter lately of Philadelphia, and made a short address. Ernest Rober, of Willmette, Ill., showed sample plants of begonias Gloire de Lorraine and Glory of Cincinnati. Blooms of carnation Philadelphia were exhibited by Mr. Scheel, and Wiedenhorf by McAllister. The committee on sports and pastimes reported arrangements for a dance to be given by the club, January 23, at Columbia Hall. Otto Goerisch was in charge of arrangements.

CONNECTICUT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the Society was held in the County Building, Hartford, on December 12th. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:

President, John F. Huss (re-elected); 1st vice-president, Carl Peterson; 2nd vice-president, Warren S. Mason; 3rd vice-president, John Gerard; secretary, Alfred Dixon (re-elected); treasurer, W. W. Hunt (re-elected). County vice-presidents (all re-elected): Litchfield, Walter Angus, Chapinville; Fairfield, Charles H. Plump, West Redding; New Haven, John H. Slocombe, New Haven; Windham, Frank M. Smith, Willimantic; Tollant, Theodore Staudt, Rockville; Middlesex, Arthur A. Curtis, Deep River. Librarian, William T. Hall; botanist, C. H. Sierman; Pomologist, C. H. Hollister.

The executive committee will be appointed by the President at the meeting to be held on the second Friday in January. A short address was made by Theodore Staudt of Rockville, and President Huss made some reminiscent remarks regarding Theodore Wirth, ex-superintendent of Elizabeth Park, Hartford, now superintendent of parks, Minneapolis. One of the features of the meeting was a vase of Lilium magnificum exhibited by Warren S. Mason, the bulbs having been taken from cold storage in September.

ALFRED DIXON, Sec'y.

Wethersfield, Conn.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The schedule of premiums for the 23rd Annual Convention and Exhibition, which will be held in Cleveland, O., on January 28-29, 1914, has been mailed to all the members. Should any of them fail to reach their proper destination, a postal will bring another.

The arrangements for this meeting are going on apace, and judging by the interest that is already being manifested, this convention bids fair to eclipse all that have gone before. Cleveland is easily reached from all points and the shipping facilities are of the very best, so that no inconvenience should be experienced by anyone in getting to the convention, both personally and with the exhibits.

The entire affair is to be pulled off at the new "Statler Hotel," one of the most up-to-date, convenient, and yet very reasonable hostelries in the country. Exhibition, meetings and banquet will all be held here, in the one building.

The beauty and value of the exhibition will this year be enhanced by the addition of retail exhibits, contributed by the retailers of Cleveland and anyone from outside the city who is progressive enough to know a good thing when he sees it.

The exhibition will be reserved for inspection by the members until 8 P. M. on Wednesday and again on Thursday until 2 P. M. On Thursday evening a banquet will be served to the members of the A. C. S. and the Cleveland Florists' Club.

Every member is urged to make an effort to attend this convention and to make an exhibit.

A. F. J. BAUR, Sec'y.

Indianapolis, Ind.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society held a meeting in New York City and went over the list of roses of American origin filed for the coming Bulletin. The list of prizes for the coming spring exhibition, which will be held at the International Flower Show in the Grand Central Palace in New York City, was also prepared. It will be increased by some specials.

The expectation is that a larger number will exhibit even than did last spring, when the greatest Rose Show ever held in America was given. The prizes cover both the plants and the cut flowers.

A KIND WORD.

Mr. Editor:—Just a line about the "Special." I like it much and consider in material and general make-up it is one of the best you have ever produced. One great thing about it is the high quality of the reading matter. Altogether it is a mighty nice paper and bears out what many have said of it. A.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

A paper read by C. W. Johnson, Secretary of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, before the Minnesota State Florists' Association.

The mid-season varieties should be planted into their permanent quarters in the benches between the first and 20th of June, to be able to get the best results. Choose a fresh, live soil consisting of one part well-rotted manure to three parts of sod. Chrysanthemums delight in a rather heavy soil and will produce a much larger flower of more substance in a heavy soil than what they will when grown in a light one. Even when planted in what appears to be a stiff compost it is a good plan to firm down the beds between the plants after they have become established before staking them up.

You are all versed on the general routine of the culture of the plants during the summer months, therefore it is not necessary for me to go very deeply into details on this point, but let me urge a close application to the plants' requirements. Do not allow them to suffer for want of water or carry it to the other extreme. Attend to the staking up of the plants in good season before the stems become crooked. Syringe liberally the underside of the foliage to keep the plants free from red spider and maintain a moist atmosphere during very hot weather. Attend regularly to the removing of the side shoots so as to encourage the main stem to make growth so that the wood will be in the right condition to form the bud on time. This item is of the utmost importance in the culture of chrysanthemums for cut-flower purposes, because a few days overlapping in taking the buds will alter the character of the blooms and throw them later in maturing, both very important considerations. Referring to the taking of the buds, or in other words selecting the bud to form the flower, the first week of August is the time when every chrysanthemum grower begins to sit up and take notice as regards taking the buds. One of the leading qualities that a chrysanthemum should possess from a commercial standpoint is that it will make a double flower from either bud, so that the grower who cannot give his plants a long season of growth is sure of a double saleable flower, even though the buds are late in forming. The taking of early buds is not advisable with very many of our standard commercial varieties. Our records show that August 15 is the date that we can safely begin to take buds on the early varieties in our section of the country. We begin to take the buds of Polly Rose as soon after that date as possible, but very few of the buds on the other varieties are taken before August 20. There is an exception, however, to this rule. When very early blooms of Golden Glow or Smith's Advance are wanted, buds of these varieties can be taken as early as July 1 and develop perfect flowers.

Feeding.

The question of feeding or stimulating growth by applying liquid manure or commercial fertilizers is one to which every grower should give his closest study. While chrysanthemums respond to a liberal amount of feeding, it is very easily overdone, especially with the commercial cut bloom stock. We are becoming each year, more and more convinced that we can put enough nourishing material in the soil or by the way of light mulchings that together with careful culture will almost eliminate the necessity of applying liquid manure to this class of stock.

Exhibition Varieties.

The grower who undertakes to grow for exhibition must prepare himself for a close application to the task so that he will be thoroughly acquainted with his plants. Exhibitors are accustomed to take bigger chances along the lines of feeding to obtain size in the blooms than what the average grower will do. Exhibition varieties also require a longer season of growth than what is advised for the commercial stock. Therefore, early propagation is necessary. The cuttings should go into the sand the latter part of January or early February and from that time on there must not be any let up in watching their every requirement. Shift the young plants along into larger pots as they require it, increasing the richness of the compost with each shift. They should be ready for their final shift or permanent place by May 20. A number of exhibitors grow their exhibition stock in pots during the entire season, potting them along from the sand into the different sizes until they get into 8-inch at last of May, which is the size they are to flower in. The only advantage the pot system has over that of growing them in the bench is that you have the plants and roots more under control. Taking the buds is even more important on the exhibition varieties than with the commercial stock, many of them being useless for exhibition purposes unless an early bud is taken. Climatic conditions of the different sections of the country govern to a great extent the taking of buds on exhibition varieties. We of the middle west cannot take a bud as early as August 10 and get as good results as the growers of the eastern states. The pompon and single varieties are claiming a great deal of the growers' attention and more of them are being grown each year; also a great improvement of the varieties over those of a few years ago is taking place and many very beautiful varieties of these types are being exploited. Improvement is also taking place in the list of large-flowered varieties, adapted to pot culture and the cap family (selections of Caprice du Printemp) are the best suited for pot culture that have come to us for some time.

In conclusion allow me to again emphasize that to be successful in any branch of chrysanthemum culture the grower must know his plants, follow closely every little detail in the routine of the work in caring for them and be on the lookout for any improvement of variety or method of culture.

NEW FRENCH HYDRANGEA.

ONCIDIUM SPLENDIDUM.

R. G. Simpson of Croyden, Tarrytown, sends a photograph, showing a fine specimen of Oncidium splendidum which has been in flower there for the past three weeks. The scape is four feet nine inches in length, and bears 38 large flowers. Accompanying the picture, which would not make a satisfactory reproduction, are the following notes. O. splendidum is a native of Gautemala. The leaves are erect, from six to nine inches long and of a leather-like nature. The scapes are usually around three feet and erect in habit. Pseudo-bulbs from two to three inches high. The sepals and petals are yellow marked with chocolate. The lip is bright yellow, and spreading and the crest magenta purple.

I consider O. splendidum fine for group work, although, it is not nearly so graceful as O. varicosum, var. Rogersii. It is of easy culture simply requiring a cool moist atmosphere where it gives the best results.

The photograph of Siberian irises and lupines reproduced in our special number last week were taken on the grounds of the Mt. Desert Nurseries, Bar Harbor, Me., and kindly furnished by that establishment for our use.

The New French Hydrangeas

The dormant stock which we now have stored in cold frames is in prime condition to force for Easter, or to bring on slowly for Memorial Day and Spring sales. If you have no stock of these, you will make no mistake in taking advantage of this offer, you will find them good sellers.

AVALANCHE. A splendid large white with a well established reputation; an easy variety to force.

BOTANISTE PELTEREAU. Enormous flowers of a pretty mauve rose.

BOUQUET ROSE. Large trusses of rosy amber turning to bright pink; a favorite with all growers.

DENTELLE. Entirely distinct, deeply fringed flower of a creamy white color; it is not suited for forcing, but for Decoration Day and later flowering it is very valuable.

FRAICHEUR. Very large, regularly shaped flowers, white, delicately suffused with rose, very free flowering.

GENERAL DE VIBRAYE. A favorite wherever seen; very large heads of bright rose colored flowers, a splendid early forcing variety.

LA LORRAINE. Very large flowers, pale rose, turning to bright pink; has become a general favorite during the past two years.

MME. A. RIVERAIN. Superb bright rose color; very vigorous and floriferous.

MME. E. MOUILLERE. Probably the most popular white variety on the market today, an early easy variety to force.

MME. MAURICE HAMAR. A delicate flesh-rose color, a vigorous grower, the individual flowers as well as the trusses being very large. One of the easiest to force early.

MME. RAYMOND. Large trusses of perfectly round flowers of a transparent white, passing to a tender rose.

MME. AGNES BARILLET. A splendid white; a grand variety for a 5 or 6-inch pot plant. From our own observation we are inclined to consider this the best of all the whites.

MLLE. RENEE GAILLARD. Very large panicles of milky white, irregularly dentated flowers. One of the best growers says that this should have been awarded the Silver Medal given to Mme. Emile Mouillere.

MLLE. DE TREMAULT. As the result of our own trials we are convinced that this variety is the best very large flowered white yet introduced. As free flowering as any, of splendid erect habit, producing flower-heads as large as the old popular Otaksa.

MOUSSELINE. A beautiful mauve-rose with cream-colored centre; the flower heads are large and held erect; a fine acquisition.

MONT ROSE. Immense panicles of clear-flesh rose, entirely distinct, one of the best very early flowering varieties.

MONS. G. RENAULT. Very large flowers of a bright rose with carmine reflex; very free and easily forced.

ORNAMENT. Large pretty mauve-pink flowers, very free flowering.

RONSARD. Flowers and trusses very large, of a beautiful rose-tint.

SOUVENIR DE MME. E. CHAUTARD. One of the very best, of splendid erect habit, very robust, medium-sized heads, of bright rose-colored flowers; one of the very best of the Bouquet Rose type.

SENATEUR HENRI DAVID. Another splendid rose-colored variety, with red reflections, flowers produced in immense large heads on the style of La Lorraine, but an earlier bloomer.

SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, Chas. C. Massie, Minneapolis, Minn.; 1st vice-president, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, N. Y.; 2nd vice-president, W. F. Therkildson, Painesville, O.; secretary, C. E. Kendel; assistant secretary, S. F. Willard, Jr., both of Cleveland, O.

W. J. Sherry has resigned his position with the Johnson Seed Company of Philadelphia, Pa.

Alfred Emerich, representing Messrs. Vilmorin, Andrieux & Co., Paris, France, after a very successful trip through the United States and Canada, visiting the seed trade, returned home on S. S. Olympic on the 13th inst.

Springfield, Mass.—William H. Wilson has retired from the firm of Montgomery & Wilson and Mr. Montgomery will continue a part of the business, devoting himself entirely to the sale of seeds and fertilizers. The part of the business pertaining to hardware and agricultural implements has been sold to Frank A. Holden & Son, who have conducted a general store in Plainfield.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York City, "Thorburn's Seeds," 1914.

J. L. Moore, Northboro, Mass.—Wholesale Price List of Dahlias and Gladioli. A well selected list.

H. E. Meader, Dover, N. H.—Special Wholesale Price List of Gladioli, Florists' Mixture, for the trade only.

North Eastern Forestry Company, New Haven, Conn.—1914 Catalogue of High Grade Tree Seeds and Nursery Stock.

Atlantic Nursery Co. Inc., Berlin, Md.—1914 Spring Trade Price List of Ornamental Trees, Shrubs and Herbaceous Perennials.

M. Herb, Naples, Italy.—Price List of Novelties for 1914. Printed in three languages. Attractively illustrated with portraits of flowers presumably meritorious.

F. C. Heinemann, Erfurt, Germany.—Special Trade Offer, Novelties, 1914, "and some other first-class seeds of last year's and former introduction." Handsomely illustrated with portraits of alleged new strains.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—Burpee's Annual, 1914. "The plain truth about seeds that grow." Up-to-date and business-like as always, this catalogue takes its place among the "early birds." There are two colored plate inserts—one of Gibraltar onion, Golden Bantam sweet corn, etc., and the other Spencer sweet peas, pansies, etc. The covers are richly adorned with beautiful Spencer sweet peas and Matchless tomato.

The first of the 1914 seed catalogues to be received at this office—good evidence that this oldest of seed houses in America is still "up and doing." This is their 113th successive annual catalogue and, like its predecessors, it is complete, comprehensive and well arranged. The cover of soft grey tone bears the inscription in gold embossed letters without pictorial adornment and is refined and pleasing in effect. There is a good list of vegetables and flower seed novelties for the coming season.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

George S. Faulkner is back again to Philadelphia and is now located at the Habermehl establishment at 22nd and Diamond street.

Dennis T. Connor, who has been laid up with typhoid for the past four or five weeks, was reported on the 15th to be resting comfortably and doing as well as could be expected.

E. J. Fancourt of the Pennock-Meehan Co., has returned from a flying visit west as far as Chicago and reports business very good all along the line. The feeling in trade circles is very optimistic.

Robert Craig Co. report that trade has been better than ever with them this Christmas. We can well believe it. Never saw finer display of holiday plants in bloom. Not only all the staples and standbys but the novelties—new things that you don't find elsewhere.

Cut poinsettias are in less supply this year. This crop has not proved entirely satisfactory in the past from a financial standpoint, and that explains the decrease. But as a pot plant, especially in the dwarfer sizes and for baskets, the demand seems to be as good as ever.

Skimmias—mentioned in our notes last week—seem to have woke up some of the old-timers. We have been asked, "What do you know about skimmias?" Not much, as a matter of fact; but young R. Craig says all their importations heretofore have been unsatisfactory because they lost their leaves, but this year they have managed to get them.

Visitors: T. W. Pierce, Baltimore, Md.; Charles Sim, Rosemont, Pa.

CHICAGO NOTES.

Among the salesmen back for the holidays are Clifford Pruner and A. F. Longren of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., and Guy Reyburn of A. Henderson Co.

There was an unusual number of disappointed plant buyers in the city the past week. Plants in bloom had been bought up days ago and plants that should be in bloom are waiting for the sunshine.

H. E. Philpott, who came down from Winnipeg, Man., Canada, to secure Christmas stock, says that in his 32 years there, he has not known so warm a December. After a brief cold spell warm weather followed and now it is like spring.

Visitors: Mr. and Mrs. Geo. S. Balsley, Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. S. J. Hillyer, Austin, Tex.; H. J. Peterson, Chicago Heights, Ill.; Mr. Beyer, of Beyer Floral Co., South Bend, Ind.; Mrs. Evans, La Salle, Ill.; H. E. Philpott, Winnipeg, Man.; S. W. Coggan, Battle Creek, Mich.

The excursion given by the Chicago Carnation Co. to its plant at Joliet on Dec. 12 was attended by 53, almost without exception, growers. The chief object of the visit was to see Peerless Pink, their new carnation for 1914 and The Herald, the red sent out last year. The weather had been so far from favorable that the stock did not look its best, but there were many approving comments on both varieties. The Chicago Carnation Co., noted for its hospitality, lived up to its reputation in the way of good things to eat, and after an inspection of the entire plant the company returned to Chicago much pleased with their day at Joliet.

Holiday preparations. Cut out the red ruscus and half the Christmas coloring would disappear. It is given place of honor in window decorations, in hampers, in wreaths, in vases and among the branches of the box trees. The quantity used in Chicago alone would be hard to estimate, but dealers who handled it in pounds two years ago are now using it by tons. That the use of prepared materials is going to be overdone is without a doubt. While the large department stores cannot be said to have equalled former years in artistic decorations the retail florists have shown much taste and their windows are not so crowded as often they have been. Some of the prettiest ones are entirely in red and green. Araucarias, very much red ribboned, are strongly featured in many stores. The only really new material is the thistle, large and dyed brilliant red, and a few of these were shown last year. They are a success already for brightening up wreaths and baskets. Christmas bells appear to be as popular as ever.

PERSONAL.

N. A. Crisman has been appointed city florist of Phoenix, Ariz.

Adam H. Graham, Jr., has been appointed director of public service of East Cleveland, Ohio.

Otto Ackerman of the Riverside Floral Company, Columbus, Ohio, and Miss Mabel Belle Taylor, were married last week.

Clifford Paden has been appointed superintendent for the George H. Mellen Company, succeeding the late Christian Binnig.

James McGilvray, president of the Pasadena Horticultural Society, has been appointed greenhouse superintendent at Eastlake Park, Los Angeles, Cal.

H. C. Neubrand, who has been identified with the seed trade of Providence, R. I., for the past eleven years, has accepted a position as traveling salesman for A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn. Mr. Neubrand has the requisite qualifications for a popular salesman and his selection to represent the big Cromwell establishment on the road, looks like excellent judgment.

New York visitors: E. H. Wilson, Arnold Arboretum, Boston; P. Welch, Boston; William McAlpine, Boston.

Boston visitors:—Louis Sander, Bruges, Belgium, and D. Cameron representing F. Sander & Sons, St. Albans, England; Ed. Gurneay, Montreal, P. Q.; Henry J. Hass, Newport, R. I.

NEWS NOTES.

Elgin, Ill.—Charles Swaby has purchased the Swaby Greenhouse.

Knoxville, Tenn.—The organization of a Florists' Club is contemplated here and preliminary steps towards this have already been taken. It is hoped to hold a chrysanthemum show next year.

Providence, R. I.—A large tree was blown down Monday night, Dec. 15, crushing in its fall a greenhouse filled with azaleas and other Christmas plants, belonging to The Westminster Greenhouses, Inc. The plants were mostly ruined.

Boston—A novelty in Galvin's show window is Acacia platyptera. This odd species has never to our knowledge been offered here before as a commercial flowering plant. It has a certain beauty in the character and arrangement of its bright golden flowers but the peculiar flat and winged stems and foliage are not graceful or particularly attractive as acacias go.

H. A. Stevens, of Dedham, has a very promising violet, a seedling from the Princess of Wales. It differs from that popular variety in being fuller in flower, the wings and base petals being broader and the whole blossom showing a wavyness suggestive of the Spencer sweet pea. The blooms average 1½ inches across.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Flower trade in Boston is very quiet and the result has been a sagging in prices all down the line, due to over weight and primarily to the fact that the first of the Christmas crop is now in evidence—pushed along a bit by the soft skies and balmy breezes that don't belong in December. Carnations are not feeling the situation as much as the roses and while the latter are tending downwards in market value the carnations are really stiffening up. Still the demand is weak on everything. Violets are doing exceedingly well, everything considered. There are a good many chrysanthemums still hanging on. Lily of the valley is abundant and paper white narcissi are overdone most decidedly. Lilies are about normal, also cattleyas. The American Beauty market is holding its own as a speculative proposition, but the sensational holiday values of this old campaigner are gone, never to return.

CHICAGO Sales are not especially brisk this week, a sort of lull before the storm seeming to pervade the market. Social events for the holidays are hardly under way at this writing. Orders are being booked for cut flowers and the general trend is to make sure of stock well in advance, as the feeling seems well rooted that a shortage is quite possible. However, those who are in closest touch with the growers know that a few days of sunshine would work wonders with the buds, and they would not be surprised if stock would be sufficient to lower the prices quoted. The weather is cooler than last week, which makes the quality of all flowers better. Violets are arriving from the east in good condition, and home-grown singles are also excellent in quality. Carnations have become harder with cooler temperature, and there is a good supply of roses. A few chrysanthemums are seen, but hardly enough to warrant quotations. Lily of the valley is in good supply and orchids are moving as fast as received. All kinds of green is of good quality and supply is sufficient.

PHILADELPHIA No marked change in the market here during the past week. Conditions remain about the same and are neither very bad nor very good; may be summed up in the words of Arthur Niessen as "fair." Plenty of good stock in roses, carnations, gardenias and everything else. Prices hold firm but no advance. Prospects for Christmas are that there will be plenty of good stock at very reasonable prices. Crops are excellent, especially in the higher grades. Greens market very active. Boxwood scarce but good supply in the right spots and of fine quality.

ST. LOUIS Business so far this month has not been any too good. The retailers report the bulk of their work is for funerals and little of anything else going on. The wholesale markets also complain of slack business. The only scarcity just now is violets, and it seems the crop will be greatly decreased this year owing to the bright, clear and warm weather. This of course brought out other stock. Carnations are quite plentiful. Roses, too, are in plenty all around, with prices low. Killarney are in the majority. Roman hyacinths, lily of the valley, paper whites and stevia are slow in demand and plenty of them; lilies not any too many at present.

NEW YORK Market conditions this week are not quite as bright as they were a week ago. This is commonly the case previous to the Christmas rush and then the weather has been unusually salubrious and favorable for flower production, and any movement to advance prices because of the approach of the holidays or to hoard stock for anticipated rise in value is evidently doomed from the start. The outlook is that there will be a plentiful supply of roses, carnations, lily of the valley, orchids, gardenias—in fact, there are no indications of scarcity on anything during Christmas week. Present quality, and quality indicated for next week, are all that could be desired. There seems to be more or less of a feeling among the retailers that the plant trade for Christmas has reached its zenith and it would not surprise many of them if not a few plants should be left on their hands. This view is based in part on the supposition that cut flowers will be available in plenty, of fine quality and at little advance above what are regarded as normal prices. The renewed interest in rose growing, the great variety of fine roses now available and the excellent condition in which they are put on the market, are strong factors in the situation. The outlook for violets is somewhat dubious, and any inflation of prices on these will surely result in disaster. Shipments of southern asparagus have fallen off and the home-grown material will now have a living chance.

FREE HORTICULTURAL LECTURES AT BOSTON.

The Lecture Committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society has issued its annual program of free lectures on horticultural subjects to be given at Horticultural Hall, Boston, during January, February and March, on Saturdays at 2 o'clock P. M., unless otherwise stated.

A special feature of the course this season will be a school of instruction in orchard work with lectures and demonstrations by experts in the various phases of fruit growing. The subjects and dates are as follows:

January 3.—"Utilizing Birds in Horticulture" (illustrated), by Edward H. Forbush, Boston.

January 10.—"Flower Groupings in a Michigan Garden" (illustrated), by Mrs. Francis King, Alma, Mich.

WEED EXTERMINATION.

(Dr. G. E. Stone, in Annual Report of Mass. Agri. Exper. Station.)

In recent years a great deal has been done along the lines of weed extermination, and many different methods have been experimented with and some of them adopted. There are several proprietary articles and mechanical devices on the market purporting to solve some of the phases of the weed question, but most of them are rather expensive when used on a large scale. When one needs only a small amount of weedicide, however, it is better to buy the easily procured proprietary article than to bother with the crude material, which is often hard to obtain.

Sulfate of iron has proved valuable in the west for the extermination of such tender plants as mustard and others when used as a spray in grain fields, and it can also be used for killing dandelions in lawns. It is inexpensive when bought in bulk, although the proprietary article, consisting of pulverized sulfate of iron mixed with nitrate of soda and sand and put out in expensive containers, is not so cheap. Arsenate of soda, which can be bought in bulk or as a commercial article, and similar compounds are also used as weed killers.

Of the several mechanical devices used for weed extermination, some are designed to pull up the weeds and others to kill them by injecting poisonous chemicals into the roots, while still others do the work by burning. Even electricity has been tried, but with rather unsatisfactory results, since considerable current is required to kill even small plants. Salt, copper sulfate, carbolic acid, nitrate of soda and many other materials have been used as weed killers, and undoubtedly in the future cheaper and more efficient methods will be found.

Arsenate of Soda.

Arsenical compounds appear to be the most poisonous to weeds. Of these, arsenate or arsenite of soda is usually employed, and is especially valuable for destroying weeds in dirt walks, roads, ditches and tennis courts and for killing poison ivy about trees, buildings, stone walls, etc. It is very poisonous to plants and lasting in its effects. One or two applications at the rate of 10 gallons of the solution per square rod (made up of 1 pound of the arsenate of soda to 5 or 10 gallons of water) will last for some years. This substance does not appear to leach out of the soil to any extent, while many others used as weed killers either volatize quickly or leach out through the soil, producing only a temporary effect. Arsenate of soda can be used to advantage also in treating 4 or 5 inches of a lawn close to the foundations of buildings, to save clipping by hand the tall grass which cannot be reached with a lawn mower.

Watering Can with Device for Applying Arsenate of Soda.

The most satisfactory way to apply arsenate of soda is by means of a sprinkler with an attachment to direct the spray. With this device it is possible to treat walks up to the very edge without injuring the grass in the least. A single drop of arsenate of soda will injure any vegetation it touches, so care must be used in handling it; therefore this little attachment is valuable for directing the liquid. Arsenate of soda should not be used too freely near the feeding roots of trees, but we have never noticed any injury from treating walks near shrubbery or even within a few feet of large trees.

Weeds in Lawns.

To insure a heavy growth of grass and absence of weeds a lawn should have a good, deep foundation of rich soil, well supplied with organic matter and plant food. It is also important that the soil should possess the proper physical properties or texture in order to produce a good growth of grass, and it should have sufficient water-retaining capacity to enable the grass to endure drought. A soil of medium texture well provided with loam, with a water-retaining capacity of about 70 per cent., is much better than a course soil of less water-retaining capacity; for in seasons of drought the coarse soil will dry out very quickly and the grass will suffer, whereas the reverse is true of the fine soil. The weed proposition loses some of its importance if the lawn is well made, since a good growth of grass will crowd out the weeds. New lawns are more troubled with weeds on this account. One of the worst weeds affecting new lawns is crab grass (Digitaria humifusa), but it lasts only a year or two, as a rule. It is much more troublesome on dry lawns, where the catch of grass is poor. Frequent close cutting of the grass in the fall is a good preventive, since the seed is not allowed to mature. Two of the plantains, P. lanceolata and P. major, are troublesome in lawns, more especially where the grass is thin. Cutting plaintain at different distances from the roots with a special device has not always proved satisfactory, and our observations have shown that when cut in this way a large percentage of the plants renew their growth. This appears to be true, also, of the dandelion.

The stems of plantain are, as a rule, only about ¾ or 1 inch in length, and if cut quite deep below the surface of the ground a considerable percentage could possibly be destroyed.

Obituary

Pearl V. Winters.

Miss Pearl V. Winters, employed by C. R. Tuson, Windsor, Ont., for the past six years, dropped dead on Dec. 2nd. She was 24 years of age.

D. McGillivray

Donald McGillivray, for many years in the gardening and florist business in Brattleboro, Vt., and Newport, N. H., died on December 6, after an illness extending over several months, aged 59 years. He was a native of Scotland, where he received his education as a gardener. He was a member of the S. A. F. from 1888 to 1901 and attended many of the conventions during that period and proved himself a pleasant companion to all those with whom he was thus associated.

NEWS NOTES.

Queens, N. Y.—The American Nursery Company has increased its capital stock to $200,000.

Fergus Falls, Minn.—E. A. Isaacson has purchased the business and greenhouses of S. N. Mehlin.

Reading, Pa.—Moyer Bros. have moved from 245 S. 10th St. to Eighth and Cherry.

Providence, R. I.—W. P. Carpenter, station master of Union Station, has purchased the depot flower stand.

Dayton, O.—M. J. Altschul and A. O. Swope are contemplating the establishment of a wholesale flower market.

Louisville, Ky.—A fire in the greenhouses of John Skrobank, Taylor blvd. and Park View, destroyed his entire stock as well as his potting shed, boiler house and coal shed. His loss is placed at $3,500 with no insurance.

Daytona, Fla. — Leon Despland has purchased a lot of land on Magnolia avenue on which he proposes to build a two-story building, to which he will remove the business of the Daytona Floral Company, of which he and his wife are the proprietors.

Pittsburgh, Pa. — Samuel McClements has purchased the interest of P. S. Randolph and will continue the business under the old firm name of Randolph & McClements. Mr. Randolph will hereafter give his time to the business of P. S. Randolph & Sons at Verona, Pa.

Over 38 Years Old is this Lord & Burnham House at Columbus, Ohio

AS near as we are able to find out, it is probably among the first greenhouses made in this country, constructed with iron rafters.
At the time, it was criticised rather severely by both growers and gardeners as being impractical.
The iron was accused of being "such a conductor of heat that it would cost more to heat than all-wood houses."
Another serious objection was that "there would be a great increase in glass breakage due to the expansion and contraction of the iron."
So you see it was just the same then as it is now, there always a lot of croakers who stand ready to throw stones at improvements, if they are anything of a departure.
This old house erected for the University of Ohio had 3 inch iron rafters, wooden purlins and gutters.
The rafters and purlins are surprisingly good yet. The gutters have, of course, been repeatedly repaired.
On the live place mantel of a friend of mine are these words: "Where young men see visions and old men dream dreams."
What must have been the visions of the heads of this built century old concern when they first conceived the iron framed greenhouse.
If you are one of the progressive sort, who are seeing visions about your business, it stands to reason that we can be of material help to you in working with you towards turning the vision of the things you see, into the things that be.
We would welcome hearing from you at any time.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Care of Sweet Peas

These should now be well advanced in growth, and the stems improving in length, but not until early spring will they attain that strength which we like to see. If the plants are covered with buds and in good health, with small fibrous roots coming to the surface a light mulch will do them good. Feeding must be given with care. The plants are unable to assimilate anything like the amount of food now that they can two months hence. If the stems show any signs of becoming shorter a watering of liquid cow or sheep manure once in two weeks will help them. A top-dressing of well decayed cow or pulverized sheep manure is better if lightly forked into the ground before watering. It is better to avoid all chemicals at this season, for unless applied with great caution, they will do far more harm than good. Tying must be regularly attended to, for once any stems become bent the flowers are unsalable. The temperature with sun heat can run up to 65 or 68 degrees, but on cloudy days a maximum of 55 to 58 degrees is sufficient and at night about 50 degrees.

Easter Lilies

Now that the holiday trade leaves quite some bench space it will be well to bring in some of the lilies intended for the Easter trade. Lilies should be given immediate attention. Harrisii or Formosa lilies, if they are just coming through the ground now will be all right as Easter does not come this year until April 12th. There isn't any reason for using a strong heat, for the present, at least, for any lilies intended for Easter; 55 degrees will do nicely; a higher temperature will only, especially in the dark days, tend to produce a soft growth. In about three weeks it will be all right to give them 60 degrees. In the case of multiflorums and giganteums, if the growths are three to four inches high you are all right. These lilies can be given a house that stands about 60 degrees at night and in about three weeks they can have 65 degrees.

Mignonette

Mignonette likes a cool, bracing atmosphere. At all times when prudence offers no objections, air should be freely admitted—not rushing or chilling drafts, but merely fresh air to counteract stagnancy, and excess in atmospheric humidity and temperature. Bench-grown mignonette will hardly be at its best until the shortest days and gloomiest stretch of winter have been passed. It then shows how good culture is capable of giving a lift to nicely established, sturdy growth. A rather low temperature at present from 42 degrees to 45 degrees is in accord with good culture as regards high-grade mignonette for cutting. Give attention to tying and disbud strong shoots, cut away twiggy straggling ones, water sparingly and do not fumigate unless actually needed. Another sowing of mignonette for pot and bench culture can now be made to be grown into good stock for the spring trade.

Orchids

We are now coming into our shortest days, when careful watering counts. To do this work right the grower will have to go over his plants every day and make it a rule to water only as they may need it. All such orchids as cattleyas, cœlogynes, miltonias, laelias, odontoglossums, etc., love fresh air, so make it a point to give some ventilation every day even if it is only for an hour as it will help to keep the air sweet. Those of the East Indian family will stand more coddling and thrive, but that does not mean that they do not want ventilation, too. This should be given, on all bright days. Do not keep the houses too damp during dull and murky weather, but during bright weather you can damp down two or three times a day. Use any spare time now in cleaning and sponging the orchids.

Propagation

Florists who raise any and all kinds of plants for an ever-open market carry on propagation at all seasons with hardly any let-up at any time. The benches on which propagating is done should be exposed to the full light, but be so arranged as to afford ready means for expeditious placing and removal of shading. Give plenty of minute openings to insure perfect drainage. On these a layer of coarsely broken up soil—usually the rough leavings from the siftings of potting soil, is spread about half an inch thick and on this goes the sand.

Starting Bulbous Stock

We are now getting more room so we can keep up a steady succession of all kinds of bulbous stock from this out. Bring flats of narcissi, tulips, hyacinths, etc., into heat every week. The tulips should be kept in a dark place so their stems will draw up. All those intended for Easter should be held in a cold pit or cellar that can be kept as near freezing as possible. When kept at 45 and even 40 degrees they will come along far too early.

Mr. Farrell's next notes will be on the following: Aspargus plumosus and Sprengeri; Geraniums in Winter; Sowing Gloxinias; Seed Sowing; Tuberous Begonias; Start Making Flats.

CONDUCTED BY

George H. Penson

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Penson. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

The Pot-Tree House

The buds will be swelling on the trees that have been given a few weeks' treatment in this house. Advance the temperature accordingly so that by the time they are in flower 50 to 55 degrees will be recorded through the night with the corresponding advance through the day. As soon as the buds show signs of expanding the temperature can be allowed to run up several degrees higher with sun heat—75 will not be too hot providing a good crack of air is on at the time. This is only meant to apply for the few days that it takes for the buds to show color after the first signs of growth are detected. Do not let the atmosphere get anywhere near dry; fine mist-like sprays will always help to promote growth. Look over the pots daily, watering them as they need it; there are sure to be some to dry out, now that the roots are in action.

Peach Buds Dropping

Some gardeners are shy on root-pruning in the fall because of the ill effect on the flower buds—many, they will claim, are apt to fall after it. This is not due to the root pruning—that is if it was properly carried out. With proper care any number of peach or nectarine trees can be root-pruned just as severely as any other tree or, in other words, as hard as is advisable and never drop a bud. The chief factor in causing buds to drop is dryness at the roots either at the time of root-pruning or since. Not only does this refer to trees that have been root-pruned but also to trees that are growing in borders that dry out easily. We know there are some borders that never would dry out from the fall until plenty of growth is on the trees again in the following spring, a fact that cannot nullify the existence of the first mentioned. See that all borders are kept moist through the dormant season, especially those trees that were root-pruned. An additional preventive can also be used in the form of an occasional syringing. Three or four times a week the trees can be syringed over with cold water which will help to keep the buds soft. Let the water be quite cool and then the trees will feel the difference when they come to be started and warm water used.

Knots

While having the peach tree in mind I will record what occurred to me a few days prior to writing the article on tying peach trees in the issue of December 13th which was overlooked at the time of writing. It is the matter of knots. Of course there are knots and knots—some that are easily tied and likewise untied, others that require the latter part of the last sentence reversed, big knots and little knots, some that you tie with your tongue which cannot be undone with the teeth; these, and many others can also be recorded but the one I had in mind was what we always knew as a "granny knot." Perhaps you never heard of it but you must know it all the same. It is one that comes undone before the job is through, or in the case of tying up boxes, etc., it needs five or six body guards to stay around all the time or it will give out. What looks worse than a bunch of knots where one should do the work? In tying peach trees of course a chance will be taken on almost any kind of knot. Some are sure to stay but why not get a reliable one into your fingers, one that will "stick around." Seldom will two men use exactly the same way of making ties and it is difficult to alter one's ways when once established but get the habit early of making one that will stick and also be quickly made.

Fig Houses

Fig houses should be put into shape without delay. The pruning of the trees will be done on exactly the same lines as the peach or nectarine tree. There will be no real flower buds to be considered but on close examination it will be found that there are many very tiny fruits waiting to develop on last year's wood, making it advisable to retain all of this there is room for. The size of the foliage must be considered as it does not pay to crowd it; a freer hand with the knife can be used on the fig tree than any other. Always leave room for and encourage young wood from the base as this is the future of the tree. Let the house have the usual cleaning, top dressing, etc., prior to tying the trees back on the trellis. Should the surface soil be full of roots do not remove it by force at the expense of breaking the roots; rather remove any not having roots into it and then add a top-dressing to level the border off. Figs make surface roots very easily.

King George Melon

In August 23rd issue I made reference to this new melon stating what it had done for us here up to date. As an experiment we tried three plants in the house that was sown 1st of September for Xmas crop which have turned out much better than we anticipated. It grew much freer than we expected it to, making growth equal to that of the summer; the weakening sun power evidently suited it. We are led to believe a light shading on the glass will be a benefit to it through the summer months. It is certainly a fine fruit when you get it right.

Winter Packing

The packing of fruit through the winter time will take a little more care than at other times of the year. See that additional linings are put in to keep out the frost. Old newspapers will answer the purpose.

Happy New Year

A few more days and Father Time will have ushered 1913 into the past, gone but not forgotten. Those who at its coming were superstitious enough to fear the '13 hoodoo have had little cause to complain, for from all indications 1913 has been a prosperous year. Now as 1914 draws near may it bring Happiness and Prosperity to HORTICULTURE and all its readers.

CARNATION TROUBLES

Carnation and Antirrhinum Disease

A Morristown, N. J., grower sends the following inquiry:

Mr. Farrell.

Dear Sir:

Would you kindly advise a cure, if any, for blight on carnations and snapdragons? I have reason to believe that it originated in a celery frame while in their summer quarters and where the celery last year was wintered. I have tried Bordeaux Mixture and other reputed remedies, but it fails to check it any. First the tips of the leaves and then the stems dry up. Any suggestion will be gladly accepted and appreciated.

In reply I shall take up the carnations first. From the scanty facts given I would say that his carnations are suffering from leaf spot or blight (Septoria Dianthi). It affects both leaves and stems to such an extent that the sap is cut off from the branches making them dry up and finally die. I would first of all go through the benches and cut off all diseased shoots and burn them. Pay attention to the watering at the roots and try to keep them in an even state of moisture, but doing any watering in the morning so they will have a chance to dry off before nightfall. Once a week spray with ammoniacal copper carbonate solution. This can be made as follows: Copper carbonate, one ounce, ammonia, one pint; mix together and when dissolved this is enough for ten gallons of water. I would suggest a very steady night temperature of from 52 to 54 degrees, about 62 degrees on dark days, and 65 to 70 degrees on sunny days. Give ventilation whenever possible. Keep the surface of the soil stirred frequently. In short, give careful culture, which only with spraying will help to eradicate any fungous disease and do not propagate from any of this diseased plants. Antirrhinums are subject to leaf spot and the same treatment will do for them. Do not syringe for some time, so the foliage will be left dry, but spray once a week with the ammoniacal copper solution. The causes of these fungous diseases are often exceedingly complicated and difficult to unravel, but it is known that too little moisture or too much excessive heat or cold, too little plant food and unfavorable soil, all go to make trouble.

John J. M. Farrell

Weak Stems

Editor HORTICULTURE:

Will you please let me have some information that will help me to correct a bad case of weak stemmed carnations. All my carnations are exceedingly weak in the stem although flowers are of fair size; 2½ to 3 inches, but very light at the calyx. The houses average 50° to 55° at night, with a chink of air on; the day temperature runs from 60° to 75° with everything open. As to feeding; I have treated one bench with Clay's fertilizer, one bench with blood and bone and muriate of potash (3 part to 1 part), one bench has had ichthemic guano, and one has been given sheep manure; this last is the weakest stemmed batch As to the others I can detect little difference. Once, so far, everything had a good dressing of soot to kill cutworms.

I have generally a few weak stems with the first cutting, but the trouble has not been so continuous before and I hope you can tell me where I have succeeded in "slipping up."

To correct weakness in stems already formed is impossible but your detailed explanation of the treatment of your plants makes it easy to locate the reason for the weakness of which you complain. It is simply a case of overfeeding, aggravated by a too high temperature at times at night and probably also in the daytime. Bloodmeal, guano and sheep manure are very rich stuff and will hardly do for carnations at any time unless the user is well acquainted with their action and it generally takes a "slip up" before a man really begins to notice that he had better leave these stimulants alone, at least until spring. Even then a small dose at a time will go a long way.

I take it from your letter that your plants are yet in good physical condition and only affected with weak stems. If so, they will pull through all right, if you keep them properly watered and aired. The night temperature should never go over 50 nor under 48. As for fertilizer, I have an idea that there is enough of it in your benches to raise a good crop of cauliflower after your carnations are pulled out in the summer.

If after planting your next year's carnations, you wish some practical information as to feeding your plants, I shall be glad to help you out. I am in a position to do so as I have in my days paid dearly for finding out that a man had better not fool around too much with highstrung fertilizers.

Carnation Rust

HORTICULTURE,

Dear Sirs:—Will you kindly let me know through the columns of your paper the cause of rust on carnations? I used tankage in the field last summer and mixed it with the soil in the benches and my plants are full of rust. Would the use of tankage have anything to do with it?

J. M., New York.

Rust is produced by the spores of a fungus. These spores are present wherever carnations have been or are growing and will attack the plants, whenever favorable conditions for their growth are present. The spores will have an easy time of it, if the plants are in a weak condition, either from constitutional weakness, checks of any kind, or if the atmosphere in the houses is kept too moist and the air stagnant.

The above will readily suggest the needed treatment. Some kinds of carnations—like most scarlets, crimsons and yellows—are seldom without rust and will show a very decided case of it upon the least provocation. As far as your correspondent's case is concerned, I do not see that tankage has anything to do with the rust on his plants, unless enough tankage had been used to induce a soft growth and subsequent treatment of the plants had been favoring the development of the spores. The plants will come out of the disease all right if kept airy and not syringed more than is needed to keep red spider in check. I have in these last years not found any trouble, on account of rust; simply I think, because I keep my plants free from moisture and always have air circulating, whenever possible.

Get your plants in good healthy growth and keep them so and rust will not show much. If the lower leaves are much affected, I should advise to pull them off, and burn; this will greatly reduce the chance for further infection. Any sort of spraying with germicides is a waste of time.

Phalaenopsis Aphrodite

The frontispiece of this week's issue of HORTICULTURE represents a nice group of Phalænopsis Aphrodite, a native of the Island of Luzon, Philippines, where they are found growing on low trees, usually along the edge of small streams. This would indicate a warm, moist, partly shady situation and these conditions the cultivator of these useful orchids must try to imitate, avoiding extremes in either direction. I know they have a bad reputation in regard to their behavior under cultivation, and to a certain degree not without reason. But there are a good many other orchids more difficult to keep alive and growing for a number of years than Phalænopsis. The plants shown in the picture have been here nine years and they have never failed to make a good display every winter from November to March with a few occasional sprays through the whole season.

New imported plants, once established, grow and flower with the greatest vigor for several years and, if given proper attention, indefinitely. Once in a while one will go off (and that in a hurry), but this is usually the grower's fault and not the fault of the plant. The house in which the plants are growing here is an old fashioned curvilinear structure, 25 x 20 feet, covered with ground glass. The Phalænopses are all suspended about a foot from the glass on wires stretched the whole length of the house; eight rows of the larger plants being suspended over the center table which is occupied with anthuriums, ferns and other shade and moisture loving plants; then there are four rows each over the two side benches, these being again used for other plants, such as ferns, begonias, cypripediums, etc. By growing these plants in the same house beneath the Phalaenopsis, assures at all times a nice moist atmosphere. The house is heated by hot water and plenty of pipes run under both side-benches as well as the center table; this allows at all times a gentle heat without having to get the pipes overheated and thereby avoiding that dry, parched atmosphere which is so conducive to breeding thrips, red spider and other pests. The ground glass, which as a rule is not to be recommended for orchid growing, suits the Phalænopsis to a T as they seem to enjoy a little shade even in winter. In summer cloth shades are used as soon as the sun warms up the plants, rolling them up after the sun leaves the glass. The temperature in winter is kept as near 65 degrees as possible at night with a rise of 10 degrees to 15 degrees during the day. The house is damped down once a day, usually in the morning, when the plants on benches are watered and syringed at the same time. In cloudy weather the floors only are damped down good.

As a compost one may use either moss, osmunda fibre or both together, but if the moss cannot be kept alive and growing, then fibre alone is the best thing to use, for dead moss will soon spell dead roots and the consequences thereof. The plants must be kept free of insects at all times by frequent fumigating with some good insecticide and an occasional sponging if necessary. Watering must be done with great care at all times aid especially during the short days of winter. Never water a plant unless you are sure it is dry, for although Phalaenopses have no pseudobulbs in which to store up moisture, they can stand a good drying out, especially in winter without suffering any harm. Ventilate on all favorable occasions, preferably from the bottom if the house is provided with bottom ventilators.

Sports and Reversion

Along down through the ages a great deal has been accomplished for us by accident. It is safe to say that most of all the good that has come to cultivators in the way of new varieties, has happened. By way of example, it took seven years for the "Student" parsnip to be developed from the wild type of the wayside. This was accomplished by a member of the faculty and students of the only Agricultural College then existent, and the Student parsnip is still recognized. Gardeners often scold at the signs of reversion to type visible when seeds are sown and the results are poor, forgetting that all the good we have had is due to the uncertainty of things seemingly fixed. We all know of plants that have been seemingly as immutable as the days, until someone discerns a sign of variation, and this is the opportunity of the cultivator who, being wise to the situation, takes advantage and finally proves up with new forms of value for decoration of gardens or food for the race.

Some years since, the writer was speaking to a gathering of which one was a preacher, the argument being that the tendency of all things was downward, hence the need of uplift. The preacher turned the tables very cleverly by saying that we expected too much from a type recognized as such, but obviously artificial.

A lady once asked the meaning of the word "sport" as used by gardeners and, at first thought, there was hesitation. Freak would be the word, but does not contain the possibilities inherent. We owe so much to the vagaries of nature either in the dwarfing of things or otherwise, it really seems we need another term or definition. The change of color in the flowers amounting sometimes to albinism is an illustration, but whatever the sport, break or freak is, the unseen influences at work would make it appear to be an accident, and these are many to those who have eyes to see.

Rogues therefore are to be expected and not scolded; we are dealing with a product and the more valuable it is, the more prone it is to revert back to a former generation, perhaps even to the type plant.

A colored gentleman once remarked that the white man was very uncertain. If we paraphrase this and say that plants are sensitive, have in fact senses, the changes we see, either of progression or retrogression, are easily understood. A modicum of adversity will surely bring maturity quickly, and a plentitude of food, moisture, and season ahead will tend to make plants forget that there ever was a season of rest or adversity. It is well known that, in India, vegetable seeds have to be imported annually. There is no difficulty in getting seeds there from the various vegetables, but all prove to be rogues when grown the first generation. In Alaska, excellent crops can be grown of temperate kinds in a few weeks, showing that there is a great adaptability—sense in a way—to plants of economic value.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

The Propagating Bench

About this time of the year we begin to think of the propagating bench in earnest, as the time will be here when the stock for the coming year must be rooted. Where the benches are of wood, examine them all very carefully and see that all the boards are sound and will stand the hard usage without breaking down anywhere. There is nothing more annoying than to have a board break about the time the cuttings are beginning to callous nicely. Where the benches are of tile or slate there will be very little to repair, but make sure that there are no broken tiles. We do not like the wooden bench as well as the tile or slate, as the former is a very poor conductor of heat. The latter is much better, and we have little trouble to maintain the necessary temperature in the sand. Whichever it may be, see that all the bottoms and sides are in good condition, and then whitewash the benches with hot lime to which a little copper sulphate has been added. The sulphate will do away with a good many spores of various fungus, and will help the lime in its cleaning. Then use a little sphagnum moss to fill any large openings, so that the sand will not wash through. Make sure, however, that there will be no danger of the surplus water not draining, as perfect drainage is very necessary to successfully root rose cuttings. Do not use too much sand; that is, do not have it too deep in the bench. Four inches of sand will be all that is necessary, for the less sand the easier it is to control the bench.

Sand

This should be clean fresh sand, not too coarse, nor too fine. A medium run of sand will be very good. See that it is very sharp. Avoid using river sand if it is possible. There are many thousands of roses rooted in just such sand, but where it can be had we prefer the other. Do not use sand that had been used before, or been lying around collecting dirt. If it has been stored in good clean quarters it will be safe. Try the sand for dirt, by taking a little of it and rubbing it between the hands. If the hands show a thick scum of dirt, then the sand is not clean. It can be used, however, by giving it several heavy waterings as soon as it is placed in the benches. Needless to say all the sand should be well screened and free from gravel or other coarse material.

Shading the House

Where the houses are exposed to the sun, it will be necessary to shade them quite heavily, for sunlight is not required in the process of rooting plants. It is well to shade the house before any cuttings are put in for if it does not work well the fault can always be corrected before there are any cuttings in the house that will be damaged. Lime is generally used for the shading, but it is not the best, for it injures the paint and is very difficult to remove after it is not wanted. A much better plan is to use a little whiting and kerosene into which may be mixed a little dryer, as the oil alone will not dry readily. Gasoline may be used, but it is dangerous and expensive, as compared to the kerosene.

Bottom Heat

Make sure that there will be enough bottom heat to maintain a temperature of 64 degrees F. in the sand. To do this it will be necessary to place cloth or other material along the side of the bench, and let it hang down to the walk to keep the heat under the bench. The temperature above the cuttings or in the whole house must be kept down to 52-54. The object of the higher temperature in the sand is to encourage the roots, and the low is to keep the tops or the top buds from growing. Once the cuttings start to grow they will never root well. It is not until the cuttings are rooted that the thermometer can be allowed to run up to 64 or so. This will help soften the buds, and the cuttings will start much quicker after they are potted, than if the low temperature prevailed all the while that they are in sand.

Firming the Sand

Before any wood is cut for the cuttings, the house should be running just as if the cuttings were in, for about two days. If there is any defect anywhere it will surely show up in this time. Among other things see that the sand is well firmed by being pounded down gently but firmly with a brick. This can be followed by a pounding with a flat piece of wood nearly as wide as the bench and having handles so that it will be very easy to handle it. This same piece comes in real handy when the cuttings are being put in as it can be used to mark out the row, and again to pound the sand around the cuttings when the row is full. Of course the sand must be wet when the firming starts, as it would be useless to pound the sand dry.

---

in the year, grow to an inch or two and then proceed to perpetuate their kind, making perfectly good seeds. To go to the other extreme, orchids that are waning and their vigor almost exhausted will make good parents in that good seeds will be produced, even though it may be the last dying effort of the plant. A thought for the New Year is that the season of seed lists is at hand. There will be many novelties that will tempt us, though as the years go on these seem fewer and it is a good sign, in that greater care is exercised today than ever in sending out a new thing. The advice is to try all that appear to be good in a tentative way, trusting to older and well tried kinds to carry one over, remembering also that when a novelty ceases to be such and is not controlled by anyone, it soon loses value to the average grower even to the extent of losing its identity.

Sunday gardening

Representative John E. Beck of Chelsea has filed a petition and bill in the Massachusetts Legislature that it shall be lawful for any man who maintains a garden appurtenant to his house for the purpose of raising flowers, fruit, or vegetables for the use of his household and not for sale, to work in the same on Sunday. That is good so far as it goes. So long as a man does nothing in his gardening operations to disturb the Sunday quiet and annoy the neighborhood we see no reason why he may not be permitted legally to care for the welfare of his plants to the same extent that he is free to attend to the wants of his domestic animals, and this liberty should not be limited to the man who does not sell his product. The crops of the latter require the same attention and care as those of his amateur neighbor and the proposed distinction strikes us as most unjust.

Happy New Year

With this issue HORTICULTURE closes its eighteenth volume and its last word for 1913 is here and now said. Before our next number appears one more New Year's Day will have passed and friends everywhere will have exchanged the compliments of the season in kindly reciprocal wishes for health, happiness and prosperity during the year to come. So it is fitting that we, too, should at this time join in the general felicitation and extend to one and all our sincere good wishes that success may crown their labors, that peace and plenty and all the comforts of mind and body may be theirs in over-running measure.

"Into each life some rain must fall,
Some days must be dark and dreary."

But remembrance and reflection must convince us all that the year entered upon twelve months ago, while it may not have brought to us all we hoped for and has contributed its share of discouragements and reverses, has not been unkind. Nothing has been that might not have been worse and so it will be all through life if we only choose to see it in that light. We should never forget that he is most truly happy who attains his greatest happiness through making others happy and this principle may well be made the corner stone of all our New Year resolutions for 1914.

A gladiolus problem

One of the best known gladiolus specialists in this country has told us that his firm had now decided to discontinue the growing of standard varieties in large quantities, because of the serious slashing of prices by the Hollanders. He asserts that "there is more money in raising potatoes now than such gladiolus varieties as America, Mrs. Francis King, etc." So far as our observation goes the stocks sent out by the Hollanders are much inferior to the American bulbs. Of course, the people who are importing them will find this out by experience and after a time we may hope to see those things adjust themselves, but in the meantime it looks as if a great many American growers may have to quit the business. We believe some effort was made by the American gladiolus growers to induce the tariff farmers to give them some protection but they did not accomplish anything. As to the imported bulbs the losses during transit amount to considerable, some varieties being worse than others in this respect. Then there are some that appear all right when received but afterwards either give up the ghost entirely or fail to flower. If the bulbs have sweated any in transit they are practically spoiled. So, we would advise that if you must buy Holland stock it will be wise to insist on a guarantee of arrival in first-class condition. But the best course by far is to stick to the home-grown product.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SHOW AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN.

A visit to a flower show is a perfect holiday to those who cherish their gardens. Yet not often do we see there a true proclamation of beauty; and a still rarer experience it is to find nobility and charm dominating and pervading such displays of flowers. The flower-show in this country is fortunately a more and more common occurrence; but the flower show which is perfection, one which the most critical may not criticise, this is a sort of seventh wonder of the flowery world.

And such, to the pride of every flower lover in Michigan who saw it, was the Second Annual Flower Show of the University of Michigan, in Alumni Memorial Hall at Ann Arbor. A perfect formal garden of chrysanthemums tall and dwarf, of chrysanthemums for the most part of white, of faint to strong tones of yellow, and of fine cool pinks and mauves. Set in the court or patio of this noble building, the impression the flowers gave on entering was first one of excellence of design in the garden plan, of able adjustment of proportions of the garden beds, walks and spaces to each other; a delicate sense of proportion again where perpendicular lines needed considering; beside all columns stand tall chrysanthemum plants delicately outlined against the creamy marble. I see I have yielded to instinct in already calling this flower show a garden. I violate my feeling as to this lovely arrangement by speaking of it as a flower show and shall perhaps be forgiven if I refer to it as a formal garden of chrysanthemums.

The color arrangement of this garden was nothing short of delectable. "An artist hath done this thing." There was charm seldom attained in the management of colors. The hundred or more varieties of chrysanthemums represented presented a picture ever to be recalled with delight. Balance of form and balance in color were always maintained. So cleverly was all this done that the great statues in the hall seemed to have felt the subtle influence of flowers and become as garden adjuncts—general effect considered. The glorious upward-winging Victory at the far end of the garden was not out of keeping with the tall poised flowers below. Even the Laocoon lost its tragic horror here and seemed a part of the gentler beauty of gardens. And was there not a serpent in Eden?

The hanging baskets, a half-dozen of them, covered with Mizpah chrysanthemums, were, I first thought, Bougainvillea. A remarkably successful feature of the Flower Show was the beautiful arrangement seen on the right as one entered the hall. Here below the fine relief portrait in bronze of the beloved Dr. Angell, president emeritus of the University, was a grouping of chrysanthemums in tones of rich coppery browns, bronze and tan in most interesting relation to each other and to the work of art above them. Admirable use of greenhouse plants was made with the chrysanthemums, the whole suggesting that perfectly appropriate thing at this time and in this place, a votive offering!

When one finds that here were two thousand plants in over one hundred varieties, all grown in the University greenhouse, which measures sixteen by eighty feet, and that this is managed on an income of three thousand a year, one is amazed no less at the skill of Mr. Weiner, who has grown the flowers, than at the perfect beauty of the show itself.

This indoor garden suggests reproductions of itself out of doors. What arrangements could we not have thus with heleniums and Michaelmas daisies to give again the lavenders, cool pinks and yellows; petunias, scabiosas yellow antirrhinums, Aquilegia chrysantha, the tall Thermopsis Caroliniana, white and rich pink nicotianas, pink and mauve zinnias. Given a white painted wooden peristyle modelled exactly upon the fine one in this hall, the garden to be laid out within its spaces—untold open air beauty might result.

New Chrysanthemums.

The following list of new varieties have received awards recently from the National Chrysanthemum Society: Miss Willis, white single; Mrs. H. Bean, white, shaded pink; Maud Lousada, silvery mauve exhibition bloom; Mrs. Lawrence, rosy pink single; M. L. Smith, deep rose single; Gladys Jones, terra-cotta single; Bertha Lachaux, Japanese variety, mauve pink with silvery mauve pink reverse; also Mauve Beauty, incurved Japanese, silvery mauve.

Perpetual Flowering Carnations.

A very successful show of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society attracted a large attendance at the Royal Horticultural Hall, on Dec. 3rd. The exhibition was distinctly in advance of the previous ones. The challenge cup presented by the American Carnation Society for three vases of American novelties was won by C. Engelman, who exhibited Wodenethe, Northport and Enchantress Supreme. The second prize was secured by H. T. Mason, who staged Rosette, Enchantress Supreme and White Winsor. The cup presented by J. S. Brunton, the president, was another of the many awards which fell to C. Engelmann. A. F. Dutton had a fine display of popular varieties. Awards were made to the following novelties: Cinderella, mauve and cerise; Lady Fuller, salmon; Queen Alexandra, salmon pink; Pioneer, rose pink; Champion, American variety; Enchantress Supreme, and Gorgeous, cerise.

LANCASTER COUNTY (PA.) FLORISTS' CLUB.

On account of the close proximity of Christmas the visiting trip was cut out for this month, but a good number of the faithful were on hand for the meeting.

The writer and organizer of the club having been president since its organization positively declined a renomination, on the principle that a continuation of the same officers from year to year is a detriment to any club. This club having a limited field to draw upon for its membership has to make up in business and integral strength what it lacks in numerical strength. Working along these lines the following strong list of officers were nominated for the incoming year: President, B. F. Barr, Lancaster; vice-president, Elmer Weaver, Ronks; secretary, Lemon Landis, Lancaster; treasurer, Harry H. Rohrer, Lancaster.

The committee on the annual banquet reported having arranged for a banquet at The Brennaman Building, Tuesday evening, January 13th, with the following program. At 2 P. M. take car for Strasburg on a visit to the growers there, returning to Lancaster at 6 P. M. Dinner at 6.30 P. M., followed by a short business meeting and an address by the Dean of Pennsylvania State College, this to be followed by bowling and other contests; the Brennaman Building being equipped for any form of amusement. Any visiting florist will be welcome to this as well as our other affairs on what we call here a "Dutch Treat"—that is, pay for your own dinner. (Cost will not be over a two-spot.) W. B. Girvin, of Leola, gave us a talk on "The Fertilizing of the Soil for Carnations," and Harry B. Weaver, of Bird-in-Hand, gave a paper on "The Propagating of Carnations." Both papers were well discussed and the dozen or so members who were not present missed some valuable information.

It was the aim of the writer to have this club be not only a helpful and social body, but one that would mean actual cash value to each of its members and after much hard work and good team work we have reached results in the shape of recognition by our local merchants, who will recognize our membership card as entitling us to some special discounts, and several of the larger wholesale concerns will also allow a discount to the man who can show his right to them by being a member of this club. Aside from the few dollars we make in discounts the men who sell us goods will find that they simply have to give us value for value received, for the man or firm that attempts to work off inferior stock will soon lose his trade in this section, where members will report anything of interest each month along these lines.

AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

Public notice is hereby given that the following named gladioli have been registered with the American Gladiolus Society by the A. H. Austin Co., Wayland, Ohio. The varieties were grown on the trial grounds at Ithaca and are distinct from all other varieties tested. The following are the originators' descriptions:

Bertrex. Color white with lilac lines in throat. Size and form of America. Spike tall, straight branching. A little more slender and graceful than America. Increases rapidly; takes up water well and is a great shipper. We believe it to be a practical variety for florists' use. Winner of the silver cup for best new seedling at Cleveland Exhibition, August 15, 1913.

Candidum. Large white blooms, Tips of petals tinted and somewhat reflexed like a lily. Spike tall, erect; free bloomer, 48 blooms on main spike and two side branches.

Rose Wells (No. 55). Large, wide, open blooms; light rose, clear color with small, attractive blotch of lilac rose and yellowish green. Very tall branching spike, straight, slender and graceful.

Easter Bells. Blooms of large size, sulphur yellow, faint carmine lines in throat; tall straight spike; free bloomer and robust grower.

A. C. BELL,
Chairman Nomenclature Committee.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Registration.

December 20, 1913.

Public notice is hereby given of the offer for registration of the following new Roses:

Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed names, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to these registrations, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

By Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J.

Raiser's description. Lovely delicate shell-pink sport of Mrs. Geo. Shawyer, identical in every way with the parent variety as to growth and foliage, but the bud is larger and the color as indicated. Name, "Mrs. F. F. Thompson."

By Dieterich & Turner, Montebello, California.

Raiser's description. Originated as a sport of Mme. P. Euler "Prima Donna" of the strongest growth, combined with a freedom of bloom, size, fragrance and wonderful keeping qualities that are exceptional. Color a beautiful flesh pink deepening to the center. Foliage large and heavy and free from mildew. Name, "September Morn."

JOHN YOUNG, Secretary.

The dates for the winter meeting of the Wisconsin Horticultural Society are January 6, 7 and 8, 1914, instead of January 8, 9 and 10 as reported by some papers.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The 24th annual Shaw banquet was held on Wednesday night, Dec. 17, at the University Club, St. Louis. About 150 florists, nurserymen and gardeners attended. John Noyes of Boston was the speaker of the night on Boston Parks and Playgrounds, illustrating the same with lantern slides.

The St. Louis Retail Florists' Association held its regular monthly meeting, Monday night, Dec. 15, at the Beers Hotel with a good attendance. The principal business was a discussion on the union florist and the "crepe puller." A committee on these were appointed to report back at the January meeting.

Obituary

Timothy O'Connor.

Timothy O'Connor, one of the most widely known florists in the state of Rhode Island, died at his home in Providence on Friday, 19th inst., after a long illness. He was in his 77th year. He had been ill for nearly a year, but up to last May was able to attend daily to his business. At that time his condition became more serious and he remained in his home most of the time. Five weeks ago he was confined to his bed and grew steadily worse. Death was due to a complication of diseases.

Mr. O'Connor was born in Fermoy, County Cork, Ireland, May 10, 1837, the son of Timothy and Mary Newman O'Connor. He came to Providence from Ireland when he was 16 years old and began work as a gardener. Shortly afterward he entered the employ of a florist and studied every phase of the business, seeing in it an opportunity for a good livelihood. While still in his twenties he went into the florist business for himself.

His first place was opened on Hope street. His business grew steadily, and at the time of his death was one of the most flourishing in the state. He had a large greenhouse on Blackstone boulevard, and his downtown store on Union street is conducted by his son, Timothy L. O'Connor. Two years ago the golden wedding anniversary was celebrated by Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor at their home on Barnes street. Mr. O'Connor is survived by his widow and three children, Timothy L. O'Connor, William H. O'Connor and Mrs. M. Joseph McCarthy. The death of Timothy O'Connor removes practically the last of a distinguished coterie of old-time florists of Providence. He was a most estimable gentleman, overflowing with genialty and a past-master in the fine art of homely hospitality. He was devoted to his home and family and was a model citizen.

Harry Francis.

Harry Francis, formerly a well known and popular rose grower of Madison, N. J., whose illness was mention in a recent issue of HORTICULTURE, died on Tuesday, December 16, at the Post Graduate Hospital in New York City, whither he had gone for an operation for appendicitis. About eight years ago Mr. Francis sold out his greenhouse establishment in Madison to Schultz Bros. and went to Florida, where he went into the culture of grape fruit, oranges, etc.

Richard Frohberg.

Richard Frohberg, an employee of Louis Schmutz in Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y., died on December 17, at the Kings County Hospital. He was 46 years of age and a native of Saxony, Germany.

J. C. Williams.

J. Caldwell Williams, who has been in the florist and nursery business at Montclair, N. J., for half a century, died at his home in that place, on Monday, Dec. 15, aged 69 years. Heart disease was the cause of his death.

REGULATIONS FOR STAGING ORCHIDS.

With reference to the exhibits at this show we have heard that the Chelsea Show Committee have revised the regulations respecting the staging of Orchids, as follows: The first or front tier of the staging to be at a height of two feet, the group rising to an average height not exceeding seven feet from the ground level. Seven feet is laid down as being the average of the extreme permissible limit of the height of the highest flowers, etc. (not pots or plant stems), as beyond that height few people can profitably see them. Palms and light foliage plants used as decoration are not subject to this limit of seven feet. Where groups occupy "island" positions they must be arranged so as to have a frontage all round.

(These regulations have given the greatest dissatisfaction to exhibitors, and unless speedily withdrawn there will be few orchids at Chelsea in 1914.)—The Orchid World, London.

We understand that S. J. Reuter & Son, of Westerly, R. I., have invested in 750 plants of John Cook's new rose, Francis Scott Key. As the stock is limited, this will reduce the available number of plants very materially.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York City, "Thorburn's Seeds," 1914. The first of the 1914 seed catalogues to be received at this office—good evidence that this oldest of seed houses in America is still "up and doing." This is their 113th successive annual catalogue and, like its predecessors, it is complete, comprehensive and well arranged. The cover of soft grey tone bears the inscription in gold embossed letters without pictorial adornment and is refined and pleasing in effect. There is a good list of vegetables and flower seed novelties for the coming season.

Sutton & Sons, Reading, England.—Sutton's Amateur Guide in Horticulture for 1914. We have taken occasion in former years to comment enthusiastically on this superb production, expressing the wish that such perfection of photography, engraving and typography might yet be attained in this country. The book before us outvies even the former issues from this house and will be perused with delight and admiration by all those who are fortunate enough to receive a copy. The volume is bound in blue with inscriptions in embossed silver and besides a wealth of beautiful half tones contains a number of full-page portraits in natural colors of asters, cyclamen, wallflowers, peas, etc.

THE "KNOCKER."

The knocker is a coward. Sometimes he has ability; sometimes you'll find him a worker, but one thing you'll always find him to be—a coward. At one of our clerk meetings I said: "Gentlemen, there's to be no knocking in this concern except right at these meetings face to face with the subject of your grievance." Boys, act above the knockers. Face your man in a manly way and spit it out. It will give you self-respect and it will instill respect from others. God help the miserable knocker—the man who smiles with his lips while they're smeared with poison. Making trouble is tonic for him. Learn to detest the fearful habit. Act the man to your fellow-worker.—Southern Merchant.

The New French Hydrangeas

The dormant stock which we now have stored in cold frames is in prime condition to force for Easter, or to bring on slowly for Memorial Day and Spring sales. If you have no stock of these, you will make no mistake in taking advantage of this offer, you will find them good sellers.

AVALANCHE. A splendid large white with a well established reputation; an easy variety to force.

BOTANISTE PELTEREAU. Enormous flowers of a pretty mauve rose.

BOUQUET ROSE. Large trusses of rosy amber turning to bright pink; a favorite with all growers.

DENTELLE. Entirely distinct, deeply fringed flower of a creamy white color; it is not suited for forcing, but for Decoration Day and later flowering it is very valuable.

FRAICHEUR. Very large, regularly shaped flowers, white, delicately suffused with rose, very free flowering.

GENERAL DE VIBRAYE. A favorite wherever seen; very large heads of bright rose colored flowers, a splendid early forcing variety.

LA LORRAINE. Very large flowers, pale rose, turning to bright pink; has become a general favorite during the past two years.

MME. A. RIVERAIN. Superb bright rose color; very vigorous and floriferous.

MME. E. MOUILLERE. Probably the most popular white variety on the market today, an early easy variety to force.

MME. MAURICE HAMAR. A delicate flesh-rose color, a vigorous grower, the individual flowers as well as the trusses being very large. One of the easiest to force early.

MME. RAYMOND. Large trusses of perfectly round flowers of a transparent white, passing to a tender rose.

MME. AGNES BARILLET. A splendid white; a grand variety for a 5 or 6-inch pot plant. From our own observation we are inclined to consider this the best of all the whites.

MLLE. RENEE GAILLARD. Very large panicles of milky white, irregularly dentated flowers. One of the best growers says that this should have been awarded the Silver Medal given to Mme. Emile Mouillere.

MLLE. DE TREMAULT. As the result of our own trials we are convinced that this variety is the best very large flowered white yet introduced. As free flowering as any, of splendid erect habit, producing flower-heads as large as the old popular Otaksa.

MOUSSELINE. A beautiful mauve-rose with cream-colored centre; the flower heads are large and held erect; a fine acquisition.

MONT ROSE. Immense panicles of clear-flesh rose, entirely distinct, one of the best very early flowering varieties.

MONS. G. RENAULT. Very large flowers of a bright rose with carmine reflex; very free and easily forced.

ORNAMENT. Large pretty mauve-pink flowers, very free flowering.

RONSARD. Flowers and trusses very large, of a beautiful rose-tint.

SOUVENIR DE MME. E. CHAUTARD. One of the very best, of splendid erect habit, very robust, medium-sized heads, of bright rose-colored flowers; one of the very best of the Bouquet Rose type.

SENATEUR HENRI DAVID. Another splendid rose-colored variety, with red reflections, flowers produced in immense large heads on the style of La Lorraine, but an earlier bloomer.

Fine Plants Right Along After Christmas

A Succession of Azaleas, all colors, and Superb Cyclamen. Lilacs soon.

A. SCHULTHEIS College Point, N. Y.

"THE RIGHT SEED IN THE RIGHT PLACE"

We furnish grass mixtures for dooryards, terraces, lawns, athletic and polo fields, cemeteries, parks, country clubs, country estates.

Repeated laboratory tests on individual mixtures assure superiority of quality and growth.

Experience of over fifty years of successful seed business assures you of correct proportions.

Experiment has shown us that a mixture of the proper grasses is more satisfactory than an individual grass. Why waste your time and money experimenting. Let us furnish what you need.

New Zealand Garden Peas.

F. Cooper, Ltd., Wellington, N. Z., report under date of Nov. 7, 1913, about the condition of garden peas, as follows:

"Our Mr. Geo. Cooper has just returned from a first inspection of the crops. The spring until about two weeks ago was very dry and they were suffering somewhat, but recently we had four days' heavy rain, which will make a wonderful difference. It is too early to give an estimate of the crop, but about Christmas we shall be able to send a full report."

Cleveland, Ohio—Wm. Brinker, seedsman, 1223 Prospect avenue, has sold his business to F. G. Johnson, of Jackson, Mich.

CHICAGO NOTES.

J. Muir is now in his loop store, with an attractive window display.

R. J. Haight, secretary of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, is leaving for California.

Some of the retail florists are coming out with page advertisements in the local newspapers.

The Chicago Carnation Co. had a large cut of their new carnation, Peerless Pink, for the Christmas trade, and the flowers certainly showed up well.

Nothing new was offered this year. Supply houses are reporting sold out. Even conservative estimates place the quantity of ruscus handled in Chicago this year as twenty-five tons.

One of Frank Oechslin's large auto trucks was disabled for a part of the holiday delivery, in collision with a street car and it was fortunate that the results were not more serious. As it was the rear of the truck only was smashed and a small portion of the load of plants demolished.

It is worthy of note that the express companies in Chicago are collecting for out-of-town shipments, an average of 20 loads of ruscus and other dried and prepared goods daily for holiday use. It is impossible to believe that this is not cutting into the sales of the living flowers and plants.

One hundred and twelve thousand persons visited the chrysanthemum show held at the Garfield Park conservatory from Nov. 9 to 30 this year. This is twice the attendance of last year. The commissioners of the West Park board will hold a mid-winter exhibit in the Garfield Park conservatory from Dec. 21 to Jan. 4.

The municipal Christmas tree, erected by the Art Institute for the poor children of Chicago, is given in memory of the late Capt. Schuneman, known as the Christmas tree man, who went down with his cargo of trees last year. The tree is 35 feet high, mounted on a 40 foot base and illumined with electric lights. Mrs. Schuneman and her daughter are carrying on the business and selling Christmas trees at the usual place on Clark street.

Visitors: Michael Rochlan, Sioux City, Iowa; Wm. Flynn, Columbus, Ohio; Agnes Rigden, Ottawa, Ill.; Paul Palos, Little Rock, Ark.; W. S. Jackson, Racine, Wis.; O. O. Schrock, Ligonier, Ind.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

Dennis T. Connor is "down and out," that is to say, he is down to the parlor and out of bed. We may therefore hope to see his genial face in our midst again very soon.

Edwin Lonsdale writes from Pasa Robla, Cal., where he has been taking the waters, that his health is much improved and he expects to be back on the Burpee farms at Lompoc again very soon. He has had a tough time of it all summer.

Visitor: J. E. Keller, representing William Rennie, Toronto, Canada.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON At present writing (Wednesday, the 24th), the market situation is such that the final Christmas story for this neighborhood is no conjecture. The counters in the market stalls are heaped with unsold flowers, in which carnations, roses, lilies and other bulbous flowers, poinsettias and stevia predominate. In truth, the quantity of unsold material hanging fire on all sides would, a few years ago, have come pretty near supplying the entire local Christmas demand. The wholesale houses still doing a shipping trade are in better shape, having relieved themselves and the market of a very large amount of material at the first of the week. The flowers which have cleaned up at regulation figures and have made a satisfactory record are single violets, gardenias, sweet peas and cattleyas. Of the last named there are a good many left over, but the quality is such that the reason for rejection is evident. The plant trade has been quite brisk, but there are many azaleas still seeking a buyer, the moderate weather having hastened them along faster than usual.

BUFFALO There has not been much doing in the cut flower line for the past two weeks, though sales ran good on holly and other decorative material. The supply on many lines has shortened especially on roses from local growers, the weather having been very cloudy. Carnations were enough to supply all and have been cleaned up daily. There have been too many white and not enough colored. Other stock has been in good supply. The holiday rush is on this week and indications point for a good trade. Plants are coming into the market in quantity which no doubt will have an influence on the sale of cut material, should prices rule too high.

The city is flooded with artificial material and even the Main street merchants are filled with it to the exclusion, largely of growing plants or cut flowers.

CHICAGO Business was comparatively quiet all the week preceding Christmas week and the general air of preparation prevailed the market. There was little unusual to mark the days for even Saturday did not see the usual week-end stir. Some houses are still regarding the possible supply of stock for Christmas week as doubtful in quantity, though, at this writing, Dec. 22, there seems enough to fill orders for the day. What the two following days will bring in the way of cut flowers it is hard to predict, and no good would be gained thereby either. There are very few chrysanthemums, the great bulk of stock being roses and carnations with violets, lily of the valley, lilies, paper whites, cut poinsettia and stevia to help out. In green the demand is very active. Holly is holding firm with nothing extra to be said as to quality and much is very poor. Enormous quantities of mistletoe is in the market and remarkably full of berries. It looks now as if there was more than could be sold. Evergreen held its own at eight and nine dollars per case and is mostly sold out. Christmas trees are not so plentiful as usual, owing to the oversupply last year which left quantities unsold. Wreathing is pretty well sold out.

CINCINNATI The latter part of last week and the first day of this week the buyers took things rather easy. They seemed to be resting on their oars and awaiting developments. Not many of them have placed heavy orders, but are inclined to wait and see what stock comes in in the hope that there will be a break in the market. The prices asked are the usual

Christmas prices. In some instances they are as high as 200 per cent over the price that ruled for the fortnight previous to Christmas. The season for Yuletide supplies and greens has been one of the best, if not the best, that this market has ever had. Nearly all the ruscus and red immortelles in the market were cleaned up while boxwood sold up to expectations. The florists did not go in for holly as strong as in other years. The early supply came in during the warm weather and when within a fortnight of Christmas the demand for this decorative material become strong, the amount on hand was rather limited and prices soared. Toward the end of last week and the first of this week, heavy shipments came in that brought down the prices in some instances to $4.00 a crate for good stock. White and pink roses are in good supply. Richmonds are very nearly off crop. American Beauties, too, are rather short, but are expected to be in good supply for New Year's. The supply of carnations is, with the exception of red, good.

NEW YORK

When our readers peruse these lines, Christmas will have passed into history, and it will, therefore serve no good purpose to try to tell the outlook or sum up the business prospects for the great holiday. So we shall say very little about it. One thing is evident—there is no lack of fine material in flowers and plants, hence no justification for advancing prices. As compared with previous years American Beauty roses are freely offered in advance at about one-half of established Christmas quotations heretofore and another exceptional condition is the utter demoralization of the violet market. This flower, once so dictatorial, counts for practically nothing in the trade of this city today. The unprecedented extent to which the wearing of artificial corsage flowers is being carried this season is perhaps, partially responsible. The demand for Christmas, naturally, leans strongly to red, and Richmond roses, scarlet carnations, etc., are in the lead, with all white material dragging badly. French trumpet narcissi are already in. Asparagus sprays are suddenly on the scarce side. Daphne odora (at John Young's) is a sterling novelty, for, although a very old favorite because of its sweetness, it is now rarely seen in the market. Roman hyacinths are in quality the best offered in several years and they sell at about double the price of paper white narcissi.

PHILADELPHIA

This is Christmas Monday. Beautiful weather, regular songster-of-the-grovey kind of day. Your correspondent has walked around the wholesale market circles as usual. Said good morning to all the moguls. No answer. Rush by you with their arms out and wild-eyed. Turning down orders. No pointers about state of the market. But you can guess as well as the writer can from the situation described. Plenty of flowers. Prices reasonable. Quality wonderfully good.

ST. LOUIS

The local wholesale markets the last week were able to fill any size order as stock of almost everything was in plenty. The weather has been favorable all week for the production of cut flowers—except California violets. This is a great blow to the violet growers in Kirkwood, where all the local supply come from.

A SILVER WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Millang of Bayside, L. I., N. Y., celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding on Saturday, Dec. 20. The Bayside grill room and hall were hired for the occasion. The hall was beautifully decorated with Christmas green, cut flowers and palms. The decorations were arranged by Thos. Burns, florist, of Flushing. A fine orchestra was on hand for dancing and a cabaret show in the grill room continued all evening. The Wig Club Minstrels, of which Miss Antoinette Millang is leading lady, gave a reproduction of the performance which they had given in Bayside, L. I., a few days ago. Many prominent people attended and every one enjoyed a good time. Mr. and Mrs. Millang were recipients of many costly pieces of silver from their many friends.

HORTICULTURE is pleased to join in the congratulations and extends wishes that Mr. and Mrs. Millang may arrive in due time at their golden wedding anniversary, at which we shall hope to be present.

W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J., sailed on the Mauretania on December 16 for another visit to England to look over his preparations for representation at the Centennial Peace Exposition.

WEED EXTERMINATION.

(Dr. G. E. Stone, in Annual Report of Mass. Agri. Exper. Station.)

The effects of the prevailing winds on plantain seed are often shown in their distribution on lawns. In winter their seed spikes are often found protruding above the snow, and when the snow has a crust the seeds are easily carried long distances, and often land at certain points corresponding with the action of the wind.

Many other weeds, when cut below the surface, will not renew their growth. An asparagus cutter inserted into a handle, is a cheap, practical and easily used tool for cutting roots below the surface.

Frequent applications of fertilizer to lawns is of some service in exterminating weeds. For this reason we have devised a lawn fertilizer spreader, consisting of a holder mounted on rubber-tired wheels, with an opening ¾ of an inch in width which can easily be opened or closed while operating the machine. The spreader is provided with a revolving cylinder which keeps the fertilizer pulverized and in motion. This device was designed to improve upon the clumsier method of hand spreading, and it will spread the fertilizer so evenly and thoroughly that every root can be reached. With its use more fertilizer may be required to completely cover the lawn, but a great deal is gained by the thorough application and even distribution. It is not designed to spread coarse manure, but may be used with pulverized sheep and cow manure and commercial fertilizers.

Besides using pulverized sheep or cow manure in the spring or fall, wood ashes, nitrate of soda, sulfate or muriate of potash may be applied. We have found it well to fertilize in late summer when the grass is losing its vigor, which keeps it growing and in good condition up to the end of the season, and also helps greatly to crowd out undesirable fall weeds.

Weed Seeds in Sheep Manure.

Pulverized sheep and cow manure, while excellent for lawns on account of the large amount of organic matter which they contain, do, like other manures, possess a disadvantage in the undesirable weed seeds often found in them. Most of the pulverized manures comes from the Chicago stock yards, and western seeds are likely to predominate in them. An analysis of pulverized sheep manure shows the following weed seeds in one pound:

Table Showing Number and Kinds of Weed Seeds in One Pound of Pulverized Sheep Manure.

Kind of Seed	Number of Seeds
Ladies' thumb	580
Tumble weed	670
Sorrel	390
Timothy	1,000
Plantain	400
Pigeon and other species	820
Plantago [illegible]	200
Total	4,060

The figures given in this table show the great number of seeds in pulverized sheep manure,—4,060 to 1 pound, which would be equivalent to 406,000 seeds in a 100-pound bag. But this table represents only one analysis, although taken from a typical sample on the market. Some of the seeds named are of little account, while others, like Plantago lanceolata and certain Panicums, often prove noxious. One lawn with which we have experimented, and to which sheep manure was applied freely, became badly contaminated with Plantago lanceolata, which had never been noticed in the lawn before and must have come in with the sheep manure. It was most abundant in the poorest

WORTH READING.

Arthur Ruzicka, writing on "Rose Growing Under Glass," in "Horticulture," November 15, 1913, says:

"We have found that a good spray of FUNGINE will do away with all traces of mildew, and if applied in time will kill it so that many leaves will be saved. This fact is mentioned only for the good of the growers, and not to advertise the article, for this is no place for advertisements. We have so far heard of nothing that can compare with FUNGINE and that is why no other preparation is mentioned."

75c. per quart. $2.00 per gallon.

Have you tried NIKOTIANA and compared it with other nicotines for fumigating? If not, it will prove worth your while doing so, both from the point of efficiency and cost.

$1.50 per quart. $4.50 per gallon.

There is nothing "just as good" as APHINE for greenhouse spraying for all sap sucking insects—VERMINE for the soil to destroy eel, wire and cut worms without injury to vegetation—SCALINE for spraying fruit and ornamental trees NOW against San Jose and other scale, red spider and aphis larva.

part of the lawn. In another case where pulverized sheep manure was used plentifully a remarkable catch of a beautiful little lawn grass growing about 4 inches high and known as Poa annua was found. The seed of this grass cannot be had in the market, and yet it is one of the most desirable lawn grasses, thriving in the shade where other grasses will not. Whether the sheep manure contained the seed, or whether it merely furnished a suitable environment for its development, as does potash or clover, was not learned.

The large amount of organic matter contained in sheep manure makes it an excellent lawn fertilizer, although from the point of view of plant food contained it is more expensive than most chemical fertilizers. Still, we believe that no chemical fertilizer can take its place on lawns. The number of weed seeds it contains is its worst feature. but this might possibly be overcome by some system of sterilization. The application of steam would have a tendency to increase the ammonification and would be a troublesome process, but if the weed seeds could be killed by an application of formaldehyde and potassium permanganate it would be a practical method. Fumigation with this substance will kill onion seed very quickly, but whether it would have the same effect on weed seeds we do not know.

J. H. GREATOREX, Supt.

On the A. C. James Place, at Newport, R. I.

AS good as cameras are these days, it's impossible to convey in a reproduction of this size these carefully laid out and scrupulously kept grounds, so skilfully handled under the direction of J. H. Greatorex, Supt.

Since the photo was taken, we have erected a second parallel house in front of the one shown. The old boiler was extended to heat the new house.

In checking up the greenhouses of Newport recently, we found out that considerably more than half of them had been erected by Hitchings.

Such facts are not only interesting, but convincingly in favor of our construction and business methods.

Some of these very houses are shown in our catalog, which you can have for the asking.

Why It Costs More

IT is not reasonable to think that you can buy an all steel frame for the price of a part steel one.

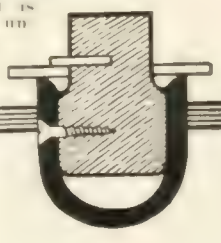
It is not reasonable to think that we can galvanize the steel frame, and not have it cost more than painting it. Still there's not a bit of doubt but that for a perfect job, galvanizing is the thing.

It is not reasonable that we can give the most particular kind of particular attention to every little particular, and not have to charge more than the "slapped together" kind of jobs.

It's not reasonable that we could equip our houses with benches having complete galvanized steel frames, indestructible slate sides and tile bottoms and not have to charge more than if we "knocked off a few dollars" by giving you a less desirable bench.

It's not reasonable to think that you can buy a $40.00 all wool suit of latest style and best linings for the price of a $25.00 suit.

It's not reasonable to be so unreasonable.



If you want a house superior in every way—a house that is acknowledged to be the highest type of greenhouse construction, and one giving greatest efficiency, then you want the U-Bar.

The U-Bar costs more because it's worth more.

Send for catalog — or send for us — or both.
